"High diddle diddle"
Will rank as an idyll,
If I pronounce it chaste!

Ibid. Duet, Bunthorne and Grosvenor

None shall part us from each other,
One in life and death are we:
All in all to one another —

I to thee and thou to me!
Thou the tree and I the flower —

Thou the idol; I the throng —

Thou the day and I the hour —

Thou the singer; I the song!

Iolanthe. Act I, Duet, Strephon
and Phyllis

The Law is the true embodiment
Of everything that's excellent.
It has no kind of fault or flaw,
And I, my Lords, embody the Law.

Here's a pretty kettle of fish!

Ibid. Act II, Peers' Chorus
Did nothing in particular
And did it very well.

Ibid. Lord Mountararat
I love my fellow-creatures — I do all the good I can —

Yet everybody says I'm such a disagreeable man!

And I can't think why!

Song

Darwinian Man, though well-behaved,
At best is only a monkey shaved!

Princess Ida. Act II,

Psyche's Song

As some day it may happen that a victim must be found,

I've got a little list — I've got a little list.

Of society offenders who might well be under ground,

And who never would be missed — who never would be missed.

The Mikado. Act I, KoKo's Song

The people who eat peppermint and puff it in your face.

Ibid.

The idiot who praises, with enthusiastic tone,

All centuries but this, and every country but his own.

Ibid.

Here's a pretty state of things!

Here's a pretty how-de-do.

Ibid. Duet, Yum Yum and

Nanki-Poo

My object all sublime

I shall achieve in time —

To let the punishment fit the crime.

Ibid. Mikado's Song

"Is it weakness of intellect, birdie?" I cried,

"Or a rather tough worm in your little inside?"

With a shake of his poor little head he replied,

"Oh, Willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

Ibid. Act II, KoKo's Song

Hail the Bridegroom — hail the Bride!

When the nuptial knot is tied.

Ruddigore. Act I, Chorus of Bridesmaids

He led his regiment from behind —

He found it less exciting.

The Gondoliers. Act I,

Duke of Plaza-Toro

No soldier in that gallant band

Hid half as well as he did.

He lay concealed throughout the war,

And this preserved his gore, O!

Ibid.

Of that there is no manner of doubt —

No probable, possible shadow of doubt —

No possible doubt whatever.

The Gondoliers. Act I,

Don Alhambra's Song

Life's a pudding full of plums;

Care's a canker that benumbs,

Wherefore waste our elocution

On impossible solution?

Life's a pleasant institution,

Let us take it as it comes!

Ibid. Life's Tangled Skein

Life's perhaps the only riddle

That we shrink from giving up.

Ibid.

The gratifying feeling that our duty has been done.

Ibid. Giuseppe's Song

Go search the world and search the sea,

Then come you home and sing with me

There's no such gold and no such pearl

As a bright and beautiful English girl!

Utopia Limited. Act II,

Mr. Goldbury's Song

Here they come, the couple plighted —

On life's journey gaily start them.

Soon to be for aye united,

Till divorce or death shall part them.

The Grand Duke. Act I, Chorus

Old wine is a true panacea

For ev'ry conceivable ill,

When you cherish the soothing idea

That somebody else pays the bill!

Ibid. Act II, Baroness' Song

Quixotic is his enterprise and hopeless

his adventure is,

Who seeks for jocularities that haven't yet been said.

The world has joked incessantly for over fifty centuries,

And every joke that's possible has long ago been made.

FITZHUGH LUDLOW
 [1836-1870]

When we want, we have for our pains
 The promise that if we but wait

Till the want has burnt out of our brains,
 Every means shall be present to sate;
 While we wait for the napkin, the soup gets cold,
 While the bonnet is trimming, the face grows old,
 When we've matched our buttons, the pattern is sold,
 And everything comes too late — too late.

[1836-1901]

I believe if I should die
And you should kiss my eyelids when I lie
Cold, dead, and dumb to all the world contains,
The folded orbs would open at thy

And, from its exile in the isles of death, Life would come gladly back along my veins.

Creed. Stanza 1

To every life there comes a time su-

After an existence of nearly twenty years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.

Message [March 1, 1886]

<sup>1</sup> The familiar saying "Public office is a public trust" seems to have been paraphrased from various campaign speeches by Cleveland in 1884.

When more of the people's sustenance is exacted through the form of taxation than is necessary to meet the just obligations of Government and expenses of its economical administration, such exaction becomes ruthless extortion and a violation of the fundamental principles of a free Government.

Second Annual Message
[December, 1886]

It is a condition which confronts us — not a theory.<sup>1</sup>

Third Annual Message
[December 6, 1887]

The lessons of paternalism ought to be unlearned and the better lesson taught that while the people should patriotically and cheerfully support their Government, its functions do not include the support of the people.

Inaugural Address [March 4, 1893]
I have tried so hard to do the right.

[April 6, 1903] (Life in Letters,
Vol. II, Page 171)

I am not sorry for having wrought in common, crude material so much; that is the right American stuff; and perhaps hereafter, when my din is done, if any one is curious to know what that noise was, it will be found to have proceeded from a small insect which was scraping about on the surface of our life and trying to get into its meaning for the sake of the other insects larger or smaller. That is, such has been my unconscious work; consciously, I was always, as I still am, trying to fashion a piece of literature out of the life next at hand.

Letter to Charles Eliot Norton

[1837-1887]

I am a good old rebel —

Yes; that's just what I am —
And for this land of freedom

I do not give a dam'.

I'm glad I fit agin 'em,
And I only wish we'd won;

And I don't ax no pardon
For anything I've done.

Laus Veneris. Stanza 3

Ah yet would God this flesh of mine might be

Where air might wash and long leaves cover me,

Where tides of grass break into foam of flowers,

Or where the wind's feet shine along the sea.

Ibid. Stanza 14

And lo, between the sundawn and the sun,

His day's work and his night's work
are undone;

And lo, between the nightfall and the light,

He is not, and none knoweth of such an one.

Ibid. Stanza 19

O sad kissed mouth, how sorrowful it is!

Ibid. Stanza 79

To have known love, how bitter a thing it is.

Ibid. Stanza 103

There will no man do for your sake, I
think,

What I would have done for the least word said.

I had wrung life dry for your lips to drink,
Broken it up for your daily bread.

The Triumph of Time. Stanza 12

I wish we were dead together to-day, Lost sight of, hidden away out of sight,
Clasped and clothed in the cloven clay,
Out of the world's way, out of the light.

Ibid. Stanza 15

At the door of life, by the gate of breath,
There are worse things waiting for men than death.

Ibid. Stanza 20

I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.

Ibid. Stanza 33

There lived a singer in France of old,
By the tideless dolorous midland sea.
In a land of sand and ruin and gold
There shone one woman, and none but she.

And finding life for her love's sake fail,
Being fain to see her, he bade set sail,
Touched land, and saw her as life grew cold,
And praised God, seeing; and so died
he.

Ibid. Stanza 41

O brother, the gods were good to you.
Sleep, and be glad while the world endures.

Be well content as the years wear
through;
Give thanks for life, and the loves and lures.

Ibid. Stanza 43

I shall never be friends again with roses;
I shall loathe sweet tunes.

Ibid. Stanza 45

Marvellous mercies and infinite love.

Les Noyades. Stanza 1

I am sick of singing; the bays burn deep and chafe: I am fain
To rest a little from praise and grievous pleasure and pain.

Hymn to Proserpine: After the Proclamation in Rome of the Christian Faith

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; the world has grown grey from thy breath;

We have drunken of things Lethean, and fed on the fulness of death.

Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;

But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.

Sleep, shall we sleep after all? for the world is not sweet in the end;

For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend.

Hymn to Proserpine: Ibid.

I shall die as my fathers died, and sleep
as they sleep; even so.

For the glass of the years is brittle wherein we gaze for a span.

Ibid.

For there is no God found stronger than death; and death is a sleep.

Ibid.

If you loved me ever so little,
I could bear the bonds that gall,
I could dream the bonds were brittle;
You do not love me at all.

Satia te Sanguine. Stanza 1

While he lives let a man be glad,
For none hath joy of his death.

A Lamentation. 1, 4

If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,
Our lives would grow together
In sad or singing weather.

A Match. Stanza 1

If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May.

Ibid. Stanza 5

If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain,
We'd hunt down love together,
Pluck out his flying feather,
And teach his feet a measure,
And find his mouth a rein.

Ibid. Stanza 6

For in the time we know not of Did fate begin
Weaving the web of days that wove
Your doom, Faustine.

Faustine. Stanza 24

A love machine
With clockwork joints of supple gold —
No more, Faustine.

Faustine. Stanza 36

Take hand and part with laughter;
Touch lips and part with tears;
Once more and no more after,
Whatever comes with years.

Rococo. Stanza 1

Forget that I remember,
And dream that I forget.

Ibid. Stanza 2

The burden of long living. Thou shalt fear

Waking, and sleeping mourn upon thy bed;

And say at night "Would God the day were here,"

And say at dawn "Would God the day were dead."<sup>1</sup>

A Ballad of Burdens. Stanza 4

For life is sweet, but after life is death.

This is the end of every man's desire.

Ibid. L'Envoy

O love, O lover, loose or hold me fast,
I had thee first, whoever have thee last.

Erotion

I shall remember while the light lives yet.

And in the night-time I shall not forget.
Though (as thou wilt) thou leave me
ere life leave,

I will not, for thy love I will not, grieve.

Ibid.

O wise among women, and wisest,
Our Lady of Pain.

Dolores. Stanza 5

Despair the twin-born of devotion.

Ibid. Stanza 14

I have passed from the outermost portal
To the shrine where a sin is a prayer.

Ibid. Stanza 17

What ailed us, O gods, to desert you
For creeds that refuse and restrain?
Come down and redeem us from virtue,
Our Lady of Pain.

Ibid. Stanza 35

<sup>1</sup> In the morning thou shalt say, Would God
it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see. —
Deuteronomy, XXVIII, 67

Then love was the pearl of his oyster,
And Venus rose red out of wine.

Dolores. Stanza 39

Time stoops to no man's lure;
And love, grown faint and fretful,
With lips but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
Weeps that no loves endure.

The Garden of Proserpine.

Stanza 10

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be
That no life lives forever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.

Ibid. Stanza 11

The sweetest name that ever love
Waxed weary of.

Félice. Stanza 18

Ah that such sweet things should be fleet,

Such fleet things sweet!

Ibid. Stanza 22

Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
The bluest of things grey.

Ibid. Stanza 24

Eyes colored like a water-flower,
And deeper than the green sea's glass;

Eyes that remember one sweet hour —
In vain we swore it should not pass.

Ibid. Stanza 36

Two gifts perforce he has given us yet, Though sad things stay and glad things fly;

Two gifts he has given us, to forget
All glad and sad things that go by,
And then to die.

Ibid. Stanza 56

We know not whether death be good,
But life at least it will not be:
Men will stand saddening as we stood,
Watch the same fields and skies as we
And the same sea.

Ibid. Stanza 57

Live and let live, as I will do,
Love and let love, and so will I.
But, sweet, for me no more with you:

Not while I live, not though I die.
Good-night, good-bye.

Félice. Stanza 59

I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted

And knew we should both forget.

An Interlude. Stanza 11

And the best and the worst of this is
That neither is most to blame,
If you have forgotten my kisses
And I have forgotten your name.

Ibid. Stanza 14

By the waters of Babylon we sat down and wept,

Remembering thee.

Stanza 1

A creed is a rod,

And a crown is of night;

But this thing is God,

To be man with thy might,

To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit, and to live out thy life as the light.

Herttha. Stanza 15

In the grey beginning of years, in the twilight of things that began,

The word of the earth in the ears of the world, was it God? was it man?

Hymn of Man

O strong-winged soul with prophetic

Lips hot with the bloodbeats of song,

With tremor of heartstrings magnetic,

With thoughts as thunders in throng.

To Walt Whitman in America.

Stanza 3

Ask nothing more of me, sweet,

All I can give you I give;

Heart of my heart, were it more,

More would be laid at your feet:

Love that should help you to live,

Song that should spur you to soar.

The Oblation. Stanza 1

Poor splendid wings so frayed and soiled and torn!

A Ballad of François Villon.

Stanza 3

Many loves of many a mood and many a kind

Fill the life of man, and mould the secret mind.

Erechtheus

For the shades are about us that hover
When darkness is half withdrawn,
And the skirts of the dead night cover
The face of the live new dawn.

The Last Oracle

Is the sun yet cast out of heaven?

Is the song yet cast out of man?

Life that had song for its leaven

To quicken the blood that ran.

Ibid.

Out of heaven they shall cast not the day,

They shall cast not out song from the world.

Ibid.

In a coign of the cliff between lowland and highland,

At the sea-down's edge between windward and lee,

Walled round with rocks as an inland island,

The ghost of a garden fronts the sea.<sup>1</sup>

The Forsaken Garden. Stanza 1

The year of the rose is brief;

From the first blade blown to the sheaf,

From the thin green leaf to the gold,

It has time to be sweet and grow old.

The Year of the Rose. Stanza 1

A rain and ruin of roses

Over the red rose-land.

Ibid. Stanza 9

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces.

Atalanta in Calydon. Chorus

For winter's rains and ruins are over,

And all the season of snows and sins;

The days dividing lover and lover,

The light that loses, the night that wins.

Ibid.

Before the beginning of years

There came to the making of man

Time with a gift of tears,

Grief with a glass that ran.

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> On the grass of the cliff, at the edge of the steep,

God planted a garden, a garden of sleep.

CLEMENT W. SCOTT [1841-1904]: The Garden of Sleep (Cromer, England)

He weaves, and is clothed with derision;
Sows, and he shall not reap;
His life is a watch or a vision
Between a sleep and a sleep.

Atalanta in Calydon. Chorus

A little while and I shall laugh; and then
I shall weep never and laugh not any more.

Ibid.

And through the trumpet of a child of Rome
Rang the pure music of the flutes of Greece.

Song for the Centenary of Walter Savage Landor.

Stanza 17

No sweeter thing than children's ways
and wiles, Surely, we say, can gladden eyes and ears:
Yet sometimes sweeter than their words or smiles
Are even their tears.

A Child's Pity. Stanza 1

All the bells of heaven may ring,
All the birds of heaven may sing,
All the wells on earth may spring,
All the winds on earth may bring
All sweet sounds together.

A Child's Laughter. Stanza 1

Faith in faith established evermore
Stands a sea-mark in the tides of time.

A Sea-Mark. Stanza 5

Not with dreams, but with blood and with iron,
Shall a nation be moulded to last.

A Word for the Country. Stanza 13

Is not Precedent indeed a King of men?

A Word from the Psalmist. Stanza 4

Stately, kindly, lordly friend
Condescend

Here to sit by me.

To a Cat

There is no help for these things;
none to mend,
And none to mar; not all our songs,
O friend,
Will make death clear or make life durable.

Ave atque Vale: In Memory of Charles Baudelaire. Stanza 16

A little soul scarce fledged for earth
Takes wing with heaven again for goal Even while we hailed as fresh from birth

A little soul.

A Baby's Death. I, 1

Who knows but on their sleep may rise
Such light as never heaven let through
To lighten earth from Paradise?

Ibid. IV, 2

A baby's feet, like sea-shells pink,
Might tempt, should heaven see meet,
An angel's lips to kiss, we think,
A baby's feet.

Étude Réaliste. I, 1

The sweetest flowers in all the world —
A baby's hands.

Ibid. II, 3

All our past acclaims our future: Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand, Milton's faith and Wordsworth's trust in this our chosen and chainless
land,
Bear as witness: come the world against her, England yet shall stand.

England, An Ode. II, 5

Shelley, lyric lord of England's lordliest singers, here first heard Ring from lips of poets crowned and dead the Promethean word Whence his soul took fire, and power to outsoar the sunward-soaring bird.

Eton, An Ode. III

Body and spirit are twins: God only knows which is which.

The Higher Pantheism in a Nutshell (Imitation of Tennyson).

Stanza 7

God, whom we see not, is: and God, who is not, we see:

Fiddle, we know, is diddle: and diddle,
we take it, is dee.

Ibid. Stanza 12

The most BEAUT—iful babbie ever beheld by mortal eyes.

*Quoted by MAX BEERBOHM, in
No. 2, The Pines*

It is long since Mr. Carlyle expressed his opinion that if any poet or other literary creature could really be "killed off by one critique" or many, the sooner he was so despatched the better; a sentiment in which I for one humbly but heartily concur.

Under the Microscope

A blatant Bassarid of Boston, a rampant Maenad of Massachusetts.

Ibid.

To wipe off the froth of falsehood from the foaming lips of inebriated virtue, when fresh from the sexless orgies of morality and reeling from the delirious riot of religion, may doubtless be a charitable office.

Ibid.

The more congenial page of some tenth-rate poeticule worn out with failure after failure and now squat in his hole like the tailless fox, he is curled up to snarl and whimper beneath the inaccessible vine of song.

Ibid.

The tadpole poet will never grow into anything bigger than a frog; not though in that stage of development he should puff and blow himself till he bursts with windy adulation at the heels of the laureled ox.

Ibid.

FORCEYTHE WILLSON

[1837-1867]

And I heard a Bugle sounding, as from some celestial Tower;

And the same mysterious voice said:
"It is the Eleventh Hour!

Orderly Sergeant — Robert Burton —

The Old Sergeant.<sup>1</sup> Stanza 9

HENRY BROOKS ADAMS

[1838-1918]

Accident counts for much in companionship as in marriage.

The Education of Henry Adams.

Forceythe Willson, whose poem of "The Old Sergeant" Doctor Holmes used to read publicly in the closing year of the civil war, was of a Western altitude of figure, and of an extraordinary beauty of face in an oriental sort. — W. D. HOWELLS: Literary Friends and Acquaintance, Part VIII, Chap. 8

Women have, commonly, a very positive moral sense; that which they will, is right; that which they reject, is wrong; and their will, in most cases, ends by settling the moral.

The Education of Henry Adams.

Chap. 6

All experience is an arch, to build upon.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

Only on the edge of the grave can man conclude anything.

Ibid.

Although the Senate is much given to admiring in its members a superiority less obvious or quite invisible to outsiders, one Senator seldom proclaims his own inferiority to another, and still more seldom likes to be told of it.

Ibid. Chap. 7

Friends are born, not made.

Ibid.

A friend in power is a friend lost.

Ibid. (Also in Chap. 16)

The effect of power and publicity on all men is the aggravation of self, a sort of tumor that ends by killing the victim's sympathies.

Ibid. Chap. 10

Young men have a passion for regarding their elders as senile.

Ibid. Chap. 11

Knowledge of human nature is the beginning and end of political education.

Ibid. Chap. 12

These questions of taste, of feeling, of inheritance, need no settlement. Everyone carries his own inch-rule of taste, and amuses himself by applying it, triumphantly, wherever he travels.

Ibid.

Intimates are predestined.

Ibid. Chap. 13

His first struggle with a sleeping-car made him doubt the value — to him — of a Pullman civilization.

<sup>1</sup> Yet all experience is an arch wherethrough Gleams that untraveled world.

TENNYSON: Ulysses

Chaos often breeds life, when order breeds habit.

The Education of Henry Adams.
Chap. 16

At best, the renewal of broken relations is a nervous matter.

Ibid.

Sumner's<sup>1</sup> mind had reached the calm of water which receives and reflects images without absorbing them; it contained nothing but itself.

Ibid.

The difference is slight, to the influence of an author, whether he is read by five hundred readers, or by five hundred thousand; if he can select the five hundred, he reaches the five hundred thousand.

Ibid. Chap. 17

The newspaper-man is, more than most men, a double personality; and his person feels best satisfied in its double instincts when writing in one sense and thinking in another.

Ibid.

A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops.

Ibid. Chap. 20

One friend in a lifetime is much: two are many; three are hardly possible. Friendship needs a certain parallelism of life, a community of thought, a rivalry of aim.

Ibid.

What one knows is, in youth, of little moment; they know enough who know how to learn.

Ibid. Chap. 21

He had often noticed that six months' oblivion amounts to newspaper-death, and that resurrection is rare. Nothing is easier, if a man wants it, than rest, profound as the grave.

Ibid. Chap. 22

Morality is a private and costly luxury.

Ibid.

Nothing is more tiresome than a superannuated pedagogue.

Ibid. Chap. 23

The study of history is useful to the historian by teaching him his ignorance of women. . . . The woman who is known only through a man is known wrong.

The Education of Henry Adams.
Chap. 23

He too serves a certain purpose who only stands and cheers.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 24

Practical politics consists in ignoring facts.

Ibid.

Nothing in education is so astonishing as the amount of ignorance it accumulates in the form of inert facts.

Ibid. Chap. 25

Power when wielded by abnormal energy is the most serious of facts.

Ibid. Chap. 28

Those who seek education in the paths of duty are always deceived by the illusion that power in the hands of friends is an advantage to them.

Ibid.

Power is poison. Its effect on Presidents had been always tragic, chiefly as an almost insane excitement at first, and a worse reaction afterwards; but also because no mind is so well balanced as to bear the strain of seizing unlimited force without habit or knowledge of it; and finding it disputed with him by hungry packs of wolves and hounds whose lives depend on snatching the carrion.

Ibid.

A certain chronic irritability — a sort of Bostonitis — which, in its primitive Puritan forms, seemed due to knowing too much of his neighbors and thinking too much of himself.

Ibid.

Modern politics is, at bottom, a struggle not of men but of forces.

Ibid.

We combat obstacles in order to get repose, and, when got, the repose is insupportable.

<sup>1</sup> And if I should lose, let me stand by the road

And cheer as the winners go by!

BERTON BRALEY: Prayer of a Sportsman

<sup>1</sup> Charles Sumner [1811-1874].

Simplicity is the most deceitful mistress that ever betrayed man.

The Education of Henry Adams.
Chap. 30

No one means all he says, and yet very few say all they mean, for words are slippery and thought is viscous.

Ibid. Chap. 31

The movement from unity into multiplicity, between 1200 and 1900, was unbroken in sequence, and rapid in acceleration. Prolonged one generation longer, it would require a new social mind.

Ibid. Chap. 34
(A Law of Acceleration)

Even in America, the Indian Summer of life should be a little sunny and a little sad, like the season, and infinite in wealth and depth of tone — but never hustled.

Ibid. Chap. 35

Perhaps some day — say 1938, their centenary — . . . they would find a world that sensitive and timid natures could regard without a shudder.

Ibid. Closing words

JOSEPH ASHBY-STERRY

[1838-1917]

When the glass is at ninety a man is a fool

Who directs not his efforts to try to keep cool.

Ninety in the Shade

Half-hidden in its grassy bed
You'll find that slender silver thread —
The tiny Thames; which, here set free,
Begins its journey to the sea!

The Source of the Thames

The ruddy ripe tomato
In china bowl of ice,
And grouse worth a sonata
Undoubtedly are nice.

The Riparian Philosopher

It's much too hot for reason,
And far too warm for rhyme.

Ibid.

There are people, I'm told — some say there are heaps —

Who speak of the talkative Samuel as Peeps;

And some so precise and pedantic their step is,

Who call the delightful old diarist
Pepys;

But those I think right, and I follow their steps,

Ever mention the garrulous gossip as Pepys.

[1838-1922]

The greatest liberty that man has taken with Nature.

South America [Of the Panama Canal]

What you want [in Washington] is to have a city which every one who comes from Maine, Texas, Florida, Arkansas, or Oregon can admire as being something finer and more beautiful than he had ever dreamed of before; something which makes him even more proud to be an American.

The Nation's Capital<sup>2</sup>

You have never sufficiently foreseen how enormously rich and populous a nation you are going to be.

Ibid.

Medicine, the only profession that labours incessantly to destroy the reason for its own existence.

*Address at dinner for General
W. C. Gorgas [March 23, 1914]*

To most people nothing is more troublesome than the effort of thinking.

Studies in History and Jurisprudence, Vol. 2, Page 7

GEORGE COOPER

[1838-1927]

October gave a party;

The leaves by hundreds came:

The ashes, oaks, and maples,

And those of every name.

After the shower, the tranquil sun;
 After the snow, the emerald leaves;
 Silver stars when the day is done;
 After the harvest, golden sheaves.

After. Stanza 1

Brave your storm with firm endeavor,
 Let your vain repinings go!
 Hopeful hearts will find forever
 Roses underneath the snow!

*Roses Underneath the Snow.
 Stanza 1*

Sweet Genevieve,
 The days may come, the days may go,
 But still the hands of memory weave
 The blissful dreams of long ago.

Sweet Genevieve

GEORGE DEWEY

[1838-1917]

You may fire when ready, Gridley.
*At battle of Manila Bay
 [May 1, 1898]*

I am convinced that the office of the President is not such a very difficult one to fill, his duties being mainly to execute the laws of Congress.

Interview in The New York World, April 4, 1900

MARY ABIGAIL DODGE

("GAIL HAMILTON")

[1838-1896]

Whatever an author puts between the two covers of his book is public property; whatever of himself he does not put there is his private property, as much as if he had never written a word.

Country Living and Country Thinking. Preface

The moment an audacious head is lifted one inch above the general level, pop! goes the unerring rifle of some biographical sharpshooter, and it is all over with the unhappy owner.

Skirmishes and Sketches. The New School of Biography

What's virtue in man can't be vice in a cat.

Both Sides

MARY MAPES DODGE

[1838-1905]

Grandma told me all about it,
 Told me, so I couldn't doubt it,
 How she danced — my Grandma danced! —

Long ago.

The Minuet. Stanza 1

Whimpy, little Whimpy,
 Cried so much one day,
 His grandma couldn't stand it,
 And his mother ran away.

Little Whimpy. Stanza 1

Whenever a snowflake leaves the sky,
 It turns and turns to say "Good-by!
 Good-by, dear clouds, so cool and gray!"

Then lightly travels on its way.

Snowflakes

Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be;

Yet oh, how sweet it is to us, this life
 we live and see!

The Two Mysteries. Stanza 3

But I believe that God is overhead;
 And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

KATE FIELD

[1838-1896]

My faithful cavalier,
 At dusk he draweth near,
 To wait outside my wicket.
 I hear him draw his bow,
 He playeth soft and low,
 My dusky little cricket.

My Serenade. Stanza 3

They talk about a woman's sphere as though it had a limit;
 There's not a place in earth or heaven,
 There's not a task to mankind given,
 There's not a blessing or a woe,
 There's not a whispered "yes" or "no,"
 There's not a life, or death, or birth,
 That has a feather's weight of worth
 Without a woman in it.

[1838-1905]

A keerness man in his talk was Jim,
And an awkward hand in a row,
He never flunked, and he never lied, —
I reckon he never knowed how.

Jim Bludso

"I'll hold her nozzel agin the bank
Till the last galoot's ashore."

Ibid.

And they all had trust in his cussedness,
And knowed he would keep his word.

Ibid.

He weren't no saint — but at jedgment
I'd run my chance with Jim,
Longside of some pious gentlemen
That wouldn't shook hands with him.
He seen his duty, a dead-sure thing, —
And went for it thar and then;
And Christ ain't a-going to be too hard
On a man that died for men.

Ibid.

I don't go much on religion,
I never ain't had no show;
But I've got a middlin' tight grip, sir,
On the handful o' things I know.
I don't pan out on the prophets And free-will, and that sort of thing, —
But I b'lieve in God and the angels
Ever sence one night last spring.

Little Breeches

And I think that saving a little child,
And foting him to his own,
Is a derned sight better business
Than loafing around The Throne.

Ibid.

He trumped Death's ace for me that
day,
And I'm not goin' back on him!

Banty Tim

He was hard on women and rough on his friends;
And he didn't have many, I'll let you know.

Golyer

But I never seed nothing that could or can Jest get all the good from the heart of a man
Like the hands of a little child.

Golyer

The King will be well if he sleeps one night

In the Shirt of a Happy Man.

The Enchanted Shirt.<sup>1</sup> Part 1

"An idle man has so much to do
That he never has time to be sad."

Ibid. Part 2

"I would do it, God wot," and he roared with the fun,

"But I haven't a shirt to my back."

Ibid.

The night comes down, the lights burn
blue;

And at my door the Pale Horse stands,<sup>2</sup>
To bear me forth to unknown lands.

The Stirrup Cup

Bring me to-night a lotus tied With thread from a house where none has died.<sup>3</sup>

The Law of Death

There stands not by the Ganges' side
A house where none hath ever died.

Ibid.

I know not what this man may be,
Sinner or saint; but as for me,
One thing I know, — that I am he
Who once was blind, and now I see.<sup>4</sup>

Religion and Doctrine

Good Luck is the gayest of all gay girls,
Long in one place she will not stay, Back from your brow she strokes the curls,
Kisses you quick and flies away.

<sup>1</sup> See Sir Walter Scott, page 309.<sup>2</sup> A pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death. — Revelation, VI, 8<sup>3</sup> "A grain of mustard-seed," the sage replied,

"Found where none old or young has ever died,
Will cure the pain you carry in your side."

JOHN WHITE CHADWICK:

Buddha's Lesson

<sup>4</sup> Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not:
one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind,
now I see. — John, IX, 25

<sup>1</sup> It is strange how the memory of a man may float to posterity on what he would have himself regarded as the most trifling of his works. — SIR WILLIAM OSLER, quoted by HARVEY CUSHING: Life of Sir William Osler,
Vol. II, Chap. 31, P. 301

But Madame Bad Luck soberly comes . . .

And sits by your bed, and brings her knitting.

Good and Bad Luck (After Heine)

There are three species of creatures who when they seem coming are going,
When they seem going they come:
Diplomats, women, and crabs.

Distichs. II

When you break up housekeeping, you learn the extent of your treasures.

Ibid. IX

Who would succeed in the world should be wise in the use of his pronouns.

Utter the You twenty times, where you once utter the I.

Ibid. XIII

True luck consists not in holding the best of the cards at the table:

Luckiest he who knows just when to rise and go home.

Ibid. XV

Try not to beat back the current, yet be not drowned in its waters;

Speak with the speech of the world, think with the thoughts of the few.

Ibid. XVII

GEORGE WASHINGTON

JOHNSON

[1838-1917]

I wandered to-day to the hill, Maggie,
To watch the scene below,
The creek and the creaking old mill,
Maggie,<sup>1</sup>

As we used to, long ago.

*When You and I Were Young,
Maggie. Stanza 1*

To me you're as fair as you were, Maggie,

When you and I were young.

Ibid. Stanza 3

WILLIAM EDWARD

HARTPOLE LECKY

[1838-1903]

Offspring of an idle hour,
Whence has come thy lasting power?

On an Old Song

<sup>1</sup> The mill was situated on the bank of Twenty Mile Creek, Glanford, Ontario, Canada. It is now owned by Henry Ford.

The stately ship is seen no more,
The fragile skiff attains the shore;
And while the great and wise decay,
And all their trophies pass away,
Some sudden thought, some careless rhyme,
Still floats above the wrecks of Time.
On an Old Song

EMMA A. LENT

[Floruit 1885]

They said, "The Master is coming
To honor the town to-day,
And none can tell at whose house or home

The Master will choose to stay." And I thought, while my heart beat wildly,

What if He should come to mine?
How would I strive to entertain
And honor the Guest divine?

The Master Is Coming

GEORGE LEYBOURNE

[? -1884]

He'd fly through the air with the greatest of ease,

This handsome young man on the fly-

His movements were graceful, all girls
he could please,

And my love he purloined away!

The most frightful idea that has ever corroded human nature — the idea of eternal punishment.

Vauvenargues

Where it is a duty to worship the sun it is pretty sure to be a crime to examine the laws of heat.

Voltaire

A man will already be in no mean Paradise if at the hour of sunset a ray of good hope may fall upon him like harmonies of music.

Ibid.

Simplicity of character is no hindrance to subtlety of intellect.

Life of Gladstone

Every man of us has all the centuries in him.

Life of Gladstone

Great economic and social forces flow with a tidal sweep over communities that are only half conscious of that which is befalling them. Wise statesmen are those who foresee what time is thus bringing, and endeavor to shape institutions and to mold men's thought and purpose in accordance with the change that is silently surrounding them.

Closing paragraph

There are some books which cannot be adequately reviewed for twenty or thirty years after they come out.

Recollections. Vol. I, Book 2, Chap. 8

The proper memory for a politician is one that knows what to remember and what to forget.

Ibid. Vol. II, Book 4, Chap. 2

Men bound to make their watches keep time in two longitudes at once.

Ibid. Book 5, Chap. 1

In my creed, waste of public money is like the sin against the Holy Ghost.

Ibid. Chap. 3

Success depends on three things: who says it, what he says, how he says it; and of these three things, what he says is the least important.

Ibid. Chap. 4

Excess of severity is not the path to order. On the contrary, it is the path to the bomb.

Ibid.

MOSES OWEN

[1838-1878]

Nothing but flags! but simple flags,
Tattered and torn and hanging in rags;
And we walk beneath them with careless tread,
Nor think of the hosts of the mighty dead

Who have marched beneath them in days gone by.

EDNA DEAN PROCTOR

[1838-1923]

The rose may bloom for England,

The lily for France unfold;

Ireland may honor the shamrock,

Scotland her thistle bold;

But the shield of the great Republic,

The glory of the West,

Shall bear a stalk of the tasselled corn —

The sun's supreme bequest!

Columbia's Emblem

Good-night! and sweetest dreams be thine

Through all their shining way,

Till darkness goes, and bird and rose

With rapture greet the day.

Good-Night. Stanza 6

The authorship of the poem has been ascribed to Thomas J. Worthen, of Little Rock, Arkansas. Earlier the poem had been credited to Albert Pike, who denied that he had either written or claimed the poem.

MARGARET ELIZABETH SANGSTER

[1838-1912]

I know — yet my arms are empty,
That fondly folded seven,
And the mother heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

Are the Children at Home?

Never yet was a springtime,
Late though lingered the snow,
That the sap stirred not at the whisper
Of the southwind, sweet and low;
Never yet was a springtime
When the buds forgot to blow.

Awakening

A tiny flower, pale and sweet,
That blooms o'er breath of ice;
And glad are they, on any day,
Who find the edelweiss.

The Edelweiss. Stanza 1

There's joy in sailing outward —
Though we leave upon the pier,
With faces grieved and wistful,
Our very dearest dear.

*The Joy of Coming Home.
Stanza 1*

There's nothing half so pleasant
As coming home again.

Ibid. Stanza 3

We have careful thought for the stranger,

And smiles for the sometime guest,
But oft for our own the bitter tone,

Though we love our own the best.

Our Own. Stanza 3

The tender word forgotten,

The letter you did not write,

The flower you might have sent, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts to-night.

At Sunset (The Sin of Omission).

Stanza 1

Child of the boundless prairie, son of the virgin soil,

Heir to the bearing of burdens, brother
to them that toil;

God and Nature together shaped him to lead in the van,

In the stress of the wildest weather, when the nation needed a man.

[1838-1917]

Dead! Is it possible? He, the bold rider;
Custer, our hero, the first in the fight,
Charming the bullets of yore to fly wider,
Shunning our battle-king's ringlets of
light!

The bird with the broken pinion
Never soared as high again.
The Bird with a Broken Wing
One taper lights a thousand,
Yet shines as it has shone;
And the humblest light may kindle
A brighter than its own.

The Taper. Stanza 10
Methinks when I stand in life's sunset,
As I stood when we parted at school,
I shall see the bright faces of children
I loved in the village of Yule.

*The Beautiful Village of Yule.

FRANCIS PHARCELLUS

CHURCH

[1839-1906]

Virginia, your little friends are wrong.
They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Editorial: Is There a Santa Claus?<sup>1</sup>

Not believe in Santa Claus? You might as well not believe in fairies.

Is There a Santa Claus?

No Santa Claus! Thank God, he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Duluth! The word fell upon my ear with a peculiar and indescribable charm, like the gentle murmur of a low fountain stealing forth in the midst of roses, or the soft sweet accent of an angel's whisper in the bright, joyous dream of sleeping innocence. 'Twas the name for which my soul had panted for years, as the hart panteth for the water-brooks.

The Renaissance. Winckelmann

What we have to do is to be for ever curiously testing new opinions and courting new impressions.

Ibid. Conclusion

Art comes to you proposing frankly to give nothing but the highest quality to your moments as they pass.

Ibid.

A book, like a person, has its fortunes with one; is lucky or unlucky in the precise moment of its falling in our way, and often by some happy accident counts with us for something more than its independent value.

Marius the Epicurean. Chap. 6

To know when one's self is interested, is the first condition of interesting other people.

Ibid.

Given the hardest terms, supposing our days are indeed but a shadow, even so, we may well adorn and beautify, in scrupulous self-respect, our souls, and whatever our souls touch upon.

Ibid. Chap. 8

Certainly, flowers were pleasant to the eye. Such things had even their sober use, as making the outside of human life superficially attractive, and thereby promoting the first steps towards friendship and social amity.

"There is but one way to Corinth," as of old. — ANDREW LANG: Letters to Dead Authors, To Lucian of Samosata

I hardly know wherein philosophy and wine are alike unless it be in this, that the philosophers exchange their ware for money, like the wine-merchants; some of them with a mixture of water or worse, or giving short measure.

Marius the Epicurean. Chap. 24

We need some imaginative stimulus, some not impossible ideal such as may shape vague hope, and transform it into effective desire, to carry us year after year, without disgust, through the routine-work which is so large a part of life.

Ibid. Chap. 25

The aim of a true philosophy must lie, not in futile efforts towards the complete accommodation of man to the circumstances in which he chances to find himself, but in the maintenance of a kind of candid discontent, in the face of the very highest achievement.

Ibid.

Through the survival of their children, happy parents are able to think calmly, and with a very practical affection, of a world in which they are to have no direct share.

Beyond our reach is on a sudden found
In things of smallest compass, and we

And worlds within the hollow of our hand, —

A world of music in one word of love,

A world of love in one quick wordless

A world of thought in one translucent phrase,

A world of memory in one mournful
chord,

A world of sorrow in one little song.

What is a Patron? Johnson knew,
And well that lifelike portrait drew.
He is a Patron who looks down

So artless in its vanity,

So fleeting, so eternal,

So packed with "poor Humanity" —

We know as Pepys his Journal.

Pepys' Diary. Stanza 6

Fame is a food that dead men eat, —

I have no stomach for such meat.

Fame Is a Food that Dead Men

Eat. Stanza 1

The Press is too much with us: small kind voice of friends and to say to one's self: "The work is done." But just as one says that, the answer comes: "The race is over, but the work never is done while the power to work remains." The canter that brings you to a standstill need not be only coming to rest. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living.

When I hear people say they have not found the world and life so agreeable or interesting as to be in love with it, or that they look with equanimity to its end, I am apt to think they have never been properly alive nor seen with clear vision the world they think so meanly of, or anything in it — not a blade of grass. Only I know that mine is an exceptional case, that the visible world is to me more beautiful and interesting than to most persons, that the delight I experienced in my communings with Nature did not pass away, leaving nothing but a recollection of vanished happiness to intensify a present pain. The happiness was never lost, but owing to that faculty I have spoken of, had a cumulative effect on the mind and was mine again, so that in my worst times, when I was compelled to exist shut out from Nature in London for long periods, sick and poor and friendless, I could yet always feel that it was infinitely better to be than not to be.

Who taught you tender Bible tales
 Of honey-lands, of milk and wine?
 Of happy, peaceful Palestine?

Of Jordan's holy harvest vales?
 Who gave the patient Christ? I say Who gave your Christian creed? Yea, yea,

Who gave your very God to you?
 Your Jew! Your Jew! Your hated Jew!

When to the flowers so beautiful

The Father gave a name,

Back came a little blue-eyed one

(All timidly it came);

And standing at its Father's feet

And gazing in His face,

It said, in low and trembling tone,

"Dear God, the name Thou gavest
me,

Alas! I have forgot!"

Kindly the Father looked Him down

And said: "Forget-me-not."

Lifted afresh he hewed his enemy

In the suds and in the soap,
Worked a woman full of hope;
Working, singing, all alone,

Habit is thus the enormous fly-wheel

Ye marshes, how candid and simple and nothing-withholding and free

Ye publish yourselves to the sky and offer yourselves to the sea!

Tolerant plains, that suffer the sea and the rains and the sun,

Ye spread and span like the catholic man who hath mightily won

God out of knowledge and good out of infinite pain

And sight out of blindness and purity out of a stain.

Ibid. 6

As the marsh-hen secretly builds on the watery sod,

Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God:

I will fly in the greatness of God as the marsh-hen flies

In the freedom that fills all the space 'twixt the marsh and the skies:

By so many roots as the marsh-grass sends in the sod

I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God:

Oh, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within

The range of the marshes, the liberal marshes of Glynn.

SARAH DOUDNEY
[1843-1926]

The pure, the beautiful, the bright,
That stirred our hearts in youth,
The impulse to a wordless prayer,
The dreams of love and truth,
The longings after something lost,

The spirit's yearning cry,
The strivings after better hopes, —
These things can never die.

Things That Never Die

Listen to the water-mill
Through the livelong day,
How the clicking of its wheel
Wears the hours away. . . .
And a proverb haunts my mind
As a spell is cast —
"The mill cannot grind
With the water that is past."

The Lesson of the Water-Mill<sup>1</sup> [1864]

Oh, the wasted hours of life
That have drifted by!
Oh, the good that might have been,
Lost without a sigh!

Ibid.

Sleep on, beloved, sleep, and take thy rest;
Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;
We love thee well, but Jesus loves thee best —
Good-night!

Good-Night.<sup>2</sup> Stanza 1

EDWARD DOWDEN

[1843-1913]

I said, "I will find God," and forth I went

To seek him in the clearness of the sky,

<sup>1</sup> In 1870, Major-General DANIEL CRAIG McCALLUM [1815-1878] published a book of verse. The Water-Mill, and Other Poems, in which the first poem was practically the same as Miss Doudney's, and caused international dispute. His poem contained the following lines:

Oh! listen to the water-mill, through all the live-long day,
As the clicking of the wheel, wears hour by hour away. . . .
The mill will never grind again with water that is past. . . .
Oh! the wasted hours of life, that have swiftly drifted by,
Alas! the good we might have done, all gone
without a sigh

Miss Doudney's poem was first published in 1864. See Burton E. Stevenson: Famous Single Poems [1923].

HENRY JAMES

But he over me, stood unendurably
Only a pitiless sapphire firmament
Ringing the world — blank splendor.

ANNA E. HAMILTON

[1843-1876]

This learned I from the shadow of a tree,
That to and fro did sway against a wall,
Our shadow selves, our influence,
may fall
Where we ourselves can never be.

'Tis the joys the most prized that are fleetest,
And that soonest creep out from the heart,
As perfumes that are richest and sweetest
Are the earliest ones to depart.

Flitting Away

Flitting away, flitting away,
All that we cherished most dear;
There is nothing on earth that will stay,
Roses must die with the year.

There are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea.

Try to be one of the people on whom nothing is lost.

The chances and changes, the personal history of any absolute genius, draw us to watch his adventure with curiosity and inquiry, lead us on to win more of his secret and borrow more of his experience (I mean, needless to say, when we are at all critically minded); but there is something in the clear safe arrival of the poetic nature, in a given case, at the point of its free and happy exercise, that provokes, if not the cold impulse to challenge or cross-question it, at least the need of understanding so far as possible how, in a world in which difficulty and disaster are frequent, the most wavering and flickering of all fine flames has escaped extinction.

Letters from America (1916)*

FREDERIC WILLIAM HENRY MYERS

[1843-1901]

Look when the clouds are blowing

And all the winds are free:

In fury of their going

They fall upon the sea.

But though the blast is frantic,

And though the tempest raves,

The deep immense Atlantic

Is still beneath the waves.

Wind, Moon, and Tides

Christ, I am Christ's, and let the name suffice you;

Aye, for me, too, it greatly hath sufficed.

Lo, with no winning words would I entice you,

Paul hath no honor and no friend but Christ.

Saint Paul

Coldly sublime, intolerably just.

Whoso has felt the Spirit of the Highest Cannot confound nor doubt Him nor deny:

Yea, with one voice, O world, though thou deniest,

Stand thou on that side, for on this am I.

The Inner Light

In no single act or passion can salvation stand; far hence, beyond Orion and Andromeda, the cosmic process works and shall work forever through unbegotten souls.

Man cannot be happy alone.

Miss Annabel McCarty

Was invited to a party,

"Your company from four to ten," the invitation said;

And the maiden was delighted

To think she was invited

To sit up till the hour when the big folks went to bed.

The First Party. Stanza 1

She screamed: "I want my supper — and I want to go to bed!"

Ibid. Stanza 7

I knew a man and his name was Horner,

Who used to live in Grumble Corner;

Grumble Corner in Cross Patch Town,

And he never was seen without a frown.

Grumble Corner

And many a discontented mourner

Is spending his days in Grumble Corner;

Sour and sad, whom I long to entreat

To take a house in Thanks-giving Street.

And every note of every bell

Sang Gabriel! rang Gabriel!

In the tower that is left the tale to tell
Of Gabriel, the Archangel.

The Bells of San Gabriel

My heart to thy heart,
My lips to thine,
In the dew of the cornfield
The blood of the vine.
The last sigh at leaving,
The word as we part
Is, my lips to thy lips,
We two, heart to heart.

GEORGE BIRDSEYE

[1844-1919]

The longest day is in June, they say;
The shortest in December.
They did not come to me that way:
The shortest I remember
You came a day with me to stay,
And filled my heart with laughter;
The longest day — you were away —
The very next day after.

ROBERT BRIDGES<sup>2</sup>

[1844-1930]

Beneath the crisp and wintry carpet hid
A million buds but stay their blossoming;
And trustful birds have built their nests amid
The shuddering boughs, and only wait to sing
Till one soft shower from the south shall bid,
And hither tempt the pilgrim steps of Spring.

The Growth of Love. Sonnet 6

Beauty being the best of all we know

Whither, O splendid ship, thy white sails crowding,
Leaning across the bosom of the urgent West,
That fearest nor sea rising, nor sky clouding,
Whither away, fair rover, and what thy quest?

I have loved flowers that fade,
Within whose magic tents
Rich hues have marriage made
With sweet unmemoried scents.

I Have Loved Flowers that Fade.
Stanza 1

Ah! little at best can all our hopes avail us

To lift this sorrow, or cheer us, when in the dark,

Unwilling, alone we embark,
And the things we have seen and have known and have heard of, fail us.

On a Dead Child. Stanza 7

Gird on thy sword, O man, thy strength endue,
In fair desire thine earth-born joy renew.

Live thou thy life beneath the making sun
Till Beauty, Truth, and Love in thee are one.

A Hymn of Nature. VII, Stanza 1

When first we met we did not guess
That Love would prove so hard a master.

Of more than common friendliness
When first we met we did not guess.

Triolet

So sweet love seemed that April morn,
When first we kissed beside the thorn,
So strangely sweet, it was not strange
We thought that love could never change.

Keats.

The Testament of Beauty

Wisdom will repudiate thee, if thou think to enquire WHY things are as they are or whence they came: thy task is first to learn WHAT IS, and in pur-pure intellect will find pure pleasure

Sickening thought itself engendereth

Our hope is ever livelier than despair, our joy

livelier and more abiding than our sor-

Man, in the unsearchable darkness, knoweth one thing that as he is, so was he made: and if the Essence

and characteristic faculty of humanity is our conscient Reason and our desire that was Nature's Purpose in the making of man.

ROBERT JONES BURDETTE

[1844-1914]

I love the man who knows it all,
From east to west, from north to south,

Who knows all things, both great and small,

And tells it with his tiresome mouth.

He Knows It All. Stanza 1

Since she went home —

The evening shadows linger longer here, —

The winter days fill so much of the year,
And even summer winds are chill and drear.

Since She Went Home. Stanza 1

I would receive my sight; my clouded eyes

Miss the glad radiance of the morning sun,

The changing tints that glorify the skies
With roseate splendors when the day is done;

The shadows soft and gray, the pearly
light

Of summer twilight deep'ning into night.

There are two days in the week about which and upon which I never worry. Two carefree days, kept sacredly free from fear and apprehension. One of these days is Yesterday. . . . And the other day I do not worry about is Tomorrow.

GEORGE WASHINGTON CABLE

[1844-1925]

There came to port last Sunday night
The queerest little craft,
Without an inch of rigging on;

I looked and looked — and laughed!

The New Arrival. Stanza 1

She has no manifest but this,
No flag floats o'er the water;
She's too new for the British Lloyd's —
My daughter! O my daughter!

EDWARD CARPENTER

[1844-1929]

So thin a veil divides
Us from such joy, past words, Walking in daily life — the business of the hour, each detail seen to;
Yet carried, rapt away, on what sweet floods of other Being:
Swift streams of music flowing, light far back through all Creation shining, Loved faces looking.

So Thin a Veil

Newer ways are ours,
New thoughts, new fancies, and we deem our lives
New-fashioned in a mould of vaster powers;
But as of old with flesh the spirit strives.

Towards Democracy. The Secret of Time and Satan

When Death comes, breaking into the circle of our friends, words fail us, our mental machinery ceases to operate, all our little stores of wit and wisdom, our maxims, our mottoes, accumulated from daily experience, evaporate and are of no avail. These things do not seem to touch or illuminate in any effective way the strange vast Presence whose wings darken the world for us.

The Drama of Love and Death.

Every new movement or manifestation of human activity, when unfamiliar to people's minds, is sure to be misrepresented and misunderstood.

In Man, the positive content of religion is the instinctive sense — whether conscious or subconscious — of an inner unity and continuity with the world around. This is the stuff out of which religion is made.

Pagan and Christian Creeds.

Chap. 4

The first condition of social happiness and prosperity must be the sense of the Common Life.

There is a presence and an influence in Nature and the Open which expands the mind and causes brigand cares and worries to drop off — whereas in confined places foolish and futile thoughts of all kinds swarm like microbes and cloud and conceal the soul.

Friends, whom the softest whistle of my call

Brought to my side in love that knew no doubt,

Would I not seek to cross the jasper
wall

If haply I might find you there
"without"?

Without Are Dogs.<sup>1</sup> Stanza 3
Of all the words the Evangelists record,
To comfort souls perplexed and dis-

This ever seems to me divinest, best —
The thought that Peter spoke — "Thou knowest, Lord."

Sonnet, Thou Knowest
Come, holy fire, consume this clay,
Ashes to ashes now return;
An outworn garment here we lay,
As on thine Altar, Lord, to burn.

Cremation Hymn. Stanza 1
Not to corruption and the worm
Our shrinking spirits yield the claim,
But give this well-beloved form
The cleanly burial of the flame.

From duty's path, however steep, we

It must be sweet, O thou my dead, to lie With hands that folded are from every task,

Sealed with the seal of that great mys-

The lifelong struggle ended.

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,

There are souls that are pure and

For life is the mirror of king and slave,
'Tis just what we are and do.

Ibid. Stanza 5

God keep you, dearest, all this lonely
night:

The winds are still,

The moon drops down behind the western hill;

God keep you, dearest, till the light.

RICHARD WATSON GILDER

[1844-1909]

Not from the whole wide world I chose thee,

Sweetheart, light of the land and the sea!

The wide, wide world could not enclose
thee,

For thou art the whole wide world
to me.

Through love to light! Oh wonderful the way
That leads from darkness to the perfect day!

After-song

I am a woman — therefore I may not Call to him, cry to him,
Fly to him,
Bid him delay not.

A Woman's Thought

Sunset Near. Stanza 3

What is a sonnet? 'Tis a pearly shell
That murmurs of the far-off murmuring sea;
A precious jewel carved most curiously;

It is a little picture painted well.

The Sonnet

This is the poet's triumph, his high doom!

After life's stress —

For him the silent, dark, o'ershadowing tomb

Is shadowless.

And this the miracle and mystery —

In that he gives

His soul away, magnificently free,

By this he lives.

On Reading of a Poet's Death

I count my time by times that I meet

GERARD MANLEY HOPKINS<sup>1</sup>

[1844–1889]

The world is charged with the grandeur of God. . . .

There lives the dearest freshness deep down things.

God's Grandeur

Glory be to God for dappled things —
For skies as couple-colored as a brindled cow;

For rose-moles all in stipple upon trout that swim.

Pied Beauty

Elected Silence, sing to me
And beat upon my whorled ear,
Pipe me to pastures still and be

Summer ends now; now, barbarous in beauty, the stooks rise Around; up above, what wind-walks!
what lovely behavior
Of silk-sack clouds! Has wilder,

Meal-drift molded ever and melted across skies?

Hurrahing in Harvest

I have asked to be

Starlight, wafting him out of it; and Glow, glory in thunder. . . .

To lift up the hands in prayer gives God glory, but a man with a dungfork

all things give him glory if you mean they should. So then, my brethren, live.

My mind is gay but my soul is melancholy.

Quoted by MRS. LANG in Preface, The Poetical Works of Andrew Lang

St. Andrews by the northern sea,
A haunted town it is to me!
A little city, worn and gray,
The gray North Ocean girds it round.

Bright birds that eternally flew

Through the boughs of the may, as they

<sup>1</sup> In 1895, a New York paper was carrying a series of comic strips, "Hogan's Alley," by Richard Felton Outcault [1863-1928]. In 1896, a rival paper engaged the artist to begin a new series portraying "The Yellow Kid." The quarrel of the two newspapers over the right to run the cartoons, together with the similarity in the manner in which the two newspapers displayed sensational news, led to the coining of the term, "Yellow Journalism." — Condensed from The New York Sun, May 15, 1898

Why ladies read what they do read

Is a thing that no man may explain.

A Remonstrance with the Fair.

Stanza 1

From the damp sheiling on the dragged island

Mountains divide you, and no end of seas.

But, though your heart is genuinely Highland,

Still, you're in luck to be away from these! <sup>1</sup>

To Fiona, Parody of Canadian Boat Song

Had cigarettes no ashes,

And roses ne'er a thorn,

The big trout would not ever

Escape into the river.

A Highly Valuable Chain of Thoughts. Stanza 2

We meet him first in Homer's verse,

The dog by the Aegean seas;

He barks at strangers, ay, and worse,

He bites! We learn, in language terse,

That even Argos has the curse

Of fleas! <sup>2</sup>

The Friend of Man. Stanza 3

<sup>1</sup> From the lone sheiling of the misty island Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas —

Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,

And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

Canadian Boat Song, St. 2

This poem appeared in Noctes Ambrosiana, No. 46, in Blackwood's Magazine, Vol. 26, P. 400, Sept., 1829. It is generally credited to JOHN GALT [1779-1839], but JOHN WILSON ("Christopher North"), who won the first Newdigate Prize, founded in 1805, has been suggested as the author. John Gibson Lockhart, son-in-law of Sir Walter Scott, noted, on a copy of the poem in his own handwriting, that the song had been sent to him by a friend in Upper Canada. Galt, author of Annals of the Parish, was in Canada in 1824 and 1826. The poem was likewise found in the handwriting of Hugh Montgomerie [1739-1819], twelfth Earl of Eglinton, ascribed to a Gaelic origin.

Robert Louis Stevenson misquotes the second stanza of the song in The Silverado Squatters, Chap. 4. Joseph Chamberlain, the British statesman, gave Stevenson's version in a speech at Inverness.

[1845-1933]

It must be remembered that the point of honour which decrees that a man must not under any circumstances accept money from a woman with whom he is on certain terms, is of very modern growth, and is still tempered by the proviso that he may take as much as he likes or can get from his wife.

Preface to FIELDING'S Tom Jones

I have myself a great admiration for nice fine points of honour — I don't think you can make them too nice or too fine.

Ibid.

One of the commonest but most uncritical faults of criticism — the refusal to consider what it is that the author intended to give us.

Ibid.

Criticism is the endeavor to find, to know, to love, to recommend, not only the best, but all the good, that has been known and thought and written in the world.

A History of Criticism

It is the first duty of the novelist to let himself be read — anything else that he gives you is a bonus, a trimming, a dessert.

History of the English Novel

I have never tried to be in the fashion for the sake of being in it, and seldom, I think, to be out of it for the sake of being out of it. Logic and history have been the only external guides I have accepted in temporal things, except where pure taste has reigned alone.

Notes on a Cellar Book. Preface

When they [wines] were good they pleased my sense, cheered my spirits, improved my moral and intellectual powers, besides enabling me to confer the same benefits on other people.

Ibid.

Men will try to persuade themselves, or at least others, that they read poetry because it is a criticism of life, because it expresses the doubts and fears and thoughts and hopes of the time, because it is a substitution for religion, because it is a relief from serious work, because and because and because. As a matter of fact, they (that is to say, those of them who like it generally) read it because they like it, because it communicates an experience of half-sensual, half-intellectual pleasure to them.

From Life of Sir William Osler

<sup>1</sup> Luke, IX, 16.

After all, there is no such literature
as a Dictionary.

Life of Sir William Osler.Vol. I, Chap. 11

The desire to take medicine is perhaps the greatest feature which distinguishes man from animals.

Ibid. Chap. 14

This is yet the childhood of the world, and a supine credulity is still the most charming characteristic of man.

Ibid.

We are here to add what we can to,
not to get what we can from, Life.

Ibid

To have striven, to have made an effort, to have been true to certain ideals
— this alone is worth the struggle.

Ibid. Chap. 16

Humanity has but three great enemies: fever, famine and war; of these by far the greatest, by far the most terrible, is fever.

Ibid.

Though a little one, the master-word [Work] looms large in meaning. It is the open sesame to every portal, the great equalizer in the world, the true philosopher's stone which transmutes all the base metal of humanity into gold."

Ibid. Chap. 22

Things cannot always go your way.
Learn to accept in silence the minor aggravations, cultivate the gift of taciturnity and consume your own smoke<sup>3</sup> with an extra draught of hard work, so that those about you may not be annoyed with the dust and soot of your complaints.

Ibid.

We are here not to get all we can out of life for ourselves, but to try to make the lives of others happier.

erature — subtract the work of the men above forty, and while we should miss great treasures, even priceless treasures, we would practically be where we are to-day. . . . The effective, moving, vitalizing work of the world is done between the ages of twenty-five and forty.<sup>1</sup>

Life of Sir William Osler.

Vol. I, Chap. 24

My second fixed idea is the uselessness of men above sixty years of age, and the incalculable benefit it would be in commercial, political, and in professional life if, as a matter of course, men stopped work at this age.

Ibid.

In that charming novel, "The Fixed Period," [by] Anthony Trollope, . . . the plot hinges upon the admirable scheme of a college into which at sixty men retired for a year of contemplation before a peaceful departure by chloroform. That incalculable benefits might follow such a scheme is apparent to anyone who, like myself, is nearing the limit, and who has made a careful study of the calamities which may befall men during the seventh and eighth decades.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid.

Nothing will sustain you more potently than the power to recognize in your humdrum routine, as perhaps it may be thought, the true poetry of life — the poetry of the commonplace, of the ordinary man, of the plain, toil-worn woman, with their loves and their joys, their sorrows and their griefs.

Ibid. (The Student Life)

Lift up one hand to heaven and thank your stars if they have given you the proper sense to enable you to appreciate the inconceivably droll situations in which we catch our fellow creatures.

I have three personal ideals. One, to do the day's work well and not to bother about to-morrow. . . . The second ideal has been to act the Golden Rule, as far as in me lay, toward my professional brethren and toward the patients committed to my care. And the third has been to cultivate such a measure of equanimity as would enable me to bear success with humility, the affection of my friends without pride, and to be ready when the day of sorrow and grief came to meet it with the courage befitting a man.

Life of Sir William Osler. (Farewell Dinner, May 2, 1905)

Throw all the beer and spirits into the Irish Channel, the English Channel, and the North Sea for a year, and people in England would be infinitely better. It would certainly solve all the problems with which the philanthropists, the physicians, and the politicians have to deal.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. Vol. II, Chap. 26

No man is really happy or safe without a hobby, and it makes precious little difference what the outside interest may be — botany, beetles or butterflies, roses, tulips or irises; fishing, mountaineering or antiquities — anything will do so long as he straddles a hobby and rides it hard.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 29

Nothing in life is more wonderful than faith — the one great moving force which we can neither weigh in the balance nor test in the crucible.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 30

In the life of a young man the most essential thing for happiness is the gift of friendship.

No bubble is so iridescent or floats longer than that blown by the successful teacher.

It is one of the greatest blessings that so many women are so full of tact. The calamity happens when a woman who has all the other riches of life just lacks that one thing.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 33

It is the prime duty of a woman of this terrestrial world to look well. Neatness is the asepis of clothes.

Ibid.

The quest for righteousness is Oriental, the quest for knowledge, Occidental.<sup>3</sup>

In science the credit goes to the man who convinces the world, not to the man to whom the idea first occurs.<sup>4</sup>

And the calico cat replied "Mee-ow!"
The air was littered, an hour or so,
With bits of gingham and calico.

We all hev our choice, an' you, like the
rest,

Allow that the dorg which you've got

Strive not to hew your path through life — it really doesn't pay;

Be sure the salve of flattery soaps all you do and say;

Herein the only royal road to fame and fortune lies:

Put not your trust in vinegar — mo-

HENRY CABOT LODGE

[1850-1924]

New England has a harsh climate, a barren soil, a rough and stormy coast, and yet we love it, even with a love passing that of dwellers in more favored regions.

Address, New England Society of New York [December 22, 1884]

Of "Americanism" of the right sort we cannot have too much. Mere vaporing and boasting become a nation as little as a man. But honest, outspoken pride and faith in our country are infinitely better and more to be respected than the cultivated reserve which sets it down as ill-bred and in bad taste ever to refer to our country except by way of deprecation, criticism, or general negation.

Ibid.

Let every man honor and love the land of his birth and the race from which he springs and keep their memory green. It is a pious and honorable duty. But let us have done with British-Americans and Irish-Americans and German-Americans, and so on, and all be Americans. . . . If a man is going to be an American at all let him be so without any qualifying adjectives; and if he is going to be something else, let him drop the word American from his personal description.<sup>1</sup>

There was no hour down to the end when he would not turn aside from everything else to preach the doctrine of Americanism, of the principles and the faith upon which American government rested, and which all true Americans should wear in their heart of hearts. He was a great patriot, a great man; above all, a great American. His country was the ruling, mastering passion of his life from the beginning even unto the end.

leg that a change in the dress of man is so much to be desired. . . . The leg is

I have a little shadow that goes in and out with me,

Warm summer sun, shine kindly here;
Warm southern wind, blow softly here;
Green sod above, lie light, lie light —
Good-night, dear heart, good-night, good-night.

And what can be the use of him is more than I can see.

My Shadow. Stanza 1

Christmas at Sea. Stanza 11

There are men and classes of men that stand above the common herd: the soldier, the sailor, and the shepherd not infrequently; the artist rarely; rarelier still, the clergyman; the physician al-

BOURDILLON
[1852-1921]

The night has a thousand eyes,
And the day but one;
Yet the light of the bright world dies,
With the dying sun.

Light. Stanza 1

The mind has a thousand eyes,
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of a whole life dies,
When love is done.

Ibid. Stanza 2

Upon the valley's lap
The dewy morning throws
A thousand pearly drops
To wash a single rose.
So, often in the course
Of life's few fleeting years,
A single pleasure costs
The soul a thousand tears.

If thou shouldst bid thy friend farewell,
But for one night though that farewell should be,
Press thou his hand in thine; how canst
thou tell

How far from thee
Fate, or caprice, may lead his feet Ere that to-morrow come? Men have been known
Lightly to turn the corner of a street,<sup>1</sup>
And days have grown
To months, and months to lagging
years,
Before they looked in loving eyes
again.

What other State compares with Maine
In glorious coasts, where ocean tides
Have for long ages beat in vain
To storm the coves where safety
hides;

Where pillared cliffs like sentries stand
To guard the entries to the land,
From Kittery to Calais!

[1852-1936]

Success, which touches nothing that it does not vulgarize, should be its own reward . . . the odium of success is hard enough to bear, without the added ignominy of popular applause.

Success

Every American child should learn at school the history of the conquest of the West. The names of Kit Carson, of General Custer and of Colonel Cody should be as household words to them.
These men as truly helped to form an empire as did the Spanish conquista-dores. Nor should Sitting Bull, the Short Wolf, Crazy Horse, and Rain-in-the-Face be forgotten. They too were Americans, and showed the same heroic qualities as did their conquerors.

Letter to Theodore Roosevelt [1917]

The rain had cleared and the sun poured down upon us, as in procession, headed by the acolytes and priests, we bore the coffin to the grave. A semi-circle of Scotch firs formed, as it were, a little harbour for him. The breeze blew freshly, south-west by south a little westerly — a good wind, as I thought, to steer up Channel by, and one that he who would no longer feel it on his cheek, looking aloft to see if all the sails were drawing properly, must have been glad to carry when he struck soundings, passing the Wolf Rock or the Smalls
after foul weather in the Bay.

Handsomely, as he who lay in it might well have said, they lowered the coffin down. The priest had left his Latin and said a prayer or two in English, and I was glad of it, for English surely was the speech the Master Mariner most loved, and honoured in the loving with new graces of his own.

Bowed by the weight of centuries he

O masters, lords and rulers in all lands,

Stanza 2

So came the Captain with the mighty
heart;
And when the judgment thunders split
the house,
Wrenching the rafters from their an-

He held the ridgepole up, and spiked
again
The rafters of the Home.

Ibid. Stanza 4

And when he fell in whirlwind, he went

Goes down with a great shout upon the

And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.

HENRY VAN DYKE

[1852-1933]

If all the skies were sunshine,

Our faces would be fain

To feel once more upon them

The cooling splash of rain.

If All the Skies. Stanza 1

Men have dulled their eyes with sin,

And dimmed the light of heaven with doubt,

And built their temple-walls to shut thee in,

And framed their iron creeds to shut thee out.

God of the Open Air. Stanza 3

"Raise the stone, and thou shalt find me; cleave the wood and there am I."<sup>1</sup>

The Toiling of Felix. Part I,

Prelude

This is the gospel of labour, ring it, ye bells of the kirk!

The Lord of Love came down from above, to live with the men who work;

This is the rose that He planted, here in the thorn-curst soil:

Heaven is blest with perfect rest, but the blessing of Earth is toil.

Ibid. Envoy, Stanza 5

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air;

And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair.

"America for Me." Stanza 3
It's home again, and home again, America for me!

I want a ship that's westward bound to plough the rolling sea,
To the blessed Land of Room Enough
beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.

Ibid. Stanza 6

This is my work; my blessing, not my
doom;

Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way.

The Three Best Things. I, Work
Not to the swift, the race:

Every few years our industrial system gets the jim-jams. Capital flies to cover, factories close and labor goes tramping across the country seeking honest employment and receiving a warm welcome — from militia companies with shotted guns. Cheerful idiots begin to prattle of "over-production," the economic M. D.'s to refurbish all the old remedies, from conjure-bags to communism. They all know exactly what caused the "crisis" and what to do for it; but despite the doctors the patient usually — survives. And the M. D. who succeeds in cramming his pet panacea down its throat claims all the credit for the recovery. We are slowly emerging from the crash of '93, and the cuckoos are cock-sure that a country fairly bursting with wealth was saved from the demnition bowwows by the blessed expedient of going into debt.

Off with your hat as the flag goes by!
And let the heart have its say;
You're man enough for a tear in your eye

That you will not wipe away.
The Old Flag. Stanza 1

It was an old, old, old, old lady,
And a boy that was half-past three;
And the way that they played together
Was beautiful to see.

"One, Two, Three." Stanza 1

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants the friend of sun and sky;
He plants the flag of breezes free;
The shaft of beauty towering high.

The Heart of the Tree. Stanza 1

Happy the mortal free and independent,
Master of the mainspring of his own volition!
Look on us with the eye of sweet compassion:

We are Cook's Tourists.

[1855-1909]

These words no Shakespeare wrote,
 These words no Byron penned,
 Nor poet classical, with fancy free;
 It is an honest heart speaks to a precious friend,
 And yet it sounds like purest poetry.

BETH DAY

[Circa 1855]

If you are tempted to reveal
 A tale to you someone has told
 About another, make it pass,
 Before you speak, three gates of gold:
 These narrow gates. First, "Is it true?"
 Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind
 Give truthful answer. And the next
 Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"
 And if to reach your lips at last
 It passes through these gateways three,
 Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
 What the result of speech may be.<sup>2</sup>

It is to laugh.

The Amazons

You may dive into many waters, but there is one social Dead Sea.

The Second Mrs. Tanqueray.Act I

From forty to fifty a man is at heart either a stoic or a satyr.

Ibid.

There are two sorts of affection — the love of a woman you respect, and the love for the woman you love.

Ibid. Act II

It is only one step from toleration to forgiveness.

Ibid.

I believe the future is only the past again, entered through another gate.

Ibid. Act IV

I've heard what doctors' consultations consist of. After looking at the pictures you talk about whist.

The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith.
Act I

How many "coming men" has one known! Where on earth do they all go to?

Ibid.

There's only one hour in a woman's life. . . . One supreme hour. Her poor life is like the arch of a crescent; so many years lead up to that hour, so many weary years decline from it.

Ibid. Act III

Vanity is the cause of a great deal of virtue in men; the vainest are those who like to be thought respectable.

The White Peace. Stanza 2

Across the silent stream

Where the slumber-shadows go,
From the dim blue Hills of Dream

I have heard the west wind blow.

From the Hills of Dream. Stanza 1

I hear the little children of the wind
Crying solitary in lonely places.

Sweet Marie. Stanza 1

Oft when I feel my engine swerve,

As o'er strange rails we fare,
I strain my eyes around the curve
For what awaits us there.

When swift and free she carries me
Through yards unknown at night,
I look along the line to see

That all the lamps are white.

Will the Lights be White? Stanza 1

Swift towards life's terminal I trend,

The run seems short to-night;
God only knows what's at the end —
I hope the lamps are white.

Talk happiness. The world is sad enough

Without your woe. No path is wholly rough.

Speech. Stanza 1

Talk faith. The world is better off without

Your uttered ignorance and morbid doubt.

Ibid. Stanza 2

Talk health. The dreary, never-ending tale

Of mortal maladies is more than stale;
You cannot charm or interest or please
By harping on that minor chord, disease.

Say you are well, or all is well with you,
And God shall hear your words and make them true.

Ibid. Stanza 3

The two kinds of people on earth that I mean

Are the people who lift and the people who lean.

To Lift or to Lean

It ever has been since time began,
And ever will be, till time lose breath,
That love is a mood — no more — to
man,
And love to woman is life or death.

Blind. Stanza 1

Since life is short, we need to make it broad;

Since life is brief, we need to make it
bright;

Then keep the old king's motto well in sight,

And let its meaning permeate each day Whatever comes — "This, too, shall pass away."<sup>1</sup>

This, Too, Shall Pass Away.Stanza 7

It is easy to sit in the sunshine

And talk to the man in the shade;

It is easy to float in a well-trimmed boat,

And point out the places to wade.

Practice vs. Preaching. Stanza 1

Laugh, and the world laughs with you;
Weep, and you weep alone;
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,

But has trouble enough of its own.

Solitude. Stanza 1

Feast, and your halls are crowded;

Fast, and the world goes by.

Ibid. Stanza 3

So many gods, so many creeds,

So many paths that wind and wind,

When just the art of being kind

Is all this sad world needs.

The World's Need

No question is ever settled

Until it is settled right.

Settle the Question Right

We returned from the Pole to Cape Columbia in only sixteen days . . . the exhilaration of success lent wings to our sorely battered feet. But Ootah, the

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

[1856-1950]

My method is to take the utmost trouble to find the right thing to say, and then to say it with the utmost levity.

Answers to Nine Questions

We have no more right to consume happiness without producing it than to consume wealth without producing it.

Candida. Act 1

A prosperous man of business, who probably never read anything but a newspaper since he left school.

Cashel Byron's Profession. Chap. 5

All this struggling and striving to make the world better is a great mistake; not because it isn't a good thing to improve the world if you know how to do it, but because striving and struggling is the worst way you could set about doing anything.

Ibid. Chap. 6

We don't bother much about dress and manners in England, because, as a nation we don't dress well and we've no manners.

You Never Can Tell. Act I

A family enjoying the unspeakable peace and freedom of being orphans.

Ibid. Act II

The great advantage of a hotel is that it's a refuge from home life.

Ibid.

It's well to be off with the Old Woman before you're on with the New.<sup>1</sup>

The Philanderer. Act II

The fickleness of women I love is only equaled by the infernal constancy of the women who love me.

Ibid.

The test of a man or woman's breeding is how they behave in a quarrel.

Ibid. Act IV

People are always blaming their circumstances for what they are. I don't believe in circumstances. The people who get on in this world are the people who get up and look for the circumstances they want, and, if they can't find them, make them.

Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act II

There are no secrets better kept than the secrets that everybody guesses.

Ibid. Act III

A great devotee of the Gospel of Getting On.

Ibid. Act IV

This is the true joy in life, the being used for a purpose recognized by yourself as a mighty one; the being thoroughly worn out before you are thrown on the scrap heap; the being a force of Nature instead of a feverish selfish little clod of ailments and grievances complaining that the world will not devote itself to making you happy.

Man and Superman. Epistle Dedicatory

A lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it: it would be hell on earth.

Man and Superman. Act I

The more things a man is ashamed of, the more respectable he is.

Ibid.

You think that you are Ann's suitor: that you are the pursuer and she the pursued; that it is your part to woo, to persuade, to prevail, to overcome. Fool: it is you who are the pursued, the marked-down quarry, the destined prey.

Ibid. Act II

Marry Ann and at the end of a week you'll find no more inspiration in her than in a plate of muffins.

Ibid.

Home life as we understand it is no more natural to us than a cage is natural to a cockatoo.

Getting Married. Preface

In the extreme instances of reaction against convention, female murderers get sheaves of offers of marriage.

Ibid.

When two people are under the influence of the most violent, most insane, most delusive, and most transient of passions, they are required to swear that they will remain in that excited, abnormal, and exhausting condition continuously until death do them part.

Ibid.

A man is like a phonograph with half-a-dozen records. You soon get tired of them all; and yet you have to sit at table whilst he reels them off to every new visitor.

Ibid. (The Play)

In England we always let an institution strain itself until it breaks.

The whole strength of England lies in the fact that the enormous majority of the English people are snobs.

Getting Married (The Play)

You don't learn to hold your own in the world by standing on guard, but by attacking, and getting well hammered yourself.

Ibid.

Religion is a great force — the only real motive force in the world; but what you fellows don't understand is that you must get at a man through his own religion and not through yours.

Ibid.

The modest cough of a minor poet.

The Dark Lady of the Sonnets

This writing of plays is a great matter, forming as it does the minds and affections of men in such sort that whatsoever they see done in show on the stage, they will presently be doing in earnest in the world, which is but a larger stage.

Ibid.

I like a bit of a mongrel myself, whether it's a man or a dog; they're the best for every day.

Misalliance. Episode I

If parents would only realize how they bore their children!

Ibid.

He's a gentleman: look at his boots.

Pygmalion. Act I

Women upset everything. When you let them into your life, you find that the woman is driving at one thing and you're driving at another.

Ibid. Act II

I have to live for others and not for myself; that's middle class morality.

Ibid. Act V

The great secret, Eliza, is not having bad manners or good manners or any other particular sort of manners, but having the same manner for all human souls: in short, behaving as if you were in Heaven, where there are no third-class carriages, and one soul is as good as another.

Ibid.

Independence? That's middle class blasphemy. We are all dependent on one another, every soul of us on earth.

Pygmalion. Act V

The nauseous sham goodfellowship our democratic public men get up for shop use.

Back to Methuselah. Gospel of the Brothers Barnabas

Life is a disease; and the only difference between one man and another is the stage of the disease at which he lives.

Ibid.

I enjoy convalescence. It is the part that makes the illness worth while.

Ibid.

A nap, my friend, is a brief period of sleep which overtakes superannuated persons when they endeavor to entertain unwelcome visitors or to listen to scientific lectures.

Ibid. Tragedy of an Elderly Gentleman

Everything happens to everybody sooner or later if there is time enough.

Ibid. As Far As Thought Can Reach

Silence is the most perfect expression of scorn.

Ibid.

The worst cliques are those which consist of one man.

Ibid.

The Jews generally give value. They make you pay; but they deliver the goods. In my experience the men who want something for nothing are invariably Christians.

Saint Joan. Scene IV

Kings are not born: they are made by universal hallucination.

The Revolutionist's Handbook

At last I went to Ireland,
'Twas raining cats and dogs:

I found no music in the glens,
Nor purple in the bogs.

And as far as angels' laughter in the smelly Liffy's tide —

Well, my Irish daddy said it, but the dear old humbug lied.

Envoi added to a song, My Irish

Daddy, by Miss MAISIE HURL
[May, 1931]

Every person who owes his life to civilized society and who has enjoyed since his childhood its very costly protections and advantages should appear at reasonable intervals before a properly qualified jury to justify his existence, which should be summarily and painlessly terminated if he fails to justify it and it develops that he is a positive nuisance and more trouble than he is worth. Nothing less will really make people responsible citizens.

Radio address from London to America [October 11, 1931]

You put up in New York Harbor a monstrous idol which you called "Liberty."<sup>1</sup>

Speech, Metropolitan Opera House,<sup>2</sup> New York [April 11, 1933]

You in America should trust to that volcanic political instinct which I have divined in you.

Speak gently, she can hear
The daisies grow.

Requiescat. Stanza 1

Thy name was writ in water<sup>1</sup> — it shall stand:

And tears like mine will keep thy memory green,

As Isabella did her Basil-tree.

The Grave of Keats

Think of all

The suns that go to make one speed-well blue!

Quia Multum Amavi. Stanza 4

These are the letters which Endymion wrote

To one he loved in secret, and apart.
And now the brawlers of the auction mart

Bargain and bid for each poor blotted note.

On the Sale by Auction of Keats' Love Letters

Yet each man kills the thing he loves,

By each let this be heard,

Some do it with a bitter look,

Some with a flattering word,

The coward does it with a kiss,

The brave man with a sword!

The Ballad of Reading Gaol. I, 7

I never saw a man who looked

With such a wistful eye

Upon that little tent of blue

Which prisoners call the sky,

And at every wandering cloud that trailed

Its ravelled fleeces by.

Ibid. II, 2

For he that lives more lives than one

More deaths than one must die.

Ibid. III, 37

All that we know who lie in gaol

Is that the wall is strong;

And that each day is like a year,

A year whose days are long.

Ibid. V, 1

The vilest deeds like poison-weeds

Bloom well in prison-air:

It is only what is good in Man

That wastes and withers there:

<sup>1</sup> See Keats, page 386.

Pale Anguish keeps the heavy gate
And the Warder is Despair.

The Ballad of Reading Gaol. V, 5

Down the long and silent street,
The dawn, with silver-sandaled feet,
Crept like a frightened girl.

The Harlot's House

A poet can survive everything but a misprint.

The Children of the Poets

Most modern calendars mar the sweet simplicity of our lives by reminding us that each day that passes is the anniversary of some perfectly uninteresting event.

A Poetic Calendar

Though it would be dangerous to make calendars the basis of Culture, we should all be much improved if we began each day with a fine passage of English poetry.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

To say "mither" instead of "mother" seems to many the acme of romance.

Romantic Poems and Ballads

An age that has no criticism is either an age in which art is immobile, hieratic, and confined to the reproduction of formal types, or an age that possesses no art at all.

The Critic as Artist. Part I

It is through Art, and through Art only, that we can realize our perfection; through Art and Art only that we can shield ourselves from the sordid perils of actual existence.

Ibid. Part II

As long as war is regarded as wicked, it will always have its fascination. When it is looked upon as vulgar, it will cease to be popular.

Ibid.

There is no sin except stupidity.

Ibid.

Where there is sorrow there is holy ground.

De Profundis

There is no such thing as a moral or an immoral book. Books are well written, or badly written. That is all.

The Picture of Dorian Gray.
Preface

All art is quite useless.

The Picture of Dorian Gray.
Preface

There is only one thing in the world worse than being talked about, and that is not being talked about.

Ibid. Chap. 1

Conscience and cowardice are really the same things.

Ibid.

Laughter is not at all a bad beginning for a friendship, and it is far the best ending for one.

Ibid.

The only way to get rid of a temptation is to yield to it.

Ibid. Chap. 2

He knew the precise psychological moment<sup>1</sup> when to say nothing.

Ibid.

The only difference between a caprice and a lifelong passion is that the caprice lasts a little longer.

Ibid.

Children begin by loving their parents; as they grow older they judge them; sometimes they forgive them.

Ibid. Chap. 5

Conscience makes egotists of us all.

Ibid. Chap. 8

When a woman marries again it is because she detested her first husband. When a man marries again, it is because he adored his first wife.<sup>2</sup> Women try their luck; men risk theirs.

Ibid. Chap. 15

<sup>1</sup> In all considerations the psychological momentum or factor must be allowed to play a prominent part, for without its co-operation, there is little to be hoped from the work of the artillery. — The Neue Preussische Kreuz-Zeitung, Dec. 16, 1870, commenting upon the siege of Paris.

An error in translation gave us "psychological moment" (i. e., the critical moment). Attributed to German pedantry, the Parisians ridiculed the phrase, but it speedily became universal.

Felt the psychological moment.

Impressions of America. Leadville

Now-a-days we are all of us so hard up, that the only pleasant things to pay are compliments. They're the only things we can pay.

Lady Windermere's Fan. Act I

I can resist everything except temptation.

Ibid.

History is merely gossip.

Ibid. Act III

In this world there are only two tragedies. One is not getting what one wants, and the other is getting it.

Ibid.

What is a cynic? A man who knows the price of everything, and the value of nothing.

Ibid.

Experience is the name everyone gives to his mistakes.

Ibid.

They say that when good Americans die they go to Paris.

A Woman of No Importance. Act I

Nothing spoils a romance so much as a sense of humour in the woman.

Ibid.

Men always want to be a woman's first love. That is their clumsy vanity. We women have a more subtle instinct about things. What we like is to be a man's last romance.

JOSEPH CONRAD

[1857-1924]

A work that aspires, however humbly, to the condition of art should carry its justification in every line.

The Nigger of the Narcissus.

Preface

But the artist appeals to that part of our being which is not dependent on wisdom; to that in us which is a gift and not an acquisition — and, therefore, more permanently enduring. He speaks to our capacity for delight and wonder, to the sense of mystery surrounding our lives: to our sense of pity, and beauty, and pain.

Ibid.

The ship, a fragment detached from the earth, went on lonely and swift like a small planet.

Ibid. Chap. 2

Goodbye, brothers! You were a good crowd. As good a crowd as ever fisted with wild cries the beating canvas of a heavy foresail; or tossing aloft, invisible in the night, gave back yell for yell to a westerly gale.

Ibid. Chap. 5

She strode like a grenadier, was strong and upright like an obelisk, had a beautiful face, a candid brow, pure eyes, and not a thought of her own in her head.

Tales of Unrest. The Return

What greatness had not floated on the ebb of that river [the Thames] into the mystery of an unknown earth! . . . The dreams of men, the seed of commonwealths, the germs of empires.

Heart of Darkness

Running all over the sea trying to get behind the weather.

Typhoon. Chap. 2

The sea never changes and its works, for all the talk of men, are wrapped in mystery.

Ibid. Falk: A Reminiscence

I have known the sea too long to believe in its respect for decency.

Ibid.

An elemental force is ruthlessly frank.

Typhoon. Falk: A Reminiscence

Efficiency of a practically flawless kind may be reached naturally in the struggle for bread. But there is something beyond — a higher point, a subtle and unmistakable touch of love and pride beyond mere skill; almost an inspiration which gives to all work that finish which is almost art — which is art.

The Mirror of the Sea.

The Finest Art

The East Wind, an interloper in the dominions of Westerly Weather, is an impassive-faced tyrant with a sharp poniard held behind his back for a treacherous stab.

Ibid. Rulers of East and West

The autocratic sway of the West Wind, whether forty north or forty south of the equator, is characterized by an open, generous, frank, barbarous recklessness. For he is a great autocrat, and to be a great autocrat you must be a great barbarian.

Ibid.

The air of the New World seems favorable to the art of declamation.

Nostromo. Chap. 6

There are on earth no actors too humble and obscure not to have a gallery; that gallery which envenoms the play by stealthy jeers, counsels of anger, amused comments, or words of perfidious compassion.

Chance. Part II, Chap. 4

What all men are really after is some form, or perhaps only some formula, of peace.

Under Western Eyes. Part I

A man's real life is that accorded to him in the thoughts of other men by reason of respect or natural love.

Ibid. 1

Let a fool be made serviceable according to his folly.

Ibid. 3

The belief in a supernatural source of evil is not necessary; men alone are quite capable of every wickedness.

Ibid. Part II, 4

Why should a man certain of immortality think of his life at all?

Under Western Eyes. Part II, 4

No woman is an absolute fool. . . .
No woman is ever completely deceived.

Ibid. 5

That strange impulse of indiscretion, common to men who lead secret lives, and accounting for the invariable existence of "compromising documents" in all the plots and conspiracies of history.

Ibid. Part III, 1

You can't ignore the importance of a good digestion. The joy of life . . . depends on a sound stomach, whereas a bad digestion inclines one to skepticism, incredulity, breeds black fancies and thoughts of death.

Ibid. 3

All ambitions are lawful except those which climb upward on the miseries or credulities of mankind.

A Personal Record. Preface

The sight of human affairs deserves admiration and pity. And he is not insensible who pays them the undemonstrative tribute of a sigh which is not a sob, and of a smile which is not a grin.

Ibid.

Only in men's imagination does every truth find an effective and undeniable existence. Imagination, not invention, is the supreme master of art as of life.

Ibid. Chap. 1

For Englishmen especially, of all the races of the earth, a task, any task, undertaken in an adventurous spirit acquires the merit of romance.

Ibid. Chap. 5

Only a moment; a moment of strength, of romance, of glamour — of youth! . . . A flick of sunshine upon a strange shore, the time to remember, the time for a sigh, and — goodbye! — Night — Goodbye . . . !

Youth

The Rescue. Part VI, 8

I am a great foe of favouritism in public life, in private life, and even in the delicate relationship of an author to his works.

Lord Jim. Author's Note

There is a weird power in a spoken word. . . . And a word carries far — very far — deals destruction through time as the bullets go flying through space.

Ibid. Chap. 15

That faculty of beholding at a hint the face of his desire and the shape of his dream, without which the earth would know no lover and no adventurer.

Ibid. Chap. 16

Felicity, felicity — how shall I say it? — is quaffed out of a golden cup in every latitude: the flavour is with you — with you alone, and you can make it as intoxicating as you please.

Ibid.

It is when we try to grapple with another man's intimate need that we perceive how incomprehensible, wavering, and misty are the beings that share with us the sight of the stars and the warmth of the sun.

Ibid.

We wander in our thousands over the face of the earth, the illustrious and the obscure, earning beyond the seas our fame, our money, or only a crust of bread; but it seems to me that for each of us going home must be like going to render an account. We return to face our superiors, our kindred, our friends — those whom we obey, and those whom we love.

Ibid. Chap. 21

You shall judge of a man by his foes as well as by his friends.

Ibid. Chap. 34

Vanity plays lurid tricks with our memory.

Ibid. Chap. 41

Some great men owe most of their greatness to the ability of detecting in those they destine for their tools the exact quality of strength that matters for their work.

Ibid. Chap. 42

In plucking the fruit of memory one runs the risk of spoiling its bloom.

The dog commends himself to our favour by affording play to our propensity for mastery, and as he is also an item of expense, and commonly serves no industrial purpose, he holds a well-assured place in men's regard as a thing of good repute.

Ibid. Chap 6

The visible imperfections of the hand-wrought goods, being honorific, are accounted marks of superiority in point of beauty, or serviceability, or both.
 Hence has arisen that exaltation of the defective, of which John Ruskin and William Morris were such eager spokesmen in their time. . . . The Kelmscott Press reduced the matter to an absurdity by issuing books for modern use, edited with the obsolete spelling, printed in black-letter, and bound in limp vellum fitted with thongs.

The sporting man's sense of luck and chance is an inarticulate or inchoate animism . . . it implies the possibility of propitiating, or of deceiving and cajoling, or otherwise disturbing the unfolding of propensities resident in the objects which constitute the apparatus and accessories of any game of skill or chance. There are few sporting men who are not in the habit of wearing charms or talismans.

Ibid. Chap. 11

To meet the requirements of the highest economic efficiency under modern conditions, the world process must habitually be apprehended in terms of quantitative, dispassionate force and sequence.

The adoption of the cap and gown is one of the striking atavistic features of modern college life.

The classics have scarcely lost in absolute value as a voucher of scholastic respectability, since for this purpose it is only necessary that the scholar should be able to put in evidence some learning which is conventionally recognized as evidence of wasted time.

Ibid.

As felicitous an instance of futile classicism as can well be found is the conventional spelling of the English language. English orthography satisfies all the requirements of the canons of reputability under the law of conspicuous waste. It is archaic, cumbrous, and ineffective; its acquisition consumes much time and effort; failure to acquire it is easy of detection.

Stanza 1*

A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf near three centuries dead.
They followed still his crooked way,
And lost one hundred years a day;
For thus such reverence is lent
To well-established precedent.

The Calf-Path

The path that leads to a Loaf of Bread
Winds through the Swamps of Toil,
And the path that leads to a Suit of Clothes

Goes through a flowerless soil,
And the paths that lead to a Loaf of Bread
And the Suit of Clothes are hard to tread.

Paths. Stanza 1

Let me live in my house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by;
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish — so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat,

Or hurl the cynic's ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of
the road
And be a friend of man.

The grass of yesteryear

decay:

Empires dissolve and peoples disap-

Song passes not away.

Captains and conquerors leave a little dust,

And kings a dubious legend of their

Once, in a lightning-flash of sympathy,
I felt this truth, an instant, and no more.

Epigram

Say what thou wilt, the young are happy never.

Give me bless'd Age, beyond the fire and fever, —

Past the delight that shatters, hope that stings,

And eager flutt'ring of life's ignorant wings.

ish autobiography has ever been good. Of all forms of literature it is the one least adapted to the national genius. You could not imagine a British Rousseau, still less a British Benvenuto Cellini.

Through the Magic Door [1908]

Several incidents in my life have convinced me of spiritual interposition — of the promptings of some beneficent force outside ourselves, which tries to help us where it can.

Ibid.

The bow was made in England,
Of true wood, of yew wood.

The Song of the Bow. Stanza 1

My life is gliding downward, it speeds
swifter to the day
When it shoots the last dark canyon
to the Plains of Faraway;
But while its streams are running through the years that are to be,
The mighty voice of Canada will ever call to me.

The Athabasca Trail

The Grenadiers of Austria are proper men and tall;

The Grenadiers of Austria have scaled
the city wall;

They have marched from far away
Ere the dawning of the day,
And the morning saw them masters of Cremona.

Cremona. Stanza 1

One favor we entreat,
We were called a little early, and our toilet's not complete.

We've no quarrel with the shirt,
But the breeches wouldn't hurt,
For the evening air is chilly in Cremona.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> In the surprise attack on Cremona, Feb. 1, 1702, the Irish Brigade rushed out to resist the invaders, without waiting to dress.

Through the naked battalions the cuirassiers go; —
But the man, not the dress, makes the soldier,
I trow.

THOMAS OSBORNE DAVIS [1814-1845]:
The Surprise of Cremona, St. 6

ARTHUR WENTWORTH HAMILTON EATON [1859-1937]

O give me a place in the garden of
song,

I would linger and labor there all summer long,

There are corners to care for, stray beds to make bloom,

I ask not for wages, I only seek room
In the garden of song.

The Garden of Song. Stanza 1

Pity the man who has no gift of speech
For those compelling thoughts, that peace and pain,

That press unsought from the remoter reach

Of mind and soul to the near heart and brain.

Compelling Thoughts. Stanza 1

His heart was breaking, breaking,
'Neath loads of care and wrong;
Who blames the man for taking
What life denied so long?

HAVELOCK ELLIS [1859-1939]

To be a leader of men one must turn one's back on men.

Introduction to J. K. HUYS-MANS' Against the Grain

The text of the Bible is but a feeble symbol of the Revelation held in the text of Men and Women.

God is an Unutterable Sigh in the Human Heart, said the old German mystic.

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> There is a justice according to which we may deprive a man of life, but none that permits us to deprive him of death: this is merely cruelty. — NIETZSCHE: Human, All Too Human, Prevention of Suicide

When he went blundering back to God,
His songs half written, his work half done,
Who knows what paths his bruised feet trod,
What hills of peace or pain he won?

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE: Of One Self-Slain, St. 1

Without an element of the obscene there can be no true and deep æsthetic or moral conception of life. . . . It is only the great men who are truly obscene. If they had not dared to be obscene they could never have dared to be great.

Impressions and Comments

The omnipresent process of sex, as it is woven into the whole texture of our man's or woman's body, is the pattern of all the process of our life.

The New Spirit

The Normans who came over to England with William the Conqueror and constituted the proud English nobility were simply a miscellaneous set of adventurers, professional fighting men, of unknown, and no doubt for the most part undistinguished, lineage. William the Conqueror himself was the son of a woman of the people.

The Task of Social Hygiene.

Introduction

If men and women are to understand each other, to enter into each other's nature with mutual sympathy, and to become capable of genuine comradeship, the foundation must be laid in youth.

Ibid. Chap. 1

The larger our great cities grow, the more irresistible becomes the attraction which they exert on the children of the country, who are fascinated by them, as the birds are fascinated by the lighthouse or the moths by the candle.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 5

An urban life saps that calm and stolid strength which is necessary for all great effort and stress, physical or intellectual.

Ibid.

Prosperity and civilization are far from being synonymous terms. The working community that is suddenly glutted by an afflux of work and wages is in exactly the same position as the savage who is suddenly enabled to fill himself with a rich mass of decaying blubber. It is prosperity, it is not civilization.

The Task of Social Hygiene.

Chap. 5

There are few among us who have not suffered from too early familiarity with the Bible and the conceptions of religion.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The German feels nothing of that sensitive jealousy with which the French seek to guard private life and the rights of the individual.

Ibid. Chap. 9

The Englishman's reverence for the individual's rights goes beyond the Frenchman's, for in France there is a tendency to subordinate the individual to the family, and in England the interests of the individual predominate.

Ibid.

Holland is one of the traditional lands of freedom; it was the home of independent intellect, of free religion, of autonomous morals, when every other country in Europe was closed to these manifestations of the spirit.

Ibid.

When Charles V retired in weariness from the greatest throne in the world to the solitude of the monastery at Yuste, he occupied his leisure for some weeks in trying to regulate two clocks. It proved very difficult. One day, it is recorded, he turned to his assistant and said: "To think that I attempted to force the reason and conscience of thousands of men into one mould, and I cannot make two clocks agree!"

Ibid.

The extension of trade is a matter of tariffs rather than of war, and in any case the trade of a country with its own acquisitions by conquest is a comparatively insignificant portion of its total trade.

Ibid. Chap. 10

<sup>1</sup> It is well known that a number of eminent men have been born in London; but, in the course of a somewhat elaborate study of the origins of British men of genius, I have not been able to find that any were genuinely Londoners by descent.—A Study of British Genius

So far as business and money are concerned, a country gains nothing by a successful war, even though that war involves the acquisition of immense new provinces.

The Task of Social Hygiene.
Chap. 10

Conquest brings self-conceit and intolerance, the reckless inflation and dissipation of energies. Defeat brings prudence and concentration; it ennobles and fortifies.

Ibid.

A nation's art-products and its scientific activities are not mere national property; they are international possessions, for the joy and service of the whole world. The nations hold them in trust for humanity.

Ibid.

There has never been any country at every moment so virtuous and so wise that it has not sometimes needed to be saved from itself.

Ibid.

Those persons who are burning to display heroism may rest assured that the course of social evolution will offer them every opportunity.

Ibid.

The immense value of becoming acquainted with a foreign language is that we are thereby led into a new world of tradition and thought and feeling.

Ibid. Chap. 11

While some would claim for the English the supreme poetic literature, there can be no doubt that the French own the supreme prose literature of modern Europe.

Ibid.

The family only represents one aspect, however important an aspect, of a human being's functions and activities. . . . A life is beautiful and ideal, or the reverse, only when we have taken into our consideration the social as well as the family relationship.

Little Essays of Love and Virtue.
Chap. 1

One can know nothing of giving aught that is worthy to give unless one also knows how to take.

Little Essays of Love and Virtue.
Chap. 1

That indeed were a world fit to perish, wherein the moralist had set up the ignoble maxim: Safety first.

Ibid. Chap. 2

The by-product is sometimes more valuable than the product.

Ibid. Chap. 3

It has taken God — or Nature, if we will — unknown millions of years of painful struggle to evolve Man, and to raise the human species above that helpless bondage to reproduction which marks the lower animals.

Ibid.

All civilization has from time to time become a thin crust over a volcano of revolution.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The greatest task before civilization at present is to make machines what they ought to be, the slaves, instead of the masters of men.

Ibid.

The art of dancing stands at the source of all the arts that express themselves first in the human person. The art of building, or architecture, is the beginning of all the arts that lie outside the person; and in the end they unite.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 2

Dancing is the loftiest, the most moving, the most beautiful of the arts, because it is no mere translation or abstraction from life; it is life itself.

Ibid.

The place where optimism most flourishes is the lunatic asylum.

Ibid. Chap. 3

He who would walk sanely amid the opposing perils in the path of life always needs a little optimism; he also needs a little pessimism.

Ibid.

Thinking in its lower grades is comparable to paper money, and in its higher forms it is a kind of poetry.

Ibid.

In philosophy, it is not the attainment of the goal that matters, it is the things that are met with by the way.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 2

Every man of genius sees the world at a different angle from his fellows, and there is his tragedy.

Ibid.

The mathematician has reached the highest rung on the ladder of human thought.

Ibid.

The verse of every young poet, however original he may afterwards grow, usually has plainly written across it the rhythmic signature of some great master. . . . The same thing happens with prose, but the rhythm of the signature is less easy to hear.

Ibid. Chap. 4

The most obviously beautiful things in the world of Nature are birds and flowers and the stones we call precious.

Ibid.

All the conventional rules of the construction of speech may be put aside if a writer is thereby enabled to follow more closely and lucidly the form and process of his thought.

Ibid.

If at some period in the course of civilization we seriously find that our science and our religion are antagonistic, then there must be something wrong either with our science or with our religion.

Ibid. Chap. 5

A man must not swallow more beliefs than he can digest.

Ibid.

The Promised Land always lies on the other side of a wilderness.

Ibid.

What we call "morals" is simply blind obedience to words of command.

Ibid. Chap. 6

There is no occasion for any one who is told that he has written a "moral" book to be unduly elated, or when he is told that his book is "immoral" to be unduly cast down. The significance of these adjectives is strictly limited. Neither the one nor the other can have more than the faintest effect on the march of the great compact majority of the social army.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 6

The world's greatest thinkers have often been amateurs; for high thinking is the outcome of fine and independent living, and for that a professorial chair offers no special opportunities,

Ibid.

For the artist life is always a discipline, and no discipline can be without pain. That is so even of dancing, which of all the arts is most associated in the popular mind with pleasure. To learn to dance is the most austere of disciplines.

Ibid.

The methods of statistics are so variable and uncertain, so apt to be influenced by circumstance, that it is never possible to be sure that one is operating with figures of equal weight.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The prevalence of suicide, without doubt, is a test of height in civilization; it means that the population is winding up its nervous and intellectual system to the utmost point of tension and that sometimes it snaps.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

The more rapidly a civilization progresses, the sooner it dies for another to arise in its place.

Ibid.

The sun and the moon and the stars would have disappeared long ago — as even their infinitely more numerous analogues on the earth beneath are likely to disappear — had they happened to be within the reach of predatory human hands.

Ibid.

Had there been a Lunatic Asylum in the suburbs of Jerusalem, Jesus Christ would infallibly have been shut up in it at the outset of his public career. That interview with Satan on a pinnacle of the Temple would alone have damned him, and everything that happened after could but have confirmed the diagnosis. The whole religious complexion of the modern world is due to the absence from Jerusalem of a Lunatic Asylum.

KENNETH GRAHAME

[1859-1932]

As a rule, indeed, grown-up people are fairly correct on matters of fact; it is in the higher gift of imagination that they are so sadly to seek.

The Golden Age. The Finding of the Princess

A man can stand very much in the cause of love: poverty, aunts, rivals, barriers of every sort, — all these only serve to fan the flame. But personal ridicule is a shaft that reaches the very vitals.

Ibid. "Young Adam Cupid"

The year was in its yellowing time, and the face of Nature a study in old gold.

Ibid. A Harvesting

Those who painfully and with bleeding feet have scaled the crags of mastery over musical instruments have yet their loss in this, — that the wild joy of strumming has become a vanished sense.

Ibid.

I began to like this man. He answered your questions briefly and to the point, and never tried to be funny. I felt I could be confidential with him.

Ibid. The Roman Road

Monkeys, who very sensibly refrain from speech, lest they should be set to earn their livings.

Ibid. "Lusisti Satis"

Grown-up people really ought to be more careful. Among themselves it may seem but a small thing to give their word and take back their word.

The Magic Ring

There is nothing — absolutely nothing — half so much worth doing as simply messing about in boats, . . . or with boats. . . . In or out of 'em, it doesn't matter.

The Wind in the Willows. Chap. 1

Villagers all, this frosty tide,
Let your doors swing open wide,
Though wind may follow, and snow be-
side,

Yet draw us in by your fire to bide;
Joy shall be yours in the morning!

Ibid. Chap. 5 (Carol)

ALFRED EDWARD HOUSMAN

[1859-1936]

Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough.

A Shropshire Lad. II

Now, of my threescore years and ten,
Twenty will not come again,
And take from seventy springs a score,
It only leaves me fifty more.

Ibid.

Clay lies still, but blood's a rover;
Breath's a ware that will not keep.
Up, lad: when the journey's over
There'll be time enough to sleep.

Ibid. IV, Revue

The sun moves always west;
The road one treads to labour
Will lead one home to rest,
And that will be the best.

Ibid. VII

If the heats of hate and lust
In the house of flesh are strong,
Let me mind the house of dust
Where my sojourn shall be long.

Ibid. XII

When I was one-and-twenty
I heard a wise man say,
"Give crowns and pounds and guineas
But not your heart away;
Give pearls away and rubies
But keep your fancy free."
But I was one-and-twenty,
No use to talk to me.

Ibid. XIII

"The heart out of the bosom
Was never given in vain;
'Tis paid with sighs a-plenty
And sold for endless rue."

And I am two-and-twenty,
And Oh, 'tis true, 'tis true.
A Shropshire Lad. XIII

His folly has not fellow
Beneath the blue of day
That gives to man or woman
His heart and soul away.
Ibid. XIV

To-day, the road all runners come,
Shoulder-high, we bring you home,
And set you at your threshold down,
Townsmen of a stiller town.

Ibid. XIX, To an Athlete Dying Young

And silence sounds no worse than cheers
After earth has stopped the ears.
Ibid.

That is the land of lost content,
I see it shining plain,
The happy highways where I went
And cannot come again.
Ibid. XL

Oh, 'tis jesting, dancing, drinking
Spins the heavy world around.
If young hearts were not so clever,
Oh, they would be young for ever:
Think no more; 'tis only thinking
Lays lads underground.
Ibid. XLIX

With rue my heart is laden
For golden friends I had,
For many a rose-lipt maiden
And many a lightfoot lad.
Ibid. LIV

By brooks too broad for leaping
The lightfoot boys are laid.
Ibid.

And cowards' funerals, when they come,
Are not wept so well at home,
Therefore, though the best is bad,
Stand and do the best, my lad.

Ibid. LVI, The Day of Battle
Why, if 'tis dancing you would be,
There's brisker pipes than poetry.
Ibid. LXII

Oh many a peer of England brews
Livelier liquor than the Muse,
And malt does more than Milton can
To justify God's ways to man.

Ale, man, ale's the stuff to drink
For fellows whom it hurts to think.
A Shropshire Lad. LXII

Oh, I have been to Ludlow fair
And left my necktie God knows where,
And carried half way home, or near,
Pints and quarts of Ludlow beer.
Ibid.

Luck's a chance, but trouble's sure,
I'd face it as a wise man would,
And train for ill and not for good.
Ibid.

Mithridates, he died old.
Ibid.

We'll to the woods no more,
The laurels all are cut,<sup>1</sup>
The bowers are bare of bay
That once the Muses wore.

Last Poems. Foreword
The troubles of our proud and angry
dust

Are from eternity, and shall not fail.
Bear them we can, and if we can we must.

Shoulder the sky, my lad, and drink your ale.
Ibid. IX

Could man be drunk for ever
With liquor, love, or fights,
Lief should I rouse at morning
And lief lie down of nights.
Ibid. X

The laws of God, the laws of man,
He may keep that will and can;
Not I: let God and man decree
Laws for themselves and not for me.
Ibid. XII

And how am I to face the odds
Of man's bedevilment and God's?
I, a stranger and afraid
In a world I never made.
Ibid.

And then the clock collected in the tower
Its strength, and struck.

Ibid. XV, Eight O'Clock

falling,

<sup>1</sup> Nous n'irons plus au bois, les lauriers sont coupés (We'll go no longer to the woods, the laurel trees are clipped).

The hour when earth's foundations fled, Followed their mercenary calling
And took their wages and are dead.

Last Poems. XXXVII, Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries<sup>1</sup>

Oh stay with company and mirth
And daylight and the air;
Too full already is the grave
Of fellows that were good and brave
And died because they were.

Ibid. XXXVIII

They say my verse is sad: no wonder;
Its narrow measure spans
Tears of eternity, and sorrow,
Not mine, but man's.

More Poems [1936]

The thoughts of others
Were light and fleeting,
Of lovers' meeting
Or luck or fame;
Mine were of trouble
And mine were steady,
So I was ready
When trouble came.

Ibid. VI

The rainy Pleiads wester,
Orion plunges prone,
And midnight strikes and hastens,
And I lie down alone.

Ibid. XI

Oh, the pearl seas are yonder,
The gold and amber shore;
Shires where the girls are fonder,
Towns where the pots hold more.

Ibid. XXXIII

Silent hills indenting
The orange band of eve.

Ibid.

We now to peace and darkness
And earth and thee restore
Thy creature that thou madest
And wilt cast forth no more.

Ibid. XLVII, For My Funeral

Good night. Ensured release,
Imperishable peace,
Have these for yours.<sup>2</sup>
While sky and sea and land

And earth's foundations stand
And heaven endures.

More Poems [1936]

XLVIII, Alta Quies

I was brought up in the Church of England and in the High Church party, which is much the best religion I have ever come across. But Lemprière's "Classical Dictionary," read when I was eight, made me prefer paganism to Christianity; I abandoned Christianity at thirteen, and became an atheist at twenty-one.

Autobiographical note written for a French translation of his poems

I am not a pessimist but a peyorist (as George Eliot said she was not an optimist but a meliorist); and that philosophy is founded on my observation of the world, not on anything so trivial and irrelevant as personal history. Secondly, I did not begin to write poetry in earnest until the really emotional part of my life was over; and my poetry, so far as I could make out, sprang chiefly from physical causes, such as a relaxed sore throat during my most prolific period, the first five months of 1895.

Ibid.

Good literature continually read for pleasure must, let us hope, do some good to the reader: must quicken his perception though dull, and sharpen his discrimination though blunt, and mellow the rawness of his personal opinions.

The Name and Nature of Poetry<sup>1</sup>

Poems very seldom consist of poetry and nothing else; and pleasure can be derived also from their other ingredients.

Ibid.

Good religious poetry, whether in Keble or Dante or Job, is likely to be most justly appreciated and most discriminatingly relished by the undevout.

Even when poetry has a meaning, as it usually has, it may be inadvisable to draw it out. . . . Perfect understanding will sometimes almost extinguish pleasure.

The Name and Nature of Poetry

Experience has taught me, when I am shaving of a morning, to keep watch over my thoughts, because, if a line of poetry strays into my memory, my skin bristles so that the razor ceases to act. . . . The seat of this sensation is the pit of the stomach.

Ibid.

I have seldom written poetry unless I was rather out of health, and the experience, though pleasurable, was generally agitating and exhausting.

Ibid.

I can no longer expect to be revisited by the continuous excitement under which in the early months of 1895 I wrote the greater part of my other book [A Shropshire Lad].

ELBERT HUBBARD

[1859-1915]

It is not book learning young men need, nor instruction about this and that, but a stiffening of the vertebrae which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to act promptly, concentrate their energies, do a thing — "carry a message to Garcia."

A Message to Garcia<sup>2</sup>

The man who is anybody and who does anything is surely going to be criticized, vilified, and misunderstood. This is a part of the penalty for greatness, and every great man understands it; and understands, too, that it is no proof of greatness. The final proof of

Get Out or Get in Line

JEROME KLAPKA JEROME

Let your boat of life be light, packed with only what you need — a homely home and simple pleasures, one or two friends, worth the name, some one to love and some one to love you,<sup>1</sup> a cat, a dog, and a pipe or two, enough to eat and enough to wear, and a little more than enough to drink; for thirst is a dangerous thing.

Ebbs and flows the muddy Pei-Ho by the Gulf of Pechili,

Idly floats beside the stream the Lazy junks along the lazy river lag.

Let the long, long years drip slowly on that lost and ancient land,
Ever dear one scene to hearts of gal-

There's a hand-clasp and a heart-throb, there's a word we understand:

Know you what it is to be a child?
It is to be something very different from the man of to-day. It is to have a spirit yet streaming from the waters of baptism; it is to believe in love, to believe in loveliness, to believe in belief; it is to be so little that the elves can reach to whisper in your ear; it is to turn pumpkins into coaches, and mice into horses, lowness into loftiness, and nothing into everything, for each child has its fairy godmother in its soul.

Children's griefs are little, certainly;
but so is the child, so is its endurance,
so is its field of vision, while its nervous

The most gladsome thing in the world is that few of us fall very low; the saddest that, with such capabilities, we seldom rise high.

The Little Minister. Chap. 3

If it's heaven for climate, it's hell for company.

Ibid.

It's a weary warld, and nobody bides in't.

Ibid. Chap. 4

Has it ever struck you that the trout's bite best on the Sabbath? God's critters tempting decent men.

Ibid. Chap. 8

We should be slower to think that the man at his worst is the real man, and certain that the better we are ourselves the less likely is he to be at his worst in our company. Every time he talks away his own character before us he is signifying contempt for ours.

Ibid. Chap. 9

You canna expect to be baith grand and comfortable.

Ibid. Chap. 10

A house is never still in darkness to those who listen intently; there is a whispering in distant chambers, an unearthly hand presses the snib of the window, the latch rises. Ghosts were created when the first man woke in the night.

Ibid. Chap. 22

Let no one who loves be called altogether unhappy. Even love unreturned has its rainbow.

Ibid. Chap. 24

Them that has china plates themselfs is the maist careful no to break the china plates of others.

Ibid. Chap. 26

The humourist's like a man firin' at a target — he doesna ken whether he hits or no till them at the target tells 'im.

A Window in Thrums. Chap. 5

Those who bring sunshine to the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves.

Ibid. Chap. 18

Though it was really one laugh with a tear in the middle I counted it as two.

Margaret Ogilvy. Chap. 1

So much of what is great in Scotland has sprung from the closeness of the family ties.

Ibid. Chap. 2

We never understand how little we need in this world until we know the loss of it.

Ibid. Chap. 8

In dinner talk it is perhaps allowable to fling on any faggot rather than let the fire go out.

Tommy and Grizel. Chap. 3

Do you believe in fairies?

Peter and Wendy. Chap. 13

Eyes that say you never must, nose that says why don't you? and a mouth that says I rather wish you could: such is the portrait of Mary A — .

The Little White Bird. Chap. 1

Shall we make a new rule of life from tonight: always to try to be a little kinder than is necessary?

Ibid. Chap. 4

The only ghosts, I believe, who creep into this world, are dead young mothers, returned to see how their children fare. There is no other inducement great enough to bring the departed back.

Ibid.

She was the thing we call romance, which lives in the little hut beyond the blue haze of the pine-woods.

Ibid. Chap. 9

I am in danger, I see, of being included among the whimsical fellows.

Ibid.

Every maid, I say, is for him who can know her. The others had but followed the glamour in which she walked, but I had pierced it and found the woman.

Ibid.

The reason birds can fly and we can't is simply that they have perfect faith, for to have faith is to have wings.

Ibid. Chap. 14

Poets are people who despise money except what you need for today.

Ibid. Chap. 15

When a great man dies — and this was one of the greatest since Shakespeare — the immortals await him at the top of the nearest hill.

George Meredith<sup>1</sup>

When you come to write my epitaph, Charles, let it be in these delicious words, "She had a long twenty-nine."<sup>2</sup>

Rosalind

One's religion is whatever he is most interested in, and yours is Success.

The Twelve-Pound Look

Alick: What is charm, exactly, Maggie?

Maggie: Oh, it's — it's a sort of bloom on a woman. If you have it, you don't need to have anything else; and if you don't have it, it doesn't much matter what else you have. Some women, the few, have charm for all; and most have charm for one. But some have charm for none.<sup>3</sup>

What Every Woman Knows. Act I

The tragedy of a man who has found himself out.

Every man who is high up loves to think that he has done it all himself; and the wife smiles, and lets it go at that.

Do you keep to the old topics? King Charles's head;<sup>1</sup> and Bacon wrote Shakespeare, or if he did not he missed the opportunity of his life. Don't forget to speak scornfully of the Victorian age; there will be time for meekness when you try to better it.

Ibid.

Mighty are the Universities of Scotland, and they will prevail. But even in your highest exultations never forget that they are not four, but five. The greatest of them is the poor, proud homes you come out of, which said so long ago: "There shall be education in this land."

Human life consists in mutual service. No grief, pain, misfortune, or "broken heart," is excuse for cutting off one's life while any power of service remains. But when all usefulness is over, when one is assured of an unavoidable and imminent death, it is the

I am the hero of this little tale;
 I'm Romeo, Romeo.

I am that sadly susceptible male;
 I'm Romeo, Romeo.

Scarce did a lover e'er do as I did,
 When his best girl to eternity slid;
 I took cold poison and I suicided.

I'm Romeo, Romeo.

 God clad the country
 In a green gown.

The Maker. Stanza 1

Lest Heaven be thronged with grey-beards hoary,
 God, who made boys for His delight,
 Stoops in a day of grief and glory

And calls them in, in from the night.
 When they come trooping from the war
 Our skies have many a young new star.

Friend, of my infinite dreams
Little enough endures;
Little howe'er it seems,
It is yours, all yours.
Faith hath a fleeting breath,
Hopes may be frail but fond,
But Love shall be Love till death,
And perhaps beyond.

The Gift

If it be well with him,
If it be well, I say,
I will not try with a childish cry
To draw him thence away:
Only my day is dim,
Only I long for him,
Where is my friend to-day?

My Friend

Thy name is writ in water, ay, 'tis writ
As when the moon, a chill and friendless thing,

Passes and writes her will upon
the tide,

And piles the ocean in a moving ring:

And every stagnant bay is brimmed
with it,

Each mast-fringed port, each estuary wide.

Keats

Land of Hope and Glory, Mother of the Free,

How shall we extol thee, who are born of thee?

Wider still and wider shall thy bounds
be set;

God, who made thee mighty, make thee
mightier yet.

Land of Hope and Glory. Chorus

Edward Fitzgerald said that he wished we had more lives of obscure persons; one wants to know what other people are thinking and feeling about it all. . . . If the dullest person in the world would only put down sincerely what he or she thought about his or her life, about work and love, religion and emotion, it would be a fascinating document.

GOLDSWORTHY LOWES
DICKINSON
[1862-1932]

Chinese poetry is of all poetry I know the most human and the least symbolic or romantic. It contemplates life just as it presents itself, without any veil of ideas, any rhetoric or sentiment; it simply clears away the obstruction which habit has built up between us and the beauty of things.

An Essay on the Civilizations of India, China, and Japan. Page 47

Consider the American continent! How simple it is! How broad! How large! How grand in design! A strip of coast, a range of mountains, a plain, a second range, a second strip of coast! That is all! Contrast the complexity of Europe, its lack of symmetry, its variety, irregularity, disorder and caprice! The geography of the two continents already foreshadows the differences in their civilizations.

A Modern Symposium

The United States of America — the greatest potential force, material, moral, and spiritual, in the world.

The Choice Before Us. Chap. 1

To the man who has the religion of peace, the supreme value is love. To the man who has the religion of war, the supreme value is strife.

Ibid. Chap. 3

Government is everywhere to a great extent controlled by powerful minorities, with an interest distinct from that of the mass of the people.

Ibid. Chap. 4

The true way for one civilization to "conquer" another is for it to be so obviously superior in this or that point that others desire to imitate it.

Ibid. Chap. 5

War is not "inevitable," but proceeds from definite and removable causes.

The Choice Before Us. Chap. 9

Nations are quite capable of starving every other side of life — education, sanitation, housing, public health, everything that contributes to life, physical, intellectual, moral, and spiritual, in order to maintain their armaments.

Ibid. Chap. 11

Every kind of discrimination is a protection of the incompetent against the competent, with the result that the motive to become competent is taken away.

Ibid. Chap. 12

What we commonly have in our mind when we speak of religion is a definite set of doctrines, of a more or less metaphysical character, formulated in a creed and supported by an organization distinct from the state.

*The Greek View of Life. Chap. 1,
Sect. 1*

A fundamental, and as many believe, the most essential part of Christianity, is its doctrine of reward and punishment in the world beyond; and a religion which had nothing at all to say about this great enigma we should hardly feel to be a religion at all.

Ibid. Sect. 11

All modern societies aim, to this extent at least, at equality, that their tendency, so far as it is conscious and avowed, is not to separate off a privileged class of citizens, set free by the labour of others to live the perfect life, but rather to distribute impartially to all the burdens and advantages of the state, so that every one shall be at once a labourer for himself and a citizen of the state.

Ibid. Chap. 2, Sect. 12

Dissatisfaction with the world in which we live and determination to realize one that shall be better, are the prevailing characteristics of the modern spirit.

Ibid. Chap. 5

ELLA HIGGINSON

[1862-1940]

Oh, every year hath its winter,
And every year hath its rain —

<sup>1</sup> This is the twilight of the kings. Western Europe of the people may be caught in this debacle, but never again. Eastern Europe of the kings will be remade and the name of God shall not give grace to a hundred square miles of broken bodies. If Divinity enters here it comes with a sword to deliver the people from the sword. It is the twilight of the kings. The republic marches east in Europe. — Editorial, The Chicago Tribune, Aug. 2, 1914

The little green tents where the sol-

In all ages the multitude has looked upon Barabbas as a less violent and dangerous disrupter of social laws than the Christ — not this man but Barabbas!

OLIVE SCHREIMER: From Man to Man, Chap. 7

The statesman throws his shoulders back, and straightens out his tie,
And says, "My friends, unless it rains,
the weather will be dry."
And when this thought into our brains has percolated through,
We common people nod our heads and loudly cry, "How true!"

The Statesman

There's a man in the world who is never turned down, wherever he chances to stray; he gets the glad hand in the populous town, out where the farmers make hay; he's greeted with pleasure on deserts of sand, and deep in the aisles of the woods: wherever he goes there's the welcoming hand — he's the Man Who Delivers the Goods.

The Man Who Delivers the Goods

Little drops of water poured into the milk, give the milkman's daughter lovely gowns of silk. Little grains of sugar mingled with the sand, make the grocer's assets swell to beat the band.

The hours I spent with thee, dear heart,
Are as a string of pearls to me;
I count them over, every one apart,
My rosary, my rosary.

My Rosary

Oh memories that bless — and burn!
Oh barren gain — and bitter loss!
I kiss each head and strive at last to learn
To kiss the cross,

Sweetheart,
To kiss the cross.

My Rosary

Sage-brush to kindle with,
Quaking-asp to glow,
Pine-roots to last until the dawn-winds blow.

Oh smoke full of fancies,
And dreams gone to smoke,
At the camp-fires dead long ago!

A Ballad of Dead Camp-Fires

Oh master mine, lo I remember thee, —
But I am old and weak and near to death —

I cannot fawn and leap and be thy dog,

But, master, I have not forgotten thee.

There are two ways of spreading light:

The candle or the mirror that reflects

Vesalius in Zante

Somewhere I read, in an old book whose name

Is gone from me, I read that when the days

Of a man are counted, and his business
done,

There comes up the shore at evening,
with the tide,

To the place where he sits, a boat —

And in the boat, from the place where he sits, he sees,

Dim in the dusk, dim and yet so familiar,

The faces of his friends long dead; and knows

They come for him, brought in upon
the tide,

<sup>1</sup> See Pope, p. 220.

I was never allowed to read the popular American children's books of my day because, as my mother said, the children spoke bad English without the author's knowing it.

A Backward Glance. Chap. 3

My parents and their group, though they held literature in great esteem, stood in nervous dread of those who produced it. Washington Irving, Fitz-Greene Halleck and William Dana were the only representatives of the disquieting art who were deemed uncontaminated by it; though Longfellow, they admitted, if a popular poet, was nevertheless a gentleman. As for Herman Melville, a cousin of the Van Rensselaers, and qualified by birth to figure in the best society, he was doubtless excluded from it by his deplorable Bo-hemianism, for I never heard his name mentioned, or saw one of his books.

Ibid.

To [Henry] James's intimates, however, these elaborate hesitancies, far from being an obstacle, were like a cobweb bridge flung from his mind to theirs, an invisible passage over which one knew that silver-footed ironies, veiled jokes, tiptoe malices, were stealing to explode a huge laugh at one's feet.

that he must fly at once to Baghdad, and imploring leave to borrow his Majesty's swiftest horse.

The Sultan asked why he was in such haste to go to Baghdad. "Because," the youth answered, "as I passed through the garden of the Palace just now, Death was standing there, and when he saw me he stretched out his arms as if to threaten me, and I must lose no time in escaping from him."

The young man was given leave to take the Sultan's horse and fly; and when he was gone the Sultan went down indignantly into the garden, and found Death still there. "How dare you make threatening gestures at my favourite?" he cried; but Death, astonished, answered: "I assure your Majesty I did not threaten him. I only threw up my arms in surprise at seeing him here, because I have a tryst with him tonight in Baghdad."<sup>1</sup>

My atheism, like that of Spinoza, is true piety towards the universe and denies only gods fashioned by men in their own image, to be servants of their human interests.

Ibid. On My Friendly Critics

The human race, in its intellectual life, is organized like the bees: the masculine soul is a worker, sexually atrophied, and essentially dedicated to impersonal and universal arts; the feminine is a queen, infinitely fertile, omnipresent in its brooding industry, but passive and abounding in intuitions without method and passions without justice.

As our private memory is not a merely passive retention of sensations, so in literature the critical spirit is at work as a conscious energy of selection. The function of criticism is far removed from the surrender to luxurious revery.

say that it is a prodigious incantation. There are tones that call up all ghosts of youth and joy and tenderness; — there are tones that evoke all phantom pains of perished passion; — there are tones that revive all dead sensations of majesty and might and glory, — all expired exultations, — all forgotten magnanimities. Well may the influence of music seem inexplicable to the man who idly dreams that his life began less than a hundred years ago! He who has been initiated into the truth knows that to every ripple of melody, to every billow of harmony, there answers within him, out of the Sea of Death and Birth, some eddying immeasurable of ancient pleasure and pain.

Men should be judged, not by their tint of skin,

The Gods they serve, the Vintage that they drink,

Nor by the way they fight, or love, or sin,

But by the quality of thought they think.

Men Should Be Judged

Often devotion to virtue arises from sated desire.

I Arise and Go Down to the River.

Stanza 6

RUDYARD KIPLING

[1865-1936]

I have eaten your bread and salt.

I have drunk your water and wine.
The deaths ye died I have watched beside

And the lives ye led were mine.

Departmental Ditties. Prelude,

Stanza 1

Who shall doubt "the secret hid Under Cheops' pyramid"
Was that the contractor did
Cheops out of several millions?

A General Summary. Stanza 4

Little Tin Gods on Wheels.

Public Waste. Stanza 4

Trust me, To-day's Most Indispensa-
bles,
Five hundred men can take your place or mine.

The Last Department. Stanza 8

The blush that flies at seventeen
Is fixed at forty-nine.

My Rival. Stanza 2

The toad beneath the harrow knows Exactly where each tooth-point goes;
The butterfly upon the road
Preaches contentment to that toad.

Pagett, M.P.

Cross that rules the Southern Sky!
Stars that sweep, and turn, and fly,
Hear the Lovers' Litany: —

"Love like ours can never die!"<sup>1</sup>

The Lovers' Litany. Stanza 2

But seamen learnt — what landmen
know —

That neither gifts nor gain

<sup>1</sup> The tender motto, writ so fair,
Upon his 'bacco box he views,
Nancy the poet, Love the muse:

"If you loves I as I loves you,
No pair so happy as we two."

CHARLES DIBDIN [1745-1814]:
The Token

Can hold a winking Light o' Love
Or Fancy's flight restrain.

The Ballad of Fisher's Boarding-House. Stanza 9

And a woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke.

The Betrothed. Stanza 25

The temper of chums, the love of your wife,<sup>1</sup> and a new piano's tune —

Which of the three will you trust at the end of an Indian June?

Certain Maxims of Hafiz. IV

Pleasant the snaffle of Courtship, improving the manners and carriage;

But the colt who is wise will abstain from the terrible thorn-bit of Marriage.

Ibid. XI

If She have spoken a word, remember thy lips are sealed,

And the Brand of the Dog is upon him
by whom is the secret revealed.

If She have written a letter, delay not an instant but burn it.

Ibid. XV

If there be trouble to Herward, and a lie of the blackest can clear,

Lie, while thy lips can move or a man is alive to hear.

Ibid.

My Son, if a maiden deny thee and scuffingly bid thee give o'er,

Yet lip meets with lip at the lastward.
Get out! She has been there before.

They are pecked on the ear and the chin and the nose who are lacking in lore.

Ibid. XVI

You'll never plumb the Oriental mind,
And if you did, it isn't worth the toil.

One Viceroy Resigns

How can I turn from any fire
On any man's hearthstone?

I know the wonder and desire
That went to build my own!

The Fires. Stanza 7

<sup>1</sup> It is as foolish to make experiments upon the constancy of a friend, as upon the chastity of a wife. — DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON: Letter to James Boswell, Sept. 9, 1779

It may be that Fate will give me life and leave to row once more — ‘

Set some strong man free for fighting
as I take awhile his oar.

But to-day I leave the galley. Shall I curse her service then?

God be thanked! Whate’er comes after,
I have lived and toiled with Men!

The Galley-Slave. Stanza 10

I am sick of endless sunshine, sick of blossom-burdened bough.

Give me back the leafless woodlands where the winds of Springtime range —

Give me back one day in England, for it’s Spring in England now!

In Springtime. Stanza 1

They rise to their feet as He passes by, gentlemen unafraid.

Barrack Room Ballads.

Dedication, Stanza 5

He scarce had need to doff his pride or slough the dross of Earth —

E’en as he trod that day to God so walked he from his birth,

In simpleness and gentleness and honour and clean mirth.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. Stanza 7

Since spoken word Man’s Spirit stirred
Beyond his belly-need,

What is is Thine of fair design
In Thought and Craft and Deed.

To the True Romance. Stanza 3

It’s like a book, I think, this bloomin’
world,

Which you can read and care for just so long,

But presently you feel that you will die
Unless you get the page you’re readin’

done,

An’ turn another — likely not so good;
But what you’re after is to turn ’em all.

Sestina of the Tramp-Royal.

Stanza 6

And the tunes that mean so much to you alone —

Common tunes that make you choke
and blow your nose,

Vulgar tunes that bring the laugh that brings the groan —

I can rip your very heartstrings out with those.

The Song of the Banjo. Stanza 6

“Something hidden. Go and find it. Go and look behind the Ranges —

Something lost behind the Ranges.
Lost and waiting for you. Go!”

The Explorer. Stanza 2

Anybody might have found it but —
His Whisper came to Me!

Ibid. Stanza 18

Who hath desired the Sea? — the sight of salt water unbounded —

The heave and the halt and the hurl and the crash of the comber wind-hounded?

The Sea and the Hills. Stanza 1

So and no otherwise — hillmen desire their Hills!

Ibid.

Lord, send a man like Robbie Burns to sing the Song o’ Steam!

M’Andrew’s Hymn

Interdependence absolute, foreseen, ordained, decreed,

To work, ye’ll note, at any tilt an’ every rate o’ speed.

Ibid.

But I ha’ lived an’ I ha’ worked. Be thanks to Thee, Most High!

An’ I ha’ done what I ha’ done — judge
Thou if ill or well.

Ibid.

Absolute, unvarying rigidity, rigidity!

The Ship that Found Herself

They copied all they could follow, but they couldn’t copy my mind.

The “Mary Gloster”

Overloaded, undermanned, meant to founder, we

Euchred God Almighty’s storm, bluffed
the Eternal Sea!

The Ballad of the “Bolivar.”

Stanza 12

King Solomon drew merchantmen

Because of his desire

For peacocks, apes, and ivory,
From Tarshish unto Tyre.<sup>1</sup>

The Merchantmen. Stanza 1

<sup>1</sup> Wolcott Balestier [1861-1891], Mrs. Kipling’s brother.

The God of Fair Beginnings
Hath prospered here my hand —
The cargoes of my lading,
And the keels of my command.

The Song of Diego Valdez.

Stanza 1

The Liner she's a lady, and if a war should come,
The Man-o'-War's 'er 'usband, and 'e'd bid 'er stay at home;
But, oh, the little cargo-boats that fill with every tide!
'E'd 'ave to up an' fight for them for they are England's pride.

The Liner She's a Lady. Stanza 5

And it's time to turn on the old trail,
our own trail, the out trail,
Pull out, pull out, on the Long Trail —
the trail that is always new!

The Long Trail. Stanza 1

There be triple ways to take, of the eagle or the snake,

Or the way of a man with a maid; <sup>1</sup>

But the sweetest way to me is a ship's upon the sea

In the heel of the North-East Trade.

Ibid. Stanza 4

We have fed our sea for a thousand years

And she calls us, still unfed,
Though there's never a wave of all her waves

But marks our English dead.

The Song of the Dead. II, Stanza 1

If blood be the price of admiralty,

Lord God, we ha' paid in full!

Ibid.

Deeper than speech our love, stronger than life our tether,

But we do not fall on the neck nor kiss
when we come together.

England's Answer

So long as The Blood endures,

I shall know that your good is mine: ye shall feel that my strength is yours:

In the day of Armageddon, at the last great fight of all,

That Our House stand together and the pillars do not fall.

Ibid.

Go to your work and be strong, halting not in your ways,
Baulking the end half-won for an instant dole of praise.

Stand to your work and be wise — certain of sword and pen,

Who are neither children nor God, but men in a world of men!

England's Answer

Ever the wide world over, lass,

Ever the trail held true,

Over the world and under the world,

And back at the last to you.

The Gipsy Trail. Stanza 2

The wild hawk to the wind-swept sky,

The deer to the wholesome wold

And the heart of a man to the heart of a maid,

As it was in the days of old.

Ibid. Stanza 11

Daughter am I in my mother's house;
But mistress in my own.

Our Lady of the Snows.<sup>1</sup> Stanza 1

Enslaved, illogical, elate,

He greets the embarrassed Gods, nor fears

To shake the iron hand of Fate

Or match with Destiny for beers.

An American. Stanza 13

Buy my English posies!

Kent and Surrey may —

Violets of the Undercliff

Wet with Channel spray;

Cowslips from a Devon combe —

Midland furze afire.

The Flowers. Stanza 1

They change their skies above them,

But not their hearts that roam.

The Native-born. Stanza 2

Last toast — and your foot on the table! —

A health to the Native-born!

Ibid. Stanza 11

There's a Legion that never was 'listed,
That carries no colours or crest.

The Lost Legion. Stanza 1

Old Days! The wild geese are fighting, Head to the storm as they faced it before!

For where there are Irish there's loving and fighting,

<sup>1</sup> See Proverbs, XXX, 18 and 19.

<sup>1</sup> The Dominion of Canada.

And when we stop either, it's Ireland no more!

The Irish Guards. Stanza 4

And he wrote for them wonderful verses that swept the land like flame, Till the fatted souls of the English were scourged with the thing called Shame.

*The Last of the Light Brigade.
Stanza 8*

God gives all men all earth to love,
But since man's heart is small,
Ordains for each one spot shall prove Belovèd over all.

Sussex. Stanza 12

A fool there was and he made his prayer
(Even as you and I!)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair
(We called her the woman who did not care)
But the fool he called her his lady fair —
(Even as you and I!)

The Vampire. Stanza 1

Oh, the years we waste and the tears
we waste
And the work of our head and hand Belong to the woman who did not know . . .
And did not understand.

Ibid. Stanza 2

When Earth's last picture is painted, and the tubes are twisted and dried,
When the oldest colours have faded,
and the youngest critic has died,
We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it — lie down for an æon or two,
Till the Master of All Good Workmen shall put us to work anew.

When Earth's Last Picture Is Painted. Stanza 1

And only the Master shall praise us,
and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame;
But each for the joy of the working,
and each, in his separate star, Shall draw the Thing as he sees It for the God of Things as They Are!

Ibid. Stanza 3

Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet,
Till Earth and Sky stand presently at God's great Judgment Seat.
But there is neither East nor West, Border, nor Breed, nor Birth,
When two strong men stand face to face, though they come from the ends of the earth!

The Ballad of East and West

Send the road is clear before you when old Spring-fret comes o'er you,
And the Red Gods call for you!

The Feet of the Young Men

Make ye no truce with Adam-zad —
the Bear that walks like a Man!

The Truce of the Bear. Stanza 2

The Goth and the shameless Hun!

The Rowers. Stanza 11

Cock the gun that is not loaded, cook
the frozen dynamite —
But oh, beware my Country, when my Country grows polite!

Et Dona Ferentes. Stanza 11

A Tinker out of Bedford,
A vagrant oft in quod,
A private under Fairfax,
A minister of God, —
Two hundred years and thirty Ere Armageddon came
His single hand portrayed it,
And Bunyan was his name!

The Holy War. Stanza 1

Broke to every known mischance, lifted over all
By the light sane joy of life, the buckler of the Gaul;
Furious in luxury, merciless in toil.

France [1913]

Strictest judge of her own worth, gentlest of man's mind,
First to face the Truth and last to leave old Truths behind — France, beloved of every soul that loves or serves its kind!

Ibid.

All we have of freedom, all we use or
know —
This our fathers bought for us long and
long ago.

The Old Issue. Stanza 5

Ancient Right unnoticed as the breath
we draw —
Leave to live by no man's leave, underneath the law.

The Old Issue. Stanza 6

We have had a jolly good lesson, and it serves us jolly well right!

The Lesson [1902]. Stanza 2

We have forty million reasons for failure, but not a single excuse.

Ibid. Stanza 8

With the flannelled fools at the wicket or the muddied oafs at the goals.

The Islanders [1902]

No doubt but ye are the People — absolute, strong, and wise;

Whatever your heart has desired ye have not withheld from your eyes.

On your own heads, in your own hands,
the sin and the saving lies!

Ibid.

Creation's cry goes up on high

From age to cheated age:

"Send us the men who do the work
For which they draw the wage!"

The Wage-Slaves. Stanza 3

This is our lot if we live so long and labour unto the end —

That we outlive the impatient years and the much too patient friend:

And because we know we have breath in our mouth and think we have thoughts in our head,

We shall assume that we are alive,
whereas we are really dead.

The Old Men. Stanza 1

Take up the White Man's burden.

The White Man's Burden.

Stanza 1

The tumult and the shouting dies;

The Captains and the Kings depart:

Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,

An humble and a contrite heart.

Recessional. Stanza 2

Lest we forget — lest we forget! <sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> Best by remembering God, say some,
We keep our high imperial lot.

Fortune, I fear, hath oftenest come

When we forgot — when we forgot.

SIR WILLIAM WATSON:

The Unknown God, St. 10

Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!

Recessional. Stanza 3

But, spite all modern notions, I've found her first and best —

The only certain packet for the Islands of the Blest.

The Three-Decker. Stanza 1

One was Admiral of the North from Solway Firth to Skye,

And one was Lord of the Wessex Coast and all the lands thereby,

And one was Master of the Thames from Limehouse to Blackwall,

And he was Chaplain of the Fleet —
the bravest of them all.

The Rhyme of the Three Captains
[1890] <sup>1</sup>

The Devil whispered behind the leaves,
"It's pretty, but is it Art?"

The Conundrum of the Workshops

Ah! what avails the classic bent

And what the cultured word,

Against the undoctored incident

That actually occurred?

The Benefactors. Stanza 1

It is not learning, grace nor gear,

Nor easy meat and drink,

But bitter pinch of pain and fear

That makes creation think.

Ibid. Stanza 3

There are nine and sixty ways of constructing tribal lays,

And every single one of them is right.

In the Neolithic Age. Stanza 5

You must hack through much deposit

Ere you know for sure who was it

Came to burial with such honour in the Files

(Only seven seasons back beneath the Files).

"Very great our loss and grievous —

So our best and brightest leave us,

And it ends the Age of Giants," say
the Files.

The Files

When your Imp of Blind Desire

Bids you set the Thames afire,

<sup>1</sup> William Black, Thomas Hardy, Walter Besant. The poem is an elaborate satire on the lack of copyright protection in the United States at that time.

You'll remember men have done so — in the Files.

The Files

And the naked soul of Tomlinson grew white as a rain-washed bone.

Tomlinson

The sin they do by two and two they must pay for one by one.

Ibid.

Those who have passed to the further shore

May be hailed — at a price — on the road to En-dor.<sup>1</sup>

En-Dor. Stanza 2

The female of the species is more deadly than the male.

The Female of the Species.

Stanza 1

For as we come and as we go (and deadly-soon go we!)

The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

A Pilgrim's Way. Stanza 1

And when they bore me overmuch, I will not shake mine ears, Recalling many thousand such whom I have bored to tears.

And when they labour to impress, I will not doubt nor scoff;

Since I myself have done no less and — sometimes pulled it off.

Ibid. Stanza 3

"Goodbye, Romance" . . . and all unseen

Romance brought up the nine-fifteen.

The King

The Sons of Mary seldom bother, for they have inherited that good part;

But the Sons of Martha favour their Mother of the careful soul and the troubled heart.<sup>2</sup>

The Sons of Martha. Stanza 1

It is their care in all the ages to take the buffet and cushion the shock.

It is their care that the gear engages; it is their care that the switches lock.

<sup>1</sup> Behold there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at En-dor. — 1 Samuel, XXVIII, 7

<sup>2</sup> Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things. — Luke, X, 41

Raise ye the stone or cleave the wood<sup>1</sup>
to make a path more fair or flat;

Lo, it is black already with blood some Son of Martha spilled for that!

Not as a ladder from Earth to Heaven,
not as a witness to any creed,

But simple service simply given to his own kind in their common need.

The Sons of Martha. Stanza 7

They have cast their burden upon the Lord, — and the Lord He lays it on Martha's Sons!

Ibid. Stanza 8

My son was killed while laughing at some jest. I would I knew

What it was, and it might serve me in a time when jests are few.

Epitaphs of the War. A Son

They've taken of his buttons off an' cut his stripes away,

An' they're hangin' Danny Deever in the mornin'.

Danny Deever. Stanza 5

We aren't no thin red 'eroes.<sup>2</sup>

Tommy. Stanza 4

Single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints.

Ibid.

It's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an'
"Chuck 'im out, the brute!"

But it's "Savior of 'is country," when the guns begin to shoot.

Ibid. Stanza 5

So 'ere's to you, Fuzzy-Wuzzy, at your
'ome in the Soudan;

You're a pore benighted 'eathen but a first-class fightin' man.

"Fuzzy-Wuzzy." Stanza 1

'E's all 'ot sand an' ginger when alive,
An' 'e's generally shammin' when 'e's dead.

Ibid. Stanza 4

Though I've belted you and flayed you,
By the livin' Gawd that made you,
You're a better man than I am, Gunga
Din!

'Ave you 'eard o' the Widow at Windsor
 With a hairy gold crown on 'er 'ead?

The Widow at Windsor. Stanza 1

Walk wide o' the Widow at Windsor,
 For 'alf o' Creation she owns:
 We 'ave bought 'er the same with the sword an' the flame,
 An' we've salted it down with our bones!

On the road to Mandalay,
 Where the flyin'-fishes play,
 An' the dawn comes up like thunder outer China 'crost the Bay!

Mandalay. Stanza 1

I've a neater, sweeter maiden in a cleaner, greener land.

Ibid. Stanza 5

Ship me somewheres east of Suez,
 where the best is like the worst,
 Where there aren't no Ten Commandments an' a man can raise a thirst.

Ibid. Stanza 6

Back to the Army again, sergeant,
 Back to the Army again.
 Out o' the cold an' the rain.

"Back to the Army Again."

Refrain

For there isn't a job on the top of the earth the beggar don't know, nor do.

"Soldier an' Sailor Too." Stanza 2

'E's a sort of a bloomin' cosmopolouse
 — soldier an' sailor too.

Ibid.

To stand an' be still to the Birken'ead drill<sup>1</sup> is a damn' tough bullet to chew.

Ibid. Stanza 5

I've taken my fun where I've found it.

The Ladies. Stanza 1

An' I learned about women from 'er.

Ibid. Refrain

For the Colonel's Lady an' Judy O'Grady
 Are sisters under their skins!

Ibid. Stanza 8

We met upon the level an' we parted
 on the Square,

<sup>1</sup> See F. H. Doyle, page 475.

An' I was Junior Deacon in my Mother-
 Lodge out there!

The Mother-Lodge. Refrain

The backbone of the Army is the Non-commissioned Man!

The 'Eathen. Stanza 18

For to admire an' for to see,
 For to be'old this world so wide —
 It never done no good to me
 But I can't drop it if I tried!

"For to Admire." Refrain

He's an absent-minded beggar, but he heard his country's call,
 And his reg'ment didn't need to send to find him!

The Absent-minded Beggar.

Stanza 3

A kopje is always a kopje,
 And a Boojer is always a Boer!

Two Kopjes. Stanza 2

Boots — boots — boots — boots —
 movin' up and down again!
 There's no discharge in the war!<sup>1</sup>

Boots. Stanza 1

The bachelor may risk 'is 'ide
 To 'elp you when you're downed;
 But the married man will wait beside Till the ambulance comes round.

The Married Man. Stanza 5

The married man must sink or swim
 An' — 'e can't afford to sink!

Ibid. Stanza 7

If England was what England seems,
 An' not the England of our dreams,
 But only putty, brass, an' paint,
 'Ow quick we'd drop 'er! But she ain't.

The Return. Refrain

Of all the trees that grow so fair,
 Old England to adorn,
 Greater are none beneath the Sun,
 Than Oak, and Ash, and Thorn.<sup>2</sup>

A Tree Song. Stanza 1

Take of English earth as much
 As either hand may rightly clutch.
 In the taking of it breathe
 Prayer for all who lie beneath.

A Charm. Stanza 1

<sup>2</sup> Glasgerion swore a full great othe,
 By oake, and ashe, and thorne.

PERCY: Reliques, Glasgerion, St. 19

Ride with an idle whip, ride with an unused heel;
But, once in a way, there will come a
day
When the colt must be taught to feel
The lash that falls, and the curb that galls, and the sting of the row-elled steel.

The Conversion of Aurelian McGoggin

If there be good in that I wrought
Thy Hand compelled it, Master, Thine.

"My New-cut Ashlar." Stanza 2

One stone the more swings into place
In that dread Temple of Thy worth.
It is enough that, through Thy Grace,
I saw nought common on Thy Earth.

Ibid. Stanza 6

Help me to need no aid from men
That I may help such men as need!

Ibid. Stanza 7

One man in a thousand, Solomon says,
Will stick more close than a brother.

The Thousandth Man. Stanza 1

But the Thousandth Man will stand by your side
To the gallows-foot — and after!

Down to Gehenna or up to the Throne,
He travels the fastest who travels alone.

The Winners. Stanza 1

King over all the children of pride
Is the Press.

The Press. Stanza 5

The end of the fight is a tombstone white with the name of the late deceased,
And the epitaph drear: "A Fool lies here who tried to hustle the East."

The Naulahka. Chap. 5

"Let us now praise famous men" —<sup>1</sup>
Men of little showing —
For their work continueth,
Broad and deep continueth,
Greater than their knowing.

A School Song. Stanza 1

When Pack meets with Pack in the Jungle, and neither will go from the trail,

Lie down till the leaders have spoken
— it may be fair words shall prevail.

The Law of the Jungle. Stanza 6

Now these are the Laws of the Jungle, and many and mighty are they;
But the head and the hoof of the Law and the haunch and the hump is — Obey!

Ibid. Refrain

Anything green that grew out of the mould

Was an excellent herb to our fathers of Old.

"Our Fathers of Old." Stanza 1

Wonderful little our fathers knew,
Half their remedies cured you dead —
Most of their teaching was quite untrue.

Ibid. Stanza 3

By — they are by with mirth and tears,
Wit or the works of Desire —
Cushioned about on the kindly years
Between the wall and the fire.

"Our Fathers Also." Stanza 2

Land of our Birth, we pledge to thee
Our love and toil in the years to be.

The Children's Song. Stanza 1

Teach us Delight in simple things,
And Mirth that has no bitter springs.

Ibid. Stanza 7

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same.

If. Stanza 2

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings — nor lose the common touch.

Ibid. Stanza 4

Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And — which is more — you'll be a Man, my son!

The Necessitarian. Stanza 3

When the body that lived at your single will,
With its whimper of welcome, is stilled
(how still!)

<sup>1</sup> Let us now praise famous men. — Apocrypha, Ecclesiasticus, XLIV, 1

When the spirit that answered your every mood
Is gone — wherever it goes — for good,

You will discover how much you care,
And will give your heart to a dog to tear.

The arrows of our anguish
Fly farther than we guess.

The Rabbi's Song. Stanza 3
I keep six honest serving-men
(They taught me all I knew);
Their names are What and Why and When

And How and Where and Who.

The Elephant's Child. Stanza 1
I'd love to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old!

The Beginning of the Armadilloes.
Stanza 4

When the ship goes wop (with a wiggle between)

And the steward falls into the soup-turen. . . .

Why, then you will know (if you haven't guessed)

You're "Fifty North and Forty West!"

How the Whale Got His Throat

We must go back with Policeman
Day —

Back from the City of Sleep!

The City of Sleep. Stanza 1
Until thy feet have trod the Road
Advise not wayside folk.

The Comforters. Stanza 1

Roses red and roses white
Plucked I for my love's delight.
She would none of all my posies —
Bade me gather her blue roses.

Blue Roses. Stanza 1
Lo, I have wrought in common clay
Rude figures of a rough-hewn race.

Soldiers Three. Dedication,
Stanza 2

If I were damned of body and soul, I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother o' mine.

Mother o' Mine
Them that asks no questions isn't told a lie.

A Smuggler's Song. Stanza 6

When the robust and Brass-bound Man commissioned first for sea

His fragile raft, Poseidon laughed, and "Mariner," said he . . .

"You the unhoodwinked wave shall test
— the immediate gulf condemn — Except ye owe the Fates a jest, be slow to jest with them."

Poseidon's Law
If once you have paid him the Danegeld

You never get rid of the Dane.

Danegeld. Stanza 4
Far — oh, very far behind,
So far she cannot call to him,
Comes Tegumai alone to find
The daughter that was all to him.

Merrow Down. Stanza 11
Say "we," "us" and "ours" when you're talking instead of "you fellows" and "I."

Norman and Saxon. Stanza 6
At Runnymede, at Runnymede,
What say the reeds at Runnymede?

The Reeds of Runnymede.
Stanza 1

When Crew and Captain understand each other to the core,
It takes a gale and more than a gale to put their ship ashore.

Together. Stanza 2
The snow lies thick on Valley Forge,
The ice on the Delaware,
But the poor dead soldiers of King
George

They neither know nor care.

The American Rebellion. II, After,
Stanza 1
If you're off to Philadelphia in the

Philadelphia. Stanza 1
When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre,
He'd 'eard men sing by land an' sea;
An' what he thought 'e might require,
'E went an' took — the same as me!

When 'Omer Smote 'is Bloomin'
Lyre. Stanza 1

Our England is a garden, and such gardens are not made By singing: — "Oh, how beautiful!" and sitting in the shade.

The Glory of the Garden. Stanza 5

Oh, Adam was a gardener, and God who made him sees
That half a proper gardener's work is done upon his knees.

Ibid. Stanza 8

Our realm is diminished
With Great-Heart away.

Great-Heart (Theodore Roosevelt). Stanza 1

Inscription to Robley D. Evans

As I pass through my incarnations in every age and race,
I make my proper prostrations to the gods of the Market Place;
Peering through reverent fingers, I watch them flourish and fall,
And the Gods of the Copybook Maxims, I notice, outlast them all.

The Gods of the Copybook Maxims. Stanza 1

Master, this is Thy Servant.
He is rising eight weeks old.
He is mainly Head and Tummy.
His legs are uncontrolled.

His Apologies [Scottish terrier]

There rise her timeless capitals of empires daily born,
Whose plinths are laid at midnight and whose streets are packed at morn;
And here come tired youths and maids that feign to love or sin
In tones like rusty razor blades to tunes like smitten tin.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH<sup>3</sup>

[1865-1946]

The minds of all of us are haunted by thoughts which have not yet found

<sup>3</sup> Two weeks before his death, a friend asked him half jokingly if he had discovered any meaning in life. "Yes," he replied, "there is a meaning; at least, for me, there is one thing expression, and it is often the happy fortune of the aphorist to drag from its obscurity some such dim intuition, or confused bit of experience; to clothe it in words and bring it into daylight for our delighted recognition.

*A Treasury of English Aphorisms:
Introduction [1928]*

What a bore it is, waking up in the morning always the same person. I wish I were unflinching and emphatic, and had big, bushy eyebrows and a Message for the Age. I wish I were a deep Thinker, or a great Ventriloquist.

Trivia. Green Ivory

But when in modern books, reviews, and thoughtful magazines I read about the Needs of the Age, its Complex Questions, its Dismays, Doubts, and Spiritual Agonies, I feel an impulse to go out and comfort that bewildered Epoch, to wipe away its tears, still its cries, and speak edifying words of Consolation to it.

Ibid. My Mission

And as at night I went past the Abbey, saw its walls towering high and solemn among the Autumn stars, I pictured to myself the white population in the vast darkness of its interior — all that hushed people of Heroes — ; not dead, I would think them, but animated with a still kind of life, and at last, after all their intolerable toils, the sounding tumult of battle, and perilous sea-paths, resting there, tranquil and satisfied and glorious, amid the epitaphs and allegorical figures of their tombs; — those high-piled, trophied, shapeless Abbey tombs, that long ago they toiled for, and laid down their gallant lives to win.

Ibid. The Abbey at Night

There are two things to aim at in life: first, to get what you want; and, after that, to enjoy it. Only the wisest of mankind achieve the second.

That we should practise what we preach is generally admitted; but anyone who preaches what he and his hearers practise must incur the gravest moral disapprobation.

Why are happy people not afraid of Death, while the insatiable and the unhappy so abhor that grim feature?

When they come downstairs from their Ivory Towers, Idealists are apt to walk straight into the gutter.

The indefatigable pursuit of an unattainable Perfection, even though it consist in nothing more than in the pounding of an old piano, is what alone gives a meaning to our life on this unavailing star.

Ibid.

Eat with the Rich, but go to the play with the Poor, who are capable of Joy.

so happily together, that he left his name to float down through Time on the wings of a phrase and a flower.

Ibid.

Thank heavens, the sun has gone in,
and I don't have to go out and enjoy it.

Ibid.

What with its crude awakenings can youth know of the rich returns of awareness to elderly people from their afternoon naps; of their ironic thoughts and long retrospections, and the sweetness they taste of not being dead?

Ibid.

How I should like to distil my dis-esteem of my contemporaries into prose so perfect that all of them would have to read it!

Ibid.

Unsaleability is almost the hall-mark, in modern times, of quality in writing . . . the enormous and half-educated publics of present-day England and America, though welcoming the novels of our famous novelists, have as a rule acclaimed as masterpieces books that were soon forgotten, while ignoring at first all that was exquisite and rare.

Romantic plays with happy endings are almost of necessity inferior in artistic value to true tragedies. Not, one would hope, simply because they end happily; happiness in itself is certainly not less beautiful than grief; but because a tragedy in its great moments can generally afford to be sincere, while romantic plays live in an atmosphere of ingenuity and make-believe.

Preface to The Iphigenia in Tauris of Euripides

The enemy has no definite name, though in a certain degree we all know him. He who puts always the body before the spirit, the dead before the living; who makes things only in order to sell them; who has forgotten that there is such a thing as truth, and measures the world by advertisement or by money; who daily defiles the beauty that surrounds him and makes vulgar the tragedy.

The trees that grow together in the sun
 Become as one, and must as one remain;
 A pair that live a dozen years as one,
 Never, my friend, can be as two again.

To a Friend. Stanza 4

And when the fragrant day is done,
 Night — and a shoal of stars.

The Road to Anywhere. Stanza 5
 Deathless Cadell! <sup>1</sup> Though long since turned to clay,

Your name lives on with the immortal Jane's.

She sought you one rememberable day,
 Humbly, and had her labor for her pains.

Left-Handed Immortality

To you the chance was offered to inscribe

Upon her title page your lustrous name,

But, true to the traditions of your tribe,
 You turned her down, and — gained a lasting fame!

HERBERT GEORGE WELLS

[1866-1946]

The past is but the beginning of a beginning, and all that is and has been is but the twilight of the dawn. . . . A day will come when beings who are now latent in our thoughts and hidden in our loins shall stand upon this earth as one stands upon a footstool, and shall laugh and reach out their hands amid the stars.

The Discovery of the Future
 [1901]

Nothing could have been more obvious to the people of the early twentieth century than the rapidity with which war was becoming impossible. And as certainly they did not see it. They did not see it until the atomic bombs burst in their fumbling hands.

The World Set Free [1914]

How encumbered the world had become! It was ailing with a growth of unmeaning things. It was entangled, feverish, confused. It was in sore need of release, and I suppose that nothing less than the violence of those bombs could have released it and made it a healthy world again. . . . You who are younger cannot imagine the mixture of desperate hope and protesting despair in which we who could believe in the possibilities of science lived in those years before atomic energy came.

Ibid.

The catastrophe of the atomic bombs which shook men out of cities and businesses and economic relations, shook them also out of their old-established habits of thought, and out of the lightly held beliefs and prejudices that came down to them from the past.

Ibid.

Human history becomes more and more a race between education and catastrophe.

The Outline of History. Chap. 15
 [1920]

The professional military mind is by necessity an inferior and unimaginative mind; no man of high intellectual quality would willingly imprison his gifts in such a calling.

Ibid. Chap. 40

The Great War and the Petty Peace

Ibid

Human history is in essence a history of ideas.

Ibid.

Every one of these hundreds of millions of human beings is in some form seeking happiness. . . . Not one is altogether noble nor altogether trustworthy nor altogether consistent; and not one is altogether vile. Not a single one but has at some time wept.

The Outline of History. Chap. 40

A federation of all humanity, together with a sufficient measure of social justice to ensure health, education, and a rough equality of opportunity, would mean such a release and increase of human energy as to open a new phase in human history.

Ibid. Chap. 41

Our true nationality is mankind.

Ibid.

An artist who theorizes about his work is no longer artist but critic.

The Temptation of Harringay

While the poor little affairs of obscure, industrious men of letters are made the subject of intensive research, the far more romantic, thrilling and illuminating documents about the seekers and makers of great fortunes, are neither gathered nor cherished.

The Work, Wealth and Happiness of Mankind. Chap. 10 [1931]

In England we have come to rely upon a comfortable time-lag of fifty years or a century intervening between the perception that something ought to be done and a serious attempt to do it.

Ibid. Chap. 11

The Shape of Things to Come.<sup>1</sup>

Title of book of social prognostics [1933]

The crazy combative patriotism that plainly threatens to destroy civilization is very largely begotten by the schoolmaster and the schoolmistress in their history lessons. They take the growing mind at a naturally barbaric phase and they inflame and fix its barbarism.

The Informative Content of Education [1937]

Ibid.

You don't know what marriage is.
Day after day, year after year. It's no

the National Metropolis*, BEN PERLEY POORE
[1820-1887] quotes this reply of Senator Judah P. Benjamin [1811-1884] to a Senator of German extraction who taunted him with being a Jew: "The gentleman will please remember that when his half-civilized ancestors were hunting the wild boar in the forests of Silesia, mine were the Princes of the earth."

Dramatic Values [1911]

Germany lay at our feet, a world's wonder of downfall, a very Lucifer, fallen, broken, bereaved beyond all the retributive griefs which Greek tragedy shows you afflicting the great who were insolent, wilful, and proud. But it was not enough for our small epicures of revenge. They wanted to twist the enemy's wrists, where he lay bound, and to run pins into his eyes.

The general idea, of course, in any first class laundry, is to see that no shirt or collar ever comes back twice.

A questionnaire is a sheet of questions or inquiries sent round broadcast and supposed to deal with some kind of social investigation. Some of these questions come direct from the insane asylums, but others purport to come from students, investigators, and social workers.

All, all are sleeping on the hill.

Spoon River Anthology. The Hill.

Out of me unworthy and unknown
The vibrations of deathless music;
"With malice toward none, with charity for all."

Ibid. Anne Rutledge

I am Anne Rutledge who sleep beneath these weeds,

Beloved in life of Abraham Lincoln,
Wedded to him, not through union,
But through separation.
Bloom forever, O Republic,
From the dust of my bosom!

Ibid.

My boy, wherever you are,
Work for your soul's sake,
That all the clay of you, all of the dross
of you,
May yield to the fire of you,
Till the fire is nothing but light.

And there is the silence of age, Too full of wisdom for the tongue to utter it

In words intelligible to those who have not lived

The great range of life.

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY

[1869-1910]

Jill-o'er-the-ground is purple blue,
Blue is the quaker-maid,
The wild geranium holds its dew
Long in the boulder's shade.

Gloucester Moors. Stanza 2

This earth is not the steadfast place
We landsmen build upon;
From deep to deep she varies pace,
And while she comes is gone.

Ibid. Stanza 4

But on, but on does the old earth steer
As if her port she knew.

Ibid. Stanza 5

But thou, vast outbound ship of souls,
What harbor town for thee?
What shapes, when thy arriving tolls,
Shall crowd the banks to see?
Shall all the happy shipmates then Stand singing brotherly?

Ibid. Stanza 10

Then not to kneel, almost Seemed like a vulgar boast.

Good Friday. Stanza 9

Gigantic, wilful, young,
Chicago sitteth at the northwest gates,
With restless violent hands and casual tongue
Moulding her mighty fates.

An Ode in Time of Hesitation.

Stanza 3

The wars we wage
Are noble, and our battles still are won
By justice for us, ere we lift the gage.
We have not sold our loftiest heritage.
The proud republic hath not stooped to cheat

And scramble in the market-place of war.

An Ode in Time of Hesitation.

Stanza 5

Our fluent men of place and consequence

Fumble and fill their mouths with hollow phrase,

Or for the end-all of deep arguments
Intone their dull commercial liturgies.

Ibid. Stanza 7

Blindness we may forgive, but baseness
we will smite.

Ibid. Stanza 9

Praise, and never a whispered hint but the fight he fought was good;

Never a word that the blood on his sword was his country's own heart's-blood.

On a Soldier Fallen in the Philippines. Stanza 2

Shrill and high, newsboys cry
The worst of the city's infamy.

In New York. Stanza 4

The roaring street is hung for miles
With fierce electric fire.

Ibid. Stanza 9

Of wounds and sore defeat

I made my battle stay;

Winged sandals for my feet

I wove of my delay.

The Fire-Bringer.

WILLIAM HENRY OGILVIE

[1869- ]

Ragged, uncomely, and old and gray,

A woman walked in a northern town,
And through the crowd as she wound
her way

One saw her loiter and then stoop
down,

Putting something away in her old torn gown.

A Royal Heart. Stanza 1

"It's broken glass,"

She said: "I hae lifted it frae the street
To be oot o' the road o' the bairnies'
feet!"

Ibid. Stanza 3

The real ones, the right ones, the straight ones and the true,

The pukka, peerless sportsmen — their numbers are but few;

The men who keep on playing though
the sun be in eclipse,
The men who go on losing with a laugh
upon their lips.

The True Sportsman

When the last fence looms up, I am ready

And I hope when the rails of it crack, There'll be nothing in front but the master,

The huntsman, the fox and the pack.

JESSIE BELLE RITTENHOUSE
(MRS. CLINTON SCOLLARD)
[1869-1948]

My debt to you, Belovèd,
Is one I cannot pay
In any coin of any realm
On any reckoning day.

Debt

I worked for a menial's hire,
Only to learn, dismayed,
That any wage I had asked of Life,
Life would have paid.

My Wage

EDWIN ARLINGTON
ROBINSON
[1869-1935]

We cannot know how much we learn
From those who never will return,
Until a flash of unforeseen Remembrance falls on what has been.

Flammonde

To shake the tree
Of life itself and bring down fruit unheard-of.

Ben Jonson Entertains a Man from Stratford

I would have rid the earth of him
Once, in my pride. . . .
I never knew the worth of him
Until he died.

An Old Story

Life is the game that must be played:
This truth at least, good friends, we
know;

So live and laugh, nor be dismayed
As one by one the phantoms go.

Ballade by the Fire. Envoy

The songs of one who strove to play
The broken flutes of Arcady.

Ballade of Broken Flutes

There be two men of all mankind
That I'm forever thinking on:
They chase me everywhere I go, — Melchizedek, Ucalegon.

Two Men

Like dead, remembered footsteps on old floors.

The Pity of the Leaves

And thus we die,

Still searching, like poor old astronomers

Who totter off to bed and go to sleep
To dream of untriangulated stars.

Octaves. XI

Two kinds of gratitude: the sudden kind
We feel for what we take, the larger kind

We feel for what we give.

Captain Craig. Part I

Friends

To borrow my books and set wet glasses on them.

Ibid. Part II

The saddest among kings of earth,
Bowed with a galling crown, this man
Met rancor with a cryptic mirth,
Laconic — and Olympian.

The Master: Lincoln

And have one Titan at a time.

The laurel of approved iniquity.

Uncle Ananias

Miniver loved the Medici,
Albeit he had never seen one;
He would have sinned incessantly
Could he have been one.

Miniver Cheevy

Who of us, being what he is,
May scoff at others' ecstasies?
However we may shine to-day,
More-shining ones are on the way.

Atherton's Gambit

Death, like a friend unseen, shall say to me

My toil is over and my work begun.

The Three Taverns

If I have loosed
 A shaft of language that has flown sometimes
 A little higher than the hearts and heads
 Of nature's minions, it will yet be heard.
The Three Taverns
 I shall have more to say when I am
 dead.

John Brown

Like a physician who can do no good,
 But knows how soon another would have his fee
 Were he to tell the truth.

Avon's Harvest

Art's long hazard, where no man may choose
 Whether he play to win, or toil to lose.
Caput Mortuum

Love that's wise
 Will not say all it means.

Tristram. Part VII

For when a woman is left too much alone,
 Sooner or later she begins to think;
 And no man knows what then she may discover.

Ibid.

There is a little watchman in my heart
 Who is always telling me what time it is.

Ibid. Part VIII

Love must have wings to fly away from love,
 And to fly back again.

Ibid.

I like rivers
 Better than oceans, for we see both sides.
 An ocean is forever asking questions
 And writing them aloud along the shore.

Roman Bartholow. Part III

Once in a life, they tell us, and once only,
 So great a thing as a great love may come —

To crown us, or to mark us with a scar
 No craft or custom shall obliterate.

Ibid. Part IV

Of all small things
 That have the most infernal power to grow,

Few may be larger than a few small words

That may not say themselves and be forgotten.

Genevieve and Alexandra

Here where the wind is always north-north-east

And children learn to walk on frozen toes.

New England

HERBERT SHIPMAN

[1869-1930]

Across the gateway of my heart
 I wrote "No Thoroughfare,"
 But love came laughing by, and cried:
 "I enter everywhere."

No Thoroughfare, Stanza 1

CHARLES STELZLE

[1869-1941]

I believe in my job. It may not be a very important job, but it is mine. I believe in my fellowman. I believe in my country. If it is not the best country in the world, it is partly because I am not the kind of a man that I should be. I believe in my home. There is no other place in all the world which fills its place, and heaven can only be a larger home, with a Father who is all-wise and patient and tender. I believe in to-day. It is all that I can possess.
 The past is of value only as it can make the life of to-day fuller and more free.
 There is no assurance of to-morrow. I want to make good to-day.

I Believe: An Every-day Creed

GEORGE STERLING

[1869-1926]

Thou art the star for which all evening waits.

Aldebaran at Dusk

Like truant children going home
 We turn to thee, the beautiful and best.

The Final Faith

Into a crystal cup the dusky wine
 I pour, and, musing at so rich a shrine,

I watch the star that haunts its ruddy gloom.

A Wine of Wizardry

Let us be just with life. Although it bear

A thousand thorns for every perfect rose,

And though the happy day have mournful close,

Slumber awaits to house the mind from care.

The Balance

Poised above the caldrons of the storm,
Their hearts, contemptuous of death,
shall dare

His roads between the thunder and the sun.

NEWTON BOOTH

TARKINGTON

[1869-1946]

Penrod was doing something very unusual and rare, something almost never accomplished except by coloured people or by a boy in school on a spring day: he was doing really nothing at all. He was merely a state of being.

Penrod. Chap. 8

There are two things that will be believed of any man whatsoever, and one of them is that he has taken to drink.

Ibid. Chap. 10

They were upon their great theme: "When I get to be a man!" Being human, though boys, they considered their present estate too commonplace to be dwelt upon. So, when the old men gather, they say: "When I was a boy!" It really is the land of nowadays that we never discover.

Ibid. Chap. 26

CAROLYN WELLS

[1869-1942]

Youth is a silly, vapid state;
Old age with fears and ills is rife;
This simple boon I beg of Fate —
A thousand years of Middle Life!

My Boon

"A noble theme!" the tyro cried,
And straightway scribbled off a sonnet.

"A noble theme," the poet sighed,
"I am not fit to write upon it."

Humility

I love the Christmas-tide, and yet,
I notice this, each year I live;

I always like the gifts I get,
But how I love the gifts I give!

A Thought

He laughs best who laughs last,
The wiseacres vow;

But I am impatient,
I want to laugh now.

Delays Are Dangerous. Stanza 1

The books we think we ought to read are poky, dull and dry;

The books that we would like to read
we are ashamed to buy;

The books that people talk about we never can recall;

And the books that people give us, Oh,
they're the worst of all.

On Books

They borrow books they will not buy,
They have no ethics or religions;

I wish some kind Burbankian guy<sup>1</sup>

Could cross my books with homing pigeons.

Book-Borrowers

I don't believe the half I hear,

Nor the quarter of what I see!

But I have one faith, sublime and true.

That nothing can shake or slay;

Each spring I firmly believe anew

All the seed catalogues say!

One Firm Faith

The smile that won't come off.

Winning slogan in a contest

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT

[1869- ]

No house should ever be on any hill or on anything. It should be of the hill, belonging to it, so hill and house could

[1870— ]

America has never forgotten — and will never forget — the nobler things that brought her into being and that light her path — the path that was entered upon only one hundred and fifty years ago. . . . How young she is! It will be centuries before she will adopt that maturity of custom — the clothing of the grave — that some people believe she is already fitted for.

[1870— ]

The voyage which I was born to make in the end, and to which my desire has driven me, is towards a place in which everything we have known is forgotten, except those things which, as we knew them, reminded us of an original joy.

The Harbour in the North
Child, do not throw this book about,

Refrain from the unholy pleasure

Here richly, with ridiculous display,
The Politician's corpse was laid away.

While all of his acquaintance sneered and slanged,
I wept; for I had longed to see him hanged.

Epitaph on the Politician Himself
Oh, he didn't believe in Adam and Eve —

He put no faith therein;
His doubts began with the fall of man,
And he laughed at original sin.

Song of the Pelagian Heresy
The Tipple's aboard and the night is young,
The door's ajar and the Barrel is sprung,

I am singing the best song ever was sung
And it has a rousing chorus.

West Sussex Drinking Song.
Chorus

A lovely river, all alone,
She lingers in the hills and holds
A hundred little towns of stones,
Forgotten in the western wolds.

The Evenlode
How slow the Shadow creeps: but when 'tis past
How fast the Shadows fall. How fast!
How fast!

For a Sundial
Loss and Possession, Death and Life are one,
There falls no shadow where there shines no sun.

Ibid.
The moon on the one hand, the dawn on the other:
The moon is my sister, the dawn is my brother.
The moon on my left and the dawn on my right.
My brother, good morning: my sister, good night.

The Early Morning
The great hills of the South Country
They stand along the sea;
And it's there walking in the high woods

That I could wish to be,
And the men that were boys when I was a boy
Walking along with me.

The South Country. Stanza 2

If I ever become a rich man,
Or if ever I grow to be old,
I will build a house with deep thatch
To shelter me from the cold,
And there shall the Sussex songs be sung

And the story of Sussex told.

The South Country. Stanza 9
And the men that were boys when I was a boy
Shall sit and drink with me.

Ibid. Stanza 10
He does not die that can bequeath
Some influence to the land he knows,
Or dares, persistent, interweath
Love permanent with the wild hedge-rows;

He does not die, but still remains
Substantiate with his darling plains.

Duncton Hill. Stanza 1
They say that in the unchanging place,
Where all we loved is always dear,
We meet our mornings face to face
And find at last our twentieth year.

Dedicatory Ode
From quiet homes and first beginning,
Out to the undiscovered ends,
There's nothing worth the wear of winning

But laughter and the love of friends.

Ibid.
For no one, in our long decline,
So dusty, spiteful and divided,
Had quite such pleasant friends as mine,

Or loved them half as much as I did.
Ibid.

Of Courtesy, it is much less Than Courage of Heart or Holiness,
Yet in my walks it seems to me
That the Grace of God is in Courtesy.
Courtesy

Drinking when I had a mind to,
Singing when I felt inclined to.

The Path to Rome
Most holy Night, that still dost keep
The keys of all the doors of sleep,
To me when my tired eyelids close
Give thou repose.

The Night. Stanza 1
Do you remember an Inn,
Miranda?
Do you remember an Inn?

And the tadding and the spreading
Of the straw for a bedding,
And the fleas that tease in the High Pyrenees,
And the wine that tasted of the tar?

Tarantella

Noting one that brings
With careless step a mist of shadowy things:

Laughter and memories, and a few regrets,

Some honour, and a quantity of debts,
A doubt or two of sorts, a trust in God,
And (what will seem to you extremely odd)

His father's granfer's father's father's name,

Unspoilt, untitled, even spelt the same;
Charon, who twenty thousand times before

Has ferried Poets to the ulterior shore, Will estimate the weight I bear, and cry —

"Comrade!"

To Dives
I said to Heart, "How goes it?" Heart
replied:

"Right as a Ribstone Pippin!" But it lied.

In 1939 the Yale University Press published a Reply to Fra Giovanni from the Contessina. In this the Contessina remarks: "You owe something to one who was never content to be just your pupil but would be your temptation also. Had you no Contessina to remind you of mortality, how much less holy you would be."

It is possible that our race may be an accident, in a meaningless universe, living its brief life uncared-for, on this dark, cooling star: but even so — and all the more — what marvelous creatures we are! What fairy story, what tale from the Arabian Nights of the jinns, is a hundredth part as wonderful as this true fairy story of simians! It is so much more heartening, too, than the tales we invent. A universe capable of giving birth to many such accidents is — blind or not — a good world to live in, a promising universe.

What good can painting do to anyone?
I don't say never do it; far from that —

All through the windless night the clipper rolled
In a great swell with oily gradual heaves

Which rolled her down until her time-bells tolled,

Clang, and the weltering water moaned
like beebes.

The thundering rattle of slatting shook
the sheaves,

Startles of water made the swing ports
gush.

The sea was moaning and sighing and saying "Hush!"

Then in the sunset's flush they went

Perhaps, long since, there was a land

With the little beauty of a human face.

The Lemmings

Be with me Beauty for the fire is dying,
My dog and I are old, too old for ro-

I touch my country's mind, I come to grips

With half her purpose, thinking of these ships,

That art untouched by softness, all that line

Drawn ringing hard to stand the test of brine. . . .

That art of masts, sail crowded, fit to break,

Yet stayed to strength and backstayed into rake. . . .

They mark our passage as a race of men,

Earth will not see such ships as those again.

same.<sup>1</sup>

Commonplace people dislike tragedy, because they dare not suffer and cannot exult. The truth and rapture of man are holy things, not lightly to be scorned. A carelessness of life and beauty marks the glutton, the idler, and the fool in their deadly path across history.

The Tragedy of Nan. Preface
 [1909]

Man consists of body, mind, and imagination. His body is faulty, his mind untrustworthy, but his imagination has made him remarkable. In some centuries, his imagination has made life on this planet an intense practice of all the lovelier energies.

Shakespeare and Spiritual Life
 [1924]

There is another way to truth: by the minute examination of facts. That is the way of the scientist: a hard and noble and thankless way. It is not the way of the great poet, the rare unreasonable who comes once in ten generations. He apprehends truth by power: the truth which he apprehends cannot be defined, save by greater power, and there is no greater power.

One ought to see everything that one

This is no idle boast or empty story;

One of the glories of the English race

Ibid. Stanza 16

Wartime is a bad time for writers artists and thinking people. No clear

Impropriety is the soul of wit.

Ibid. Chap. 4

Conscience is the guardian in the individual of the rules which the community has evolved for its own preservation.

Ibid. Chap. 14

It is not true that suffering ennobles the character; happiness does that sometimes, but suffering, for the most part, makes men petty and vindictive.

Ibid. Chap. 17

A woman can forgive a man for the harm he does her, but she can never forgive him for the sacrifices he makes on her account.

O, agony infernal

O, secret trysts diurnal

That nobody must know.

O, vigilance eternal

Forsaking All Others [1931]

When a woman like that whom I've seen so much

All of a sudden drops out of touch,

Is always busy and never can Spare you a moment, it means a Man.

But lovers all, beware and know the strongest

Of wills may make a strong antagonist:

And that love will not always linger longest

With those who hold it in too clenched a fist.

I have loved England, dearly and deeply,
 Since that first morning, shining and pure,
 The white cliffs of Dover, I saw rising steeply

The White Cliffs<sup>1</sup> [1940]

Once I remember in London how I saw
 Pale shabby people standing in a long

They make other nations seem pale and flighty,
 But they do think England is God almighty,
 And you must remind them now and then
 That other countries breed other men.

Ibid.

Bad news is not broken by kind tactful word.
 The message is spoken ere the word can be heard.
 The eye and the bearing, the breath make it clear,
 And the heart is despairing before the ears hear.

I am American bred,
 I have seen much to hate here — much to forgive,
 But in a world where England is finished and dead,
 I do not wish to live.

In the queer mess of human destiny the determining factor is Luck. For every important place in life there are to-morrow,

Deliberate, comes down the starry track.

New Year. Stanza 8

There you will find what Every man needs,
Wild religion
Without any creeds.

Spring Market. Stanza 5

You can't forget a garden
When you have planted seed —
When you have watched the weather
And know a rose's need.

You Can't Forget a Garden

Villon among the birds is he,
A bold, bright rover, bad and free;
Yet not without such loveliness
As makes the curse upon him less.

The Blue Jay. Stanza 1

GILBERT EMERY
[1875-1945]

They're a poor lot, the men, all of 'em, and dirty, too — but the thing is, darlin', to get one that cleans easy.

Tarnish, Act III [1923]

Strange, we so toil to fashion for our unseen ends

The splendors that the tarnish of this world doth mar —

Such palaces that crumble to a ruined
age,

Such garbled memories upon Fame's fragile page —

When all the lasting glory of our life depends

Upon a little Child, a stable, and a star.

The Power and the Glory

ELLEN THORNEYCROFT
FOWLER
[1875-1929]

The inner half of every cloud

Is bright and shining;

I therefore turn my clouds about,

And always wear them inside out

To show the lining.

The Wisdom of Folly. Stanza 3

ROBERT FROST
[1875- ]

Something there is that doesn't love a wall.

Mending Wall

My apple trees will never get across
And eat the cones under his pines, I tell him.

He only says, "Good fences make good neighbors."

Mending Wall

I'd like to get away from earth awhile
And then come back to it and begin over.

May no fate wilfully misunderstand me
And half grant what I wish and snatch me away

Not to return. Earth's the right place for love:

I don't know where it's likely to go better.

Birches

The nearest friends can go
With anyone to death, comes so far short

They might as well not try to go at all.
No, from the time when one is sick to
death,

One is alone, and he dies more alone.
Friends make pretence of following to the grave,

But before one is in it, their minds are turned

And making the best of their way back to life

And living people, and things they understand.

Home Burial

Nothing to look backward to with pride,

And nothing to look forward to with hope.

The Death of the Hired Man

"Home is the place where, when you have to go there

They have to take you in." "I should have called it

Something you somehow haven't to deserve."

Ibid.

As a child misses the unsaid Good-
night,

And falls asleep with heartache.

The Black Cottage

Most of the change we think we see in life

Is due to truths being in and out of favour.

Ibid.

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:

Two roads diverged in a wood, and I —
I took the one less travelled by,
And that has made all the difference.

The Road Not Taken

The blue's but a mist from the breath of the wind,

A tarnish that goes at a touch of the hand.

Blueberries

The best way out is always through.

A Servant to Servants

Pressed into service means pressed out of shape.

The Self-Secker

I have been one acquainted with the night.

Acquainted with the Night

I wonder about the trees:

Why do we wish to bear

Forever the noise of these

More than another noise

So close to our dwelling-place?

The Sound of Trees

I met a Californian who would Talk California — a state so blessed,

He said, in climate none had ever died there

A natural death.

New Hampshire. Stanza 3

In the market with a climate.

Ibid.

Do you know,

Considering the market, there are more
Poems produced than any other thing?

No wonder poets sometimes have to seem

So much more business-like than business men.

Their wares are so much harder to get rid of.

Ibid. Stanza 17

She's one of the two best states in the Union.

Vermont's the other.

Ibid. Stanza 18

Anything I can say about New Hampshire

Will serve almost as well about Vermont,

Excepting that they differ in their mountains.

The Vermont mountains stretch extending straight;

New Hampshire mountains curl up in a coil.

New Hampshire. Stanza 19

The sun was warm but the wind was chill.

You know how it is with an April day:
When the sun is out and the wind is still,

You're one month on in the middle of May.

But if you so much as dare to speak,
A cloud comes over the sunlit arch,
A wind comes off a frozen peak,
And you're two months back in the middle of March.

Two Tramps in Mud Time

Don't join too many gangs. Join few if any.

Join the United States and join the family —

But not much in between unless a college.

Build Soil

Why make so much of fragmentary blue

In here and there a bird, or butterfly,
Or flower, or wearing-stone, or open eye,

When heaven presents in sheets the solid hue?

Fragmentary Blue. Stanza 1

Keep cold, young orchard. Good-bye and keep cold.

Dread fifty above more than fifty below.

Good-bye and Keep Cold

The woods are lovely, dark and deep.
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep.

Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening

Never ask of money spent
Where the spender thinks it went.
Nobody was ever meant
To remember or invent
What he did with every cent.

The Hardship of Accounting

If, as they say, some dust thrown in my eyes

Will keep my talk from getting over-wise,

I'm not the one for putting off the proof.
Let it be overwhelming.

Dust in the Eyes

No ship of all that under sail or steam
Has gathered people to us more and more

But Pilgrim-manned the Mayflower in a dream

Has been their anxious convoy in to shore.

Immigrants

Some say the world will end in fire,
Some say in ice.

From what I've tasted of desire
I hold with those who favor fire.

But if it had to perish twice,
I think I know enough of hate

To say that for destruction ice
Is also great

And would suffice.

Fire and Ice

Before man came to blow it right

The wind once blew itself untaught.
And did its loudest day and night

In any rough place where it caught

The Aim Was Song. Stanza 1

Man came to tell it what was wrong:
It hadn't found the place to blow;

It blew too hard — the aim was song.
Ibid. Stanza 2

Happiness makes up in height for what it lacks in length.

Title of poem

Any eye is an evil eye

That looks in onto a mood apart.

A Mood Apart

It couldn't be called ungentele,
But how frightfully departmental.

Departmental (funeral of an ant)

She shoulders with a wing so strong
She makes the whole flock move along.

A Blue Ribbon at Amesbury (a pullet)

I never dared be radical when young
For fear it would make me conservative when old.

Precaution

And were an epitaph to be my story
I'd have a short one ready for my own.<sup>1</sup>
I would have written of me on my stone:

I had a lover's quarrel with the world.
The Lesson for Today

MINNIE LOUISE HASKINS
[1875- ]

And I said to the man who stood at the gate of the year: "Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown." And he replied: "Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than light and safer than a known way."<sup>1</sup> So I went forth, and finding the Hand of God, trod gladly into the night. And He led me towards the hills and the breaking of day in the lone East.

FREDERICK PALMER
LATIMER
[1875-1940]

I wish I were a little rock,
A-sitting on a hill,
A-doing nothing, all day long,
But just a-sitting still;
I wouldn't eat, I wouldn't sleep,
I wouldn't even wash —
I'd sit and sit a thousand years,
And rest myself, b'Gosh!
The Weary Wisher

PERCY MACKAYE
[1875- ]

Because he never wore his sentient
heart
For crows and jays to peck, oft-times to

He seemed a silent fellow, who o'er-

A little world — we truly say

While days are young and careless-
hearted;

From clime to clime we speed to-day,

Earth's paths are cleared and ocean's
charted;

But ah, how large a world we stray
When thou and I are parted!

Alone?

Is he alone at whose right side rides Courage, with Skill within the cockpit and Faith upon the left? Does solitude surround the brave when Adventure leads the way and Ambition reads the dials? Is there no company with him for whom the air is cleft by Daring and the darkness is made light by Emprise?

True, the fragile bodies of his fellows do not weigh down his plane; true, the fretful minds of weaker men are lacking from his crowded cabin; but as his airship keeps her course he holds communion with those rarer spirits that inspire to intrepidity and by their sustaining potency give strength to arm, resource to mind, content to soul.

Alone? With what other companions would that man fly to whom the choice were given?

A man and what he loves and builds have but a day and then disappear; nature cares not — and renews the an-

there is the outrage.

Oh God of Battles, Lord of Might — a

I, 'oo've never prayed
Kneel on the dew-damp sands to say:
Oh, keep me through the coming day!
But, please remember, though I pray,
That I am not afraid.

So long! Wherever the fates take you,
To what embittered field, to what quick death,
I know, as I know God, you will be true

To our dear land, where faith and honour dwell;

Good fighter and good sportsman, fare

He yawned, and laid his cigaret aside,
And on the baggage-check, grimly stamped "Body," wrote

Two simple words. Scrawled words, with careless fingers. Just a note
Of this poor shipment's worthlessness.
She who had died,

Two days before, was sunshine, joy,
and life

To all of us.

Taking a very gloomy view of the future of the human race, let us suppose that it can only expect to survive for two thousand million years longer, a period about equal to the past age of the earth. Then, regarded as a being destined to live for threescore years and ten, humanity, although it has been born in a house seventy years old, is itself only three days old.

If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill,

Be a scrub in the valley — but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill;

Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

Be the Best of Whatever You Are.Stanza 1

The tree that never had to fight
For sun and sky and air and light;
That stood out in the open plain

The Plain Member. Stanza 3

The river belongs to the Nation,
The levee, they say, to the State;

The Government runs navigation,
The Commonwealth, though, pays the freight.

Now, here is the problem that's heavy —

Please, which is the right or the wrong —

When the water runs over the levee,
To whom does the river belong?

Uncle Sam's River. Stanza 1

Courage is to feel
The daily daggers of relentless steel
And keep on living.

Courage. Stanza 2

In one sense there is no death. The life of a soul on earth lasts beyond his departure. You will always feel that life touching yours, that voice speaking to you, that spirit looking out of other eyes, talking to you in the familiar things he touched, worked with, loved as familiar friends. He lives on in your life and in the lives of all others that knew him.<sup>1</sup>

Why tarries he to-day? And yester-

Adventure lit her stars without avail.

Ibid. Stanza 4

Somewhere he failed me, somewhere he slipped away —

Youth, in his ignorant faith and his

But Youth? —

Somewhere we lost each other, last year beauty of it, for the Sea of Galilee has Hugo, dur partisan

. combattit sous l'armure,

Et tint haut sa bannière au milieu du murmure

Il la maintient encore; et Vigny, plus secret,
Comme en sa tour d'ivoire, avant midi, rentrait

(Hugo, strong partisan

. fought in armor,

And held high his banner in the midst of the tumult:

He still holds it; and Vigny, more discreet,
As if in his tower of ivory, retired before noon).

The poet, retired in his Tower of Ivory, isolated, according to his desire, from the world of man, resembles, whether he so wishes or not, another solitary figure, the watcher enclosed for months at a time in a lighthouse at the head of a cliff. — JULES DE GAULTIER [1858- ]: La Guerre et les Destinées de l'Art

The sea has always been a seducer, a careless lying fellow, not feminine, as many writers imagine, but strongly masculine in its allurements. The king of the sea, with his whiskers of weed and his trident and dolphins, truly represents the main and gives it character. The sea, like a great sultan, supports thousands of ships, his lawful wives. These he caresses and chastises as the case may be. This explains the feminine gender of all proper vessels.

Belshazzar Court. Night Life

The milkman alone is enough to redeem the night from its undeserved evil reputation. among the gusty trees,

The moon was a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas,

The road was a ribbon of moonlight
over the purple moor,

And the highwayman came riding —
Riding — riding —

The highwayman came riding, up to the old inn-door.

What will you say when the world is dying?

What, when the last wild midnight

I caught the fire from those who went before,

The bearers of the torch who could not see

The goal to which they strained. I caught their fire,

And carried it, only a little way beyond;

But there are those who wait for it, I
know,

Those who will carry it on to victory.

So the world shall sing of them — the white cliffs of England,

White, the glory of her sails, the ban-

Only white may show the world the shield for which they died.

Queen Victoria. Chap. 6

In women's hearts he<sup>2</sup> had always read as in an open book. . . . He realised everything — the interacting complexities of circumstance and character, the pride of place mingled so inextricably with personal arrogance, the super-abundant emotionalism, the ingenuousness of outlook, the solid, the laborious respectability, shot through so incongruously by temperamental cravings for the coloured and the strange, the singular intellectual limitations, and the mysteriously essential female elements impregnating every particle of the whole. A smile hovered over his impassive features, and he dubbed Victoria "the Faery."

The alluring yet ineluctable problem of human folly.

Aliens. Preface [1917]

Steam engines are very human. Their very weaknesses are understandable. Steam engines do not flash back and blow your face in. They do not short-circuit and rive your heart with imponderable electric force. They have arms and legs and warm hearts and veins full of warm vapour. Give us steam every time. You know where you are with steam.

A Six-Hour Shift [1917]

A certain incomprehensible reticence of soul which is peculiar to the English.

Command. Chap. 6 [1922]

High-brow communists affect vast interest in pictures of machinery as art. They discover aesthetic qualities in a photograph of a broken crankshaft or the gear-wheels of a power press. A couple of screws lying on a mirror will send them into toothy ecstasies of appreciation.

More Harbours of Memory.

Introduction [1934]

The bourgeois artist who retains his integrity is the only really happy man in the modern world. He is unable to envy anybody because nobody has anything he can use which is not his already.

Ibid.

Most of our nautical fictions seem to be caulked with hokum . . . it is almost impossible to get Americans to view the life of a seafaring man save as a chapter out of Jack London's Sea Wolf or some equally virile and odious fiction.

[1881- ]

Come back and bring the summer in your eyes,

The peace of evening in your quiet ways;

Come back and lead again to Paradise
The errant days!

Come Back. Stanza 1

Let me live out my years in heat of blood!

Let me die drunken with the dreamer's wine!

Let me not see this soul-house built of mud

Go toppling to the dust — a vacant shrine!

Lct Me Live Out My Years
Give me high noon — and let it then be night!

Ibid.
And grant me, when I face the grisly
Thing,
One haughty cry to pierce the gray Perhaps!

O let me be a tune-swept fiddlestring That feels the Master Melody — and snaps!

Ibid.
Glowing through the gray rack
Breaks the Day —
Like a burning haystack
Twenty farms away!

Break of Day. Stanza 13

STUART PRATT SHERMAN
[1881-1926]

Nine-tenths of our university teach-

*Introduction [1923] to Ameri-

WILLIAM TEMPLE
(ARCHBISHOP OF YORK)
[1881-1944]

There is no structural organization of society which can bring about the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth, since all systems can be perverted by the selfishness of man.

The Malvern Manifesto<sup>1</sup>

Human status ought not to depend upon the changing demands of the economic process.

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> Drawn up by a Conference of the Province of York, January 10, 1941; signed for the Conference by the Archbishop.

The existing industrial order tends to recklessness and sacrilege in the treatment of natural resources . . . it is largely responsible for the problem of the "mass man" who easily develops the herd psychology.

MARY (MRS. HENRY

[1881-1927]

The past is only the present become invisible and mute; and because it is invisible and mute, its memoried glances and its murmurs are infinitely precious
We are to-morrow's past.

Precious Bane.<sup>1</sup> Foreword

It made me gladsome to be getting more than those that are content with their dwelling.

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 5

It's the folk that depend on us for this and for the other that we most do miss. So the mother is more let and hin-be there, for she has no heart for her work.

[1882— ]

Three thousand miles of border line — nor fort nor arméd host
 On all this frontier neighbor-ground, from east to western coast;
 A spectacle to conjure with! — a thought to stir the blood!
 A living proof to all the world of faith in brotherhood.
Our Border Line. Stanza 4 [1916]
 God speed that surely dawning day

 When all the nations of the earth shall

Got any river they say isn't crossable?
 Got any mountains that can't be cut
 through?
 We specialize in the wholly impossible, Doing things "nobody ever could do."

At Your Service. Stanza 2

Trained by a task that's the biggest in history:

Who has a job for this Panama Gang?

Ibid. Stanza 3

The grammar has a rule absurd

Which I would call an outworn myth:

"A preposition is a word

You mustn't end a sentence with!"

No Rule to be Afraid of. Stanza 1

And so they sailed away, these three,
 Mencken,

Nathan

And God.<sup>1</sup>

Three Minus One. Stanza 1

This is not I — this fatuous thing you show,

Retouched and smoothed and pretti-
 fied to please;

Put back the wrinkles and the lines I
 know;

<sup>1</sup> I shall name you the fishermen three:

Wynken.

Blynken,

And Nod.

EUGENE FIELD: Wynken, Blynken, and

Nod, St. 3

I have spent blood and brain achieving these.

Out of the pain, the struggle and the wrack,

These are my scars of battle — put

Sonnet: To a Photographer

With doubt and dismay you are smitten,

You think there's no chance for you,
 son?

Why, the best books haven't been written,

The best race hasn't been run.

Opportunity. Stanza 1

If with pleasure you are viewing any work a man is doing,

If you like him or you love him, tell him now.

Do It Now. Stanza 1

Do not wait till life is over and he's underneath the clover,

For he cannot read his tombstone
 when he's dead!

Ibid. Stanza 2

If I should lose, let me stand by the road

And cheer as the winners go by!

Prayer of a Sportsman. Stanza 1

It's general knowledge that many a college

That's not very Socially Smart

Has teams that can crush dear old
 Harvard to mush,

And take Yale and Princeton apart;

But Gridiron Heroes exclusively hail (In stories) from Harvard or Princeton or Yale!

That's Their Story. Stanza 1

If neither cold poverty, famished and gaunt,

Nor sickness nor pain

Of body or brain

Can turn you away from the thing that you want,

<sup>1</sup> I desire you will use all your skill to paint my picture truly like me, and not to flatter me at all; but remark all those roughnesses, pimples, warts, and everything as you see me otherwise I will never pay one farthing for
 it. — OLIVER CROMWELL [1599-1658]: To Peter Lely. — Condensed by time to "Paint me wart and all."

Success

Give the boy a dog and you've fur-

Always true and faithful as can be.<sup>1</sup>

A Gift. Stanza 1

It's seldom any one bestows

The praise that Father should have had,

But — here's the debt that one man owes,

I sing a little song to Dad!

It's Only Fair. Envoy

Back of the beating hammer

By which the steel is wrought,

Back of the workshop's clamor

The seeker may find the Thought.

The Thinker. Stanza 1

Back of the Job — the Dreamer

Who's making the dream come true!

JOHN DRINKWATER

[1882-1937]

This be my pilgrimage and goal,
Daily to march and find
The secret phrases of the soul,
The evangels of the mind.

Vocation

Great hills that fold above the sea,
Ecstatic airs and sparkling skies,
Sing out your words to master me,
Make me immoderately wise.

Invocation

And not a girl goes walking Along the Cotswold lanes
But knows men's eyes in April
Are quicker than their brains.

Cotswold Love

O Love, you happy wayfarer,
Be still my fond interpreter,

sires

I draw the blood of England's midmost shires.

The Midlands. Stanza 5

Grant us the will to fashion as we feel,
Grant us the strength to labor as we
know,

Grant us the purpose, ribbed and edged with steel,

To strike the blow.

A Prayer. Stanza 9

When the high heart we magnify,

And the clear vision celebrate,

And worship greatness passing by,

Ourselves are great.

Abraham Lincoln [1918]

SIR ARTHUR STANLEY EDDINGTON

[1882-1944]

It is one thing for the human mind to extract from the phenomena of nature the laws which it has itself put into them; it may be a far harder thing to extract laws over which it has no control. It is even possible that laws which have not their origin in the mind may be irrational, and we can never succeed in formulating them.

[1882- ]

For years I have been known for saying "include me out," but to-day I am giving it up forever. From now on let me say: "Oxford and Balliol, include me in."

In two words: im-possible.

HERMANN HAGEDORN

[1882— ]

Down the fair-chambered corridor of
years,

The quiet shutting, one by one, of doors.

Doors
You'll find us kindly on the whole,
though queer;

Not ever quite so bad as we appear,
And at our maddest not without our graces.

"A Traveler from a Distant Land"

How like the stars are these white, nameless faces —

These far innumerable burning coals!
This pale procession out of stellar spaces,

This Milky Way of souls!
Each in its own bright nebulae enfurled,
Each face, dear God, a world!

Broadway
Dead eyes keep watch! You shall not sleep nor rest.

We died. And now you others who must live

Shall do a harder thing than dying is — For you shall think! And ghosts will drive you on.

The Boy in Armor
The bomb that fell on Hiroshima fell on America too.

It fell on no city, no munition plants,
no docks.

It erased no church, vaporized no public buildings, reduced no man to his atomic elements.

But it fell, it fell.

It burst. It shook the land.

God, have mercy on our children.

God have mercy on America.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

[1882-1942]

There was never a war at arms that was not merely the extension of a preceding war of commerce grown fiercer until the weapons of commerce seemed no longer sufficiently deadly.

Radio broadcast for "World Peaceways" [1935]

It is some commercial stake or ambition that makes all wars, and we haven't got enough commercial stake or ambition in the whole of Europe to be worth the life or heart's blood of one single mother's son.

In respect of the recurrent emergence of the theme of sex in the minds of his characters, it must always be remembered that his locale was Celtic and his season spring . . .
 in many places the effect on the reader is somewhat emetic, nowhere does it tend to be an aphrodisiac. "Ulysses" may, therefore, be admitted into the United States. — JUDGE
 JOHN M. WOOLSEY: decision of U.S. District

That God once loved a garden

We learn in Holy writ.

And seeing gardens in the Spring

I well can credit it.

But if God walks in Dublin,

Stephen's Green. Stanza 1

I like the people who keep shops,

Busy and cheerful folk with friendly

There dwells a soul withdrawn from us, elusive,

The shop can never know — a secret garden.

Campaign speech in Boston

[October 30, 1940]

We must be the great arsenal of democracy.

Message to Congress

[January 6, 1941]

Four freedoms: The first is freedom of speech and expression — everywhere in the world. The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way, everywhere in the world. The third is freedom from want . . . everywhere in the world. The fourth is freedom from fear . . . anywhere in the world.

Ibid.

We, too, born to freedom, are willing to fight to maintain freedom. We, and all others who believe as deeply as we do, would rather die on our feet than live on our knees.

[December 8, 1941]

Never before have we had so little time in which to do so much.

address, Count Ciano, Italy's Foreign Minister, had notified the Ambassador of France that Italy considered herself at war with France beginning June 11.

We all know that books burn — yet we have the greater knowledge that books cannot be killed by fire. People die, but books never die. No man and no force can abolish memory. . . . In this war, we know, books are weapons.

Message to the American Book-sellers Association, April 23, 1942

The American Unknown Soldier who lies here did not give his life on the fields of France merely to defend his American home for the moment that was passing. He gave it that his family, his neighbors and all his fellow Americans might live in peace in days to come. His hope was not fulfilled.

Address at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Washington [November 11, 1942]

Men's souls will be shaken with the violences of war. They fight not for the lust of conquest. They fight to end conquest. They fight to liberate. They fight to let justice arise, and tolerance and good-will among all Thy people. They yearn but for the end of battle, for their return to the haven of home. Some will never return. Embrace these, Father, and receive them, Thy heroic servants, into Thy kingdom. And for us at home — fathers, mothers, children, wives, sisters and brothers of brave men overseas, whose thoughts and prayers are ever with them — help us, Almighty God, to rededicate ourselves in renewed faith in Thee in this hour of great sacrifice.

Invasion Day Prayer [June 6, 1944]

During the Nineteenth Century, during that era of development and expansion on this continent we felt a natural isolation, geographic, economic and political, an isolation from the vast world which lay overseas. Not until this generation, roughly this century, have people here and elsewhere been compelled more and more to widen the orbit of their vision to include every part of the world.

Speech, broadcast, accepting the nomination for a fourth term as President [July 20, 1944]

We have learned that we cannot live alone, in peace; that our own well-being is dependent on the well-being of other nations, far away. We have learned that we must live as men, and not as ostriches, nor as dogs in the manger. We have learned to be citizens of the world, members of the human community.

Fourth Term Inaugural Address [January 20, 1945]

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT AND WINSTON SPENCER
CHURCHILL

The President of the United States and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, representing His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, have met at sea. . . . They have agreed upon the following joint declaration.

The Atlantic Charter, drawn up aboard U.S.S. Augusta, off the coast of Maine. Issued in Washington, August 14, 1941

FIRST, their countries seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other.

SECOND, they desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned. . . .

SIXTH, after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want. . . .

EIGHTH, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armament continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential.

[1882- ]

Lord knows it's bitter in an open boat to see your shipmates die.

The Open Boat. Stanza 4
As I went down by Hastings Mill I lingered in my going To smell the smell of piled-up deals and feel the salt wind blowing.

Hastings Mill. Stanza 1
Along the wharves in sailor town a singing whisper goes

Of wind among the anchored ships, the wind that blows

Off a broad brimming water, where the summer day had died
Like a wounded whale a-sounding in the sunset tide.

Sailor Town. Stanza 1
When the long day's tramp is over, when the journey's done,

I shall dip down from some hill-top at the going down o' the sun,

And turn in at the open door, and lay down staff and load,

And wash me clean of the heat o' the day, and white dust o' the road.

Journey's End. Stanza 1
"When a ship's no more than a ship to
me,

An' there's nowhere left as I want to see:

When the fun's all flat, an' the jokes all stale,

An' there ain't no taste in the cakes an'
ale,

You can stitch me up as soon as you like

In a corner o' wore-out sail," said Mike,
"With 'olystones at my 'eels an' 'ead,
An' dollop me overboard. . . . I'll be dead!"

<sup>1</sup> Virginia Woolf is the best living example of that sort of mind which had its innings in letters in the eighteenth century—a mind partly critical, partly philosophical, highly imaginative, incapable of the vaster emotions but so subtle in its emotionalized intellectual-

Claude Bernard, for his part, is said to have announced that with a hundred years more of physiological knowledge we would be able to make the organic law ourselves — to manufacture human life, in competition with the Creator.

For our part we did not raise any objection to all this talk, but we do believe that at that particular stage of scientific development, the good Lord, with a flowing white beard, will arrive on Earth with his chain of keys and will say to humanity, just like they do at the Art Gallery at five o'clock, "Gentlemen, it's closing time." [1885- ]

On every side of us are men who hunt perpetually for their personal Northwest Passage, too often sacrificing health, strength and life itself to the search; and who shall say they are not happier in their vain but hopeful quest than wiser, duller folks who sit at home, venturing nothing and, with sour laughs, deriding the seekers for that fabled thoroughfare?

Ibid. Stanza 6

How at the corners of streets

It seems one suddenly meets

The unforgotten face, the long-dead moment living!

"No, they were — they are gone,"

We murmur. "We live on."

Persistent Instant. Stanza 1

All around you in the ranks of depart-

Hotels and office buildings, restaurants and flats and towers,

A million brains of weary folk are throbbing through the hours

With wishes tremendous — from some of which defend us —

But most are longings old for the country to enfold

And drown them in its purple and greenery and gold.

Wish-Horses. Stanza 2

Behold that Orient pope of fabulous
youth

One golden evening from a westward height

Facing an immemorial tragic truth:

The sinking splendor and the waning
light!

*Prester John Contemplates the

I shall start a heron soon

In the marsh beneath the moon —

A strange white heron rising with silver on its wings.

The Falconer of God. Stanza 1

I beat forever

The fens and the sedges.

The pledge is still the same — for all disastrous pledges,

All hopes resigned!

My soul still flies above me for the quarry it shall find.

The Falconer of God. Stanza 4

You are to me what the bowstring is to the shaft,

Speeding my purpose aloft and aflame and afar.

Dedication. Stanza 2

Neither will I put myself forward as others may do,

Neither, if you wish me to flatter, will
I flatter you;

I will look at you grimly, and so you

Pain and affright,

Rapturous wings.

Night. Stanza 3

Times she'll be docile as the gentlest
thing

That ever blinked in fur or folded wing.
And then, like lightning in the dead of

night,

Fill with wild, crackling, intermitting
light

My mind and soul and senses — and next be

Aloof, askance as a dryad in a tree.

The Woodcutter's Wife. Stanza 2

You cannot slay yourself in me,

Nor I — to all eternity —

Destroy my truest self in you.

All that our ingrate thought would do,

All senseless wounds we give and take,

Are powerless — for the other's sake.

We Ask No Shield. Stanza 3'

O Love, a thousand, thousand voices,

Only this I know, that I am overtaken
By a swifter runner Whose breath is never shaken,

That I follow on His pace, and that round me, as I waken,

Are the headlands of home and the blue sea swinging

And the flowers of the valleys their fresh scents flinging

And the prophets and the poets, with their singing — with their singing!

The gods returned to earth when Venice broke

Like Venus from the dawn-encircled
sea.

Wide laughed the skies with light when Venice woke

Crowned of antiquity,

And like a spoil of gems unmined on earth

Art in her glorious mind

Jewelled all Italy for joy's rebirth

To all mankind.

Gaspara Stampa. Stanza 9

So let it be, let it be,

Fretting all the day!

What is this or that to me

Who talked it out in Tartary
Centuries away!

Yet a while with love I stroll

Bright streets of air,

Silver precincts few extol,

Mist-blue cities of the soul,

Countries here nor there.

Stanzas 5 and 6

One speck within vast star-space lying Awoke, arose, resumed its clothing,
And crawled another day toward dying.

Animalculc. Stanza 7

Voice of the forum loud and harsh

Full of frog-rhetoric of the marsh;

Awful percipience whose small eye

Views art through ordure of the sty;

Apocalyptic commonplace

Whose every utterance is base —

Yearlong the nations cry to thee,

God of our gods, Stupidity!

Hymn to Stupidity

You came to climb,

And you endure —

So turn your face to the rock of Time,
Make one more foothold sure!

Because You Came to Climb

O there beloved, all loved, forever

As light you are, in light you move;

Pride of the father, tears of the mother;

Silver sister and golden brother —

The glowing mind of all endeavor,

The full irradiancy of love.

Nebular Hypothesis. Stanza 5

Only madmen seize the story
With coals of fire upon their tongue.

Nebular Hypothesis. Stanza 13

When at our history men stand amazed . . .

Our captains may have grown as quaint
And crazed as any medieval saint.

Ode for an Epoch

Of the first of such from Gloucester,
'twas the word, "See how she

Cried Captain Andrew the builder,
"Then a scooner let her be!"

Gloucester Schooner. Stanza 2

Only it seemed great beauty, ancient before our time,

That man could wed to nature when his heart and hand were one,

Paused like an apparition, in peace beyond my rhyme,

And, white as pearl on the sealine, ethereally was gone.

Ibid. Stanza 4

O Doctor Johnson's wig and Blake's great eyes—

betwixt them all things wild and all things wise!

The don of diction and the bedlam soul whose lips of prophecy were fiery coal . . .

O a fig

I cry for Doctor Johnson's frowsy wig!
when round the Innocent light in lovely rage

wakes rose and gold and blue on William's page

or clear in verse runs airily carolling to Wisdom creaking by on leathern wing.

I had a little dog and my dog was very small;

He licked me in the face, and he an-

Of all the treasures that were mine I loved him most of all.

A Child's Dream. Stanza 1

His body covered thick with hair was very good to smell;

His little stomach underneath was pink
as any shell;
And I loved him and honoured him,
more than words can tell.

A Child's Dream. Stanza 3
Deep in my heart I thought with pride,
"I know a person who has died."

A Recollection
O why do you walk through the fields in gloves,

Missing so much and so much?
O fat white woman whom nobody loves,
Why do you walk through the fields in gloves

When the grass is as soft as the breast of doves

And shivering-sweet to the touch?

To a Fat Lady Seen from the Train

The Snowman in the Yard

For nothing keeps a poet
In his high singing mood
Like unappeasable hunger
For unattainable food.

Apology

It is stern work, it is perilous work, to thrust your hand in the sun
And pull out a spark of immortal flame to warm the hearts of men.

The Proud Poet

Unlock the door this evening

MONTGOMERY (VISCOUNT MONTGOMERY OF ALAMEIN)

[1887- ]

On the eve of this great adventure, I send my best wishes to every soldier in the Allied team. To us is given the honor of striking a blow for freedom which will live in history, and in the better days that lie ahead men will speak with pride of our doings. We have a great and righteous cause. Let us pray that the Lord, mighty in battle, will go forth with our armies and that His special providence will aid us in the struggle.

The eagle of the rock.

The Eagle and the Mole. Stanza 1

If you would keep your soul

From spotted sight or sound,

Live like the velvet mole;

Go burrow underground.

Ibid. Stanza 5

She, whose song we loved the best,

Is voiceless in a sudden night;

On your light limbs, O, Loveliest,

May the dust be light!

<sup>1</sup> He had gone off the air at the end of 1935 because the sponsors of his Town Crier program "preferred that you didn't make any more caustic references to people like Hitler and Mussolini as there are large racial groups who are apt to be antagonized." — Quoted in The Letters of Alexander Woolcott, edited by Beatrice Kaufman and Joseph Hennessey [1944].

I was, being human, born alone;
 I am, being woman, hard beset;
 I live by squeezing from a stone
 The little nourishment I get.

Let No Charitable Hope. Stanza 2
 In masks outrageous and austere
 The years go by in single file;
 But none has merited my fear,
 And none has quite escaped my smile.

Ibid. Stanza 3
 Farewell, sweet dust; I was never a miser:

Once, for a minute, I made you mine:
 Now you are gone, I am none the wiser,
 But the leaves of the willow are bright as wine.

Farewell, Sweet Dust. Stanza 4
 I have believed that I prefer to live
 Preoccupied by a Platonic mind;
 I have believed me obdurate and blind
 To those sharp ecstasies the pulses give:
 The clever body five times sensitive
 I never have discovered to be kind
 As the poor soul, deceived and half-divined,
 Whose hopes are water in a witch's sieve.

Angels and Earthly Creatures.

One Person. Sonnet VI<sup>1</sup>
 A subtle spirit has my path attended,
 In likeness not a lion but a pard;
 And when the arrows flew like hail, and hard,
 He licked my wounds, and all my wounds were mended;
 And happy I, who walked so well-defended,
 With that translucid presence for a guard,
 Under a sky reversed and evil-starred;
 A woman by an archangel befriended.
Ibid. Sonnet IX
 Suckled with kindness, fondled from the cold,
 And loved beyond philosophy or shame.

 Strange things, but never while we live

(On Turning Latin into English)
 Pity the prickly star that frightens

 spear;
 Pity the midnight when it lightens;
 Pity me, my dear.

Pity Me. Stanza 3
 The worst and best are both inclined
 To snap like vixens at the truth;
 But, O, beware the middle mind
 That purrs and never shows a tooth!

She doesn't wear a shirt, and most men

 A starving tramp can't eat a silver shoe,
 Or some poor beggar, slightly alcoholic,
 Enjoy with Donne a metaphysical frolic.

Portrait in Black Paint. Stanza 2
 Farewell, incomparable element, Whence man arose, where he shall not return;
 And hail, imperfect urn
 Of his last ashes, and his firstborn fruit;
 Farewell, the long pursuit,
 And all the adventures of his discontent.

Hymn to Earth. Stanza 1
 Hail, element of earth, receive thy own,
 And cherish, at thy charitable breast,
 This man, this mongrel beast:
 He plows the sand, and, at his hardest need,
 He sows himself for seed.

Ibid. Stanza 6

Receive him as thy lover for an hour
Who will not weary, by a longer stay,
The kind embrace of clay.

Hymn to Earth. Stanza 7

I love every stock and stone
Of this land, no more my own;
Which we lost, that it might be
Wider by half a world of sea.

An American in England

If we desert the deed undone
Alas, what daughter and what son!

I saw a money-changer in the neighborhood

"Trees" (if I have the name right) is one of the most annoying pieces of verse within my knowledge. The other one is Kipling's "If," with third place reserved for Henley's "Invictus."

"Trees" maddens me, because it contains the most insincere line ever written by mortal man. Surely the Kilmer tongue must have been not far from the Kilmer cheek when he wrote, "Poems are made by fools like me."

You are the pearls I cannot buy;

<sup>1</sup> The song was written in 1917. First sung by Kate Smith, Armistice Day, 1938. (Copy-

You are my blue Italian lake;
You are my piece of foreign sky.

To My Child

It isn't that we talk so much, —
Sometimes the evening through
You do not say a word to me,
I do not talk to you.
You sit beside your reading lamp,
I like my easy chair,
And it is joy enough for me
To know that you are there.

By the canal in Flanders I watched a barge's prow
Creep slowly past the poplar-trees; and there I made a vow
That when these wars are over and I am home at last However much I travel I shall not travel fast.
Horses and cars and yachts and planes:
I've no more use for such:
For in three years of war's alarms I've hurried far too much;
And now I dream of something sure, silent and slow and large;
So when the War is over — why, I mean to buy a barge.

And vexed their wives and filled their homes
With faded prints and massive tomes.

WILLIAM L. LAURENCE

[1888— ]

The Atomic Age began at exactly 5:30 Mountain War Time on the morning of July 16, 1945, on a stretch of semi-desert land about fifty airline miles from Alamogordo, New Mexico.

At that great moment in history, ranking with the moment in the long ago when man first put fire to work for him and started on his march to civilization, the vast energy locked within the hearts of the atoms of matter was released for the first time in a burst of flame such as had never before been seen on this planet.<sup>1</sup>

*In The New York Times,
September 26, 1945*

Zero, the code name given to the spot chosen for lighting the first atomic fire on this planet.

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> As if the earth, water, gases, lightning and caloric had not a million energies, the discovery of any one of which could change the art of war again, and put an end to war by the exterminating forces man can apply. — RALPH WALDO EMERSON: The Fortune of the Republic [1878]

At zero minus one minute all observers at Base Camp, about 150 of the "Who's Who" in science and the armed forces, lay down prone on the ground in their pre-assigned trenches, face and eyes directed toward the ground and with the head away from Zero.

*In The New York Times,
September 26, 1945*

A great ball of fire about a mile in diameter, changing colors as it kept shooting upward, from deep purple to orange, expanding, growing bigger, rising as it was expanding, an elemental force freed from its bonds after being chained for billions of years.

Ibid.

At first it was a giant column that soon took the shape of a supramundane mushroom. For a fleeting instant it took the form of the Statue of Liberty magnified many times.

Ibid.

I loved you, so I drew these tides of men into my hands and wrote my will across the sky in stars.

*Seven Pillars of Wisdom.
Dedication*

Arabs could be swung on an idea as on a cord; for the unpledged allegiance of their minds made them obedient servants. None of them would escape the bond till success had come, and with it responsibility and duty and engagements. Then the idea was gone and the work ended — in ruins.

<sup>1</sup> Changed his name to T. E. Shaw, 1927.

Appearing first in the war news from Arabia as a personage rather more incredible than Prester John, and presently emerging into clear definition as the author of one of the great histories of the world, recording his own conquests at an age at which young company officers are hardly allowed to speak at the mess table.

BERNARD SHAW, in The New York Evening Post, April 16, 1927

There could be no honour in a sure success, but much might be wrested from a sure defeat.

Revolt in the Desert. Chap. 19

I grew proud of the enemy [the Germans] who had killed my brothers. They were two thousand miles from home, without hope and without guides, in conditions mad enough to break the bravest nerves. Yet their sections held together in firm rank, sheering through the wrack of Turk and Arab like armoured ships, high-faced and silent. When attacked they halted, took position, fired to order. There was no haste, no crying, no hesitation. They were glorious.

Ibid. Chap. 34

It came upon me freshly how the secret of uniform was to make a crowd solid, dignified, impersonal: to give it the singleness and tautness of an up-standing man. This death's livery which walled its bearers from ordinary life, was sign that they had sold their wills and bodies to the State: and contracted themselves into a service not the less abject for that its beginning was voluntary.

NEWMAN LEVY
[1888- ]

In Spain, where the courtly Castilian hidalgo twangs lightly each night his romantic guitar,
Where the castanets clink on the gay piazetta, and strains of fandangoes are heard from afar,

There lived, I am told, a bold hussy named Carmen, a pampered young vamp full of devil and guile.

Cigarette and cigar men were smitten with Carmen; from near and from far men were caught with her smile.

Opera Guyed. Carmen

But here's our friend José who seizes her bridle. A wild homicidal glint gleams in his eye.

He's mad and disgusted and cries out,
"You've busted the heart that once trusted you. Wed me or die!"

Though Carmen is frightened at how this scene might end, I'm forced to admit she is game to the last.

She says to him "Banish the notion and vanish. Vamos!" which is Spanish for "run away fast."

A scream and a struggle! She reels and she staggers, for Don José's dag-ger's plunged deep in her breast.

No more will she flirt in her old way, that's certain. So ring down the curtain, poor Carmen's at rest.

Ibid.

One time in Alexandria, in wicked Alexandria,

Where nights were wild with revelry,
and life was but a game,

There lived, so the report is, an adven-

The pride of Alexandria, and Thais was her name.

Ibid. Thais. Stanza 1

Whether I am on the winning or los-being on the side where my sympathies lie that matters, and I am ready to see it through to the end. Success in life means doing that thing than which nothing else conceivable seems more no-

 this enviable state I can truly say that I enjoy, for had I the choice I would be nowhere else in the world than where I

1. Flourish: The stage direction here is obscure. Clarke claims it should read "flarish," thus changing the meaning of the passage to "flarish" (that is, the King's), but most authorities have agreed that it should remain "flourish," supplying the predicate which is to be flourished. There was at this time a cusflourish a mop as a signal to the passing vender of berries, signifying that in that particular household there was a consumer-demand for berries, and this may have been meant in this instance.

That Shakespeare was cognizant of this custom of flourishing the mop for berries is shown in a similar passage in the second part of King Henry IV, where he has the Third Page enter and say,
"Flourish." Cf. also Hamlet, IV, 7:4.

When laughing Ann trips down the street
The sun comes out as well,
The town is at her twinkling feet,
The crier rings his bell,
The young men leap like little fish,
Policemen stand and purr,
While husbands look behind and wish
That they had married her.

Laughing Ann. Stanza 1

I wish I hadn't broke that dish,
I wish I was a movie-star,
I wish a lot of things, I wish

Stanza 1

If there's a dish
For which I wish
More frequent than the rest,
If there's a food
On which I brood
When starving or depressed,
If there's a thing that life can give
Which makes it worth our while to live,
If there's an end
On which I'd spend
My last remaining cash.

[1891-1917]

Had I a golden pound to spend,
My love should mend and sew no more.
And I would buy her a little quern,
Easy to turn on the kitchen floor.

I'm a lean dog, a keen dog, a wild dog,
and alone;

<sup>1</sup> Famous cartoonist and caricaturist.

I'm a rough dog, a tough dog, hunting on my own;

I'm a bad dog, a mad dog, teasing silly
sheep;

I love to sit and bay the moon, to keep fat souls from sleep.

Lone Dog. Stanza 1

I've hated all that's mean and cold,
All that's dusty, tame, and old,
Comfortable lies in books,
Pallid Virtue's sidelong looks,
Saints who wash their hands too clean,
And walk where only saints have been.

STELLA BENSON (MRS. J. C. O'GORMAN ANDERSON)

[1892-1933]

Call no man foe, but never love a stranger.

Build up no plan, nor any star pursue.
Go forth with crowds; in loneliness is danger.

Thus nothing God can send,
And nothing God can do
Shall pierce your peace, my friend.

To the Unborn. Stanza 3

<sup>1</sup> A New York State phrase to express completeness, as "lock, stock and barrel."

It was young David mocked the Philis-
tine,

It was young David laughed beside the river.

There came his mother — his and yours and mine —

With five smooth stones,<sup>1</sup> and dropped them in his quiver.

Five Smooth Stones. Stanza 3
The first stone is love, and that shall fail you.

The second stone is hate, and that shall fail you.

The third stone is knowledge, and that shall fail you.

The fourth stone is prayer, and that
shall fail you.

The fifth stone shall not fail you.

Ibid. Stanza 5
The fifth stone is a magic stone, my David,

Made up of fear and failure, lies and loss.

Ibid. Stanza 10
Oh, bless your blindness, glory in your groping!

Mock at your betters with an upward chin!

And when the moment has gone by for hoping,

Sling your fifth stone, O son of mine,
and win.

Grief do I give you, grief and dreadful
laughter;

Sackcloth for banner, ashes in your wine.

Go forth, go forth, nor ask me what comes after;

The fifth stone shall not fail you, son of mine.

Go forth, go forth, and slay the Philis-tine.

Ibid. Stanzas 12 and 13
High and miraculous skies bless and astonish my eyes;

All my dead secrets arise, all my dead stories come true.

<sup>1</sup> And he took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepherd's bag which he had . . . and his sling was in his hand: and he drew near to the Philistine. —
I SAMUEL XVII:40.

Here is the Gate to the Sea. Once you unlocked it for me;
Now, since you gave me the key, shall
I unlock it for you?

This Is the End

Did Older and Wiser people ever

Things I have hated: A certain shade of brown
Which elder ladies love; wet roofs that sheets that slip

And leave your ankles freezing; fires that smoke;
Carved, heavy furniture of varnished
oak.

The Great Hater

Lust in old men, coldness in the young;
Cheap love-songs and the tunes to which they're sung;

leaves.

Be born anywhere, little embryo novelist, but do not be born under the shadow of a great creed, not under the burden of original sin, not under the doom of salvation. Go out and be born among gypsies or thieves or among happy workaday people who live in the sun and do not think about their souls.

Advice to Unborn Novelists

How could an actual person fit into the covers of a book? The book is not a continent, not a definite geographical measure, it cannot contain so huge a thing as an actual full-size person. Any person has to be scaled by eliminations to fit the book world.

Who harbors in memory a wealth of valued verse has laid up unto himself treasures that moths will not corrupt the conviction of one who . . . as a soldier in World War I, trudged the desolate sector of the Somme and the ruined region of Arras with little limp volumes of Shakespeare in his pockets and miniature collections of Burns, Browning, Swinburne, and Tennyson wedged in his pack between the top of the blanket roll and the strapped-down flap that held his mess kit.

ARCHIBALD MACLEISH
[1892- ]

Sometimes within the brain's old

I hear, far off, at some forgotten door,
A music and an eerie faint carouse,

And stir of echoes down the creaking floor.

Chambers of Imagery. Stanza 1

Beauty is that Medusa's head
Which men go armed to seek and sever.

It is most deadly when most dead,
And dead will stare and sting forever.

Beauty

The trumpet of Time in our ears and the brazen and Breaking shout of our days!

Panic: Chorus

There in the sudden blackness, the black pall
Of nothing, nothing, nothing — noth-

The End of the World

The world was always yours: you would not take it.

Speech to a Crowd

Speaking alone for myself it's the steep hill and the Toppling lift of the young men I am toward now —

Waiting for that as the wave for the next wave.

Let them go over us all I say with the thunder of

What's to be next in the world. It's we will be under it!

"Dover Beach" — A Note to That Poem

Christ but this earth goes over to the squall of time!

Hi but she heels to it — rail down: ribs down: rolling

Dakotas under her hull! And the night climbing

Sucking the green from the ferns by these Berkshire boulders!

The Sunset Piece

She lies on her left side her flank golden:

Her hair is burned black with the strong sun:

The scent of her hair is of rain in the dust on her shoulders:

She has brown breasts and the mouth of no other country:

*Frescoes for Mr. Rockefeller's
City. Landscape as a Nude [1933]*

Under her knees there is no green lawn of the Florentines:

Under her dusty knees is the corn stubble:

Her belly is flecked with the flickering light of the corn:

Ibid.

She's a tough land under the corn mis-
ter:

She has changed the bone in the cheeks
of many races;

She has tried the fat from the round
rumps of Italians:

Even the voice of the English has gone
dry

And hard on the tongue and alive in the throat speaking.

Ibid. Background with Revolutionaries

America was promises. . . .

It was Man who had been promised.

America Was Promises

The Irresponsible [1940]

The scholar digs his ivory cellar in the ruins of the past and lets the present sicken as it will.

The Irresponsibles [1940]

Races didn't bother the Americans.
They were something a lot better than any race. They were a People. They were the first self-constituted, self-declared, self-created People in the history of the world. And their manners were their own business. And so were their politics. And so, but ten times so, were their souls.

VIOLA MEYNELL

(MRS. JOHN DALLEYN)

His kisses touch her marvelling eyes
And wander searching through her thinking face;

And though so loved and near she lies
He knows he travels in a distant place.

A Girl Adoring. Prefatory verses

He does not know how far, how far;

A Girl Adoring. Stanza 5

The dust comes secretly day after day, Lies on my ledge and dulls my shining
things.

But O this dust that I shall drive away
Is flowers and kings,
Is Solomon's temple, poets, Nineveh.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY

(MRS. EUGEN JAN
BOISSEVAIN)

[1892-1950]

And what are you that, missing you,
I should be kept awake
As many nights as there are days
With weeping for your sake?

The Philosopher

Death devours all lovely things;
Lesbia with her sparrow
Shares the darkness, — presently
Every bed is narrow.

Passer Mortuus Est. Stanza 1

All I could see from where I stood
Was three long mountains and a wood.

Renascence. Line 1

I would I were alive again
To kiss the fingers of the rain,
To drink into my eyes the shine
Of every slanting silver line,
To catch the freshened, fragrant breeze
From drenched and dripping apple-trees.

Ibid. Line 119

I know not how such things can be,
I only know there came to me
A fragrance such as never clings
To aught save happy living things;
A sound as of some joyous elf
Singing sweet songs to please himself,
And, through and over everything,
A sense of glad awakening.

Ibid. Line 143

The world stands out on either side
No wider than the heart is wide;
Above the world is stretched the sky, —
No higher than the soul is high.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See Hartley Coleridge, page 386.

The heart can push the sea and land
Farther away on either hand;
The soul can split the sky in two,
And let the face of God shine through.

Renascence. Line 189

The fabric of my faithful love
No power shall dim or ravel
Whilst I stay here, — but oh, my dear,
If I should ever travel!

To the Not Impossible Him.

Stanza 3

Only you are gone,
You that alone I cared to keep.

Song of a Second April. Stanza 3

She that had no need of me,
Is a little lonely child
Lost in Hell. Persephone,
Take her head upon your knee,
Say to her: "My dear, my dear,
It is not so dreadful here."

A Prayer to Persephone

I know I am but summer to your heart,
And not the full four seasons of the year.

Two Seasons. Sonnet 1

I drank at every vine.
The last was like the first.
I came upon no wine
So wonderful as thirst.

Feast. Stanza 1

I only know that summer sang in me
A little while, that in me sings no more.

What Lips My Lips Have Kissed

Euclid alone
Has looked on Beauty bare.<sup>1</sup> Fortunate

My candle burns at both ends;
It will not last the night;

<sup>1</sup> Mathematics possesses not only truth, but supreme beauty — a beauty cold and austere, like that of sculpture, without appeal to any part of our weaker nature, yet sublimely pure, and capable of a stern perfection such as only the greatest art can show. — BERTRAND RUSSELL [1872- ]: The Principles of Mathematics [1903]

But, ah, my foes, and, oh, my friends —
It gives a lovely light.<sup>1</sup>

Figs from Thistles. First Fig

Ibid. Second Fig

Oh, come again to Astolat!
I will not ask you to be kind;
And you may go when you will go,
And I will stay behind.

Elaine. Stanza 1

Music my rampart, and my only one.
On Hearing a Symphony of Beethoven

Stranger, pause and look;
From the dust of ages
Lift this little book,
Turn the tattered pages,
Read me, do not let me die!
Search the fading letters, finding Steadfast in the broken binding
All that once was I!

The Poet and His Book. Stanza 6

Weep him dead and mourn as you may,
Me, I sing as I must:
Blessed be death, that cuts in marble
What would have sunk in dust.

Keen. Stanza 1

Who builds her a house with love for timber,
Builds her a house of foam;
And I'd rather be bride to a lad gone down
Than widow to one safe home.

Ibid. Stanza 5

Spring rides no horses down the hill,
But comes on foot, a goose girl still.
And all the loveliest things there be Come simply, so it seems to me.
If ever I said, in grief or pride,
I tired of honest things, I lied.

The Goose Girl

I'll keep a little tavern
Below the high hill's crest,
Wherein all gray-eyed people
May sit them down and rest.

The Little Tavern. Stanza 1

<sup>1</sup> I burned my candle at both ends,
And now have neither foes nor friends.
SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN: Songs of Fairly Utter Despair, VIII

Aye, 'tis a curious fancy —
 But all the good I know
 Was taught me out of two gray eyes
 A long time ago.

The Little Tavern. Stanza 4

O world, I cannot hold thee close enough!
 Thy winds, thy wide gray skies!
 Thy mists, that roll and rise!
 Thy woods, this autumn day, that ache and sag
 And all but cry with color.

God's World. Stanza 1

Lord, I do fear
 Thou'st made the world too beautiful this year.
 My soul is all but out of me — let fall
 No burning leaf; prithee, let no bird call.

Ibid. Stanza 2

I will be the gladdest thing under the
 sun!
 I will touch a hundred flowers and not pick one.

Afternoon on a Hill

And if I loved you Wednesday,
 Well, what is that to you?
 I do not love you Thursday —
 So much is true.

Thursday. Stanza 1

There's little kind and little fair
 Is worth its weight in smoke
 To me, that's grown so free from care
 Since my heart broke!

The Merry Maid. Stanza 2

Love has gone, and left me and the days are all alike.
 Eat I must, and sleep I will — and would that night were here!
 But ah, to lie awake and hear the slow hours strike!
 Would that it were day again, with twilight near!

Ashes of Life. Stanza 1

Life goes on forever like the gnawing of a mouse.

Ibid. Stanza 3

Thanks be to God, the world is wide,
 And I am going far from home!
 And I forgot in Camelot
 The man I loved in Rome.

Fugitive. Stanza 1

My heart is warm with the friends I make,
 And better friends I'll not be knowing;

Yet there isn't a train I wouldn't take,
 No matter where it's going.

Travel. Stanza 3

I know some poison I could drink;
 I've often thought I'd taste it;
 But Mother bought it for the sink,
 And drinking it would waste it.

The Cheerful Abstainer. Stanza 3

Men say the winter
 Was bad that year;
 Fuel was scarce,
 And food was dear.
 A wind with a wolf's head
 Howled about our door.

The Ballad of the Harp-Weaver.

Stanzas 13, 14.

I am not resigned to the shutting away of loving hearts in the hard ground.
 So it is, and so it will be, for so it has been, time out of mind:
 Into the darkness they go, the wise and the lovely. Crowned
 With lilies and with laurel they go.

Dirge Without Music. Stanza 1

Death is our master, — but his seat is shaken;
 He rides victorious, — but his ranks are thinned.

Not That It Matters

I had a little Sorrow,
 Born of a little Sin.

The Penitent. Stanza 1

You leave me much against my will,

To S. M.

Whether or not we find what we are seeking
 Is idle, biologically speaking.

Sonnet: I Shall Forget You Presently

Breathes but one mortal on the teeming globe
 Could minister to my soul's or body's needs —

Physician minus physic, minus robe;
 Confessor minus Latin, minus beads.
 Yet should you bid me name him, I am dumb;

For though you summon him, he would not come.

Fatal Interview. IV

Love in the open hand, nothing but that,
Ungemmed, unhidden, wishing not to hurt,
As one should bring you cowslips in a hat
Swung from the hand, or apples in her skirt,
I bring you, calling out as children do:
"Look what I have! — And these are all for you."

Ibid. XI

Love is not all; it is not meat nor drink
Nor slumber nor a roof against the rain,
Nor yet a floating spar to men that sink.

Ibid. XXX

See how these masses mill and swarm
And troop and muster and assail:
God! we could keep this planet warm
By friction, if the sun should fail.

Three Sonnets in Tetrameter.

I [1938]

This little life, from here to there —
Who lives it safely anywhere?
Not you, my insulated friend;
What calm composure will defend
Your rock, when tides you've never seen Assault the sands of What-has-been,
And from your island's tallest tree,
You watch advance What-is-to-be?
(The tidal wave devours the shore:
There are no islands any more.)

The Murder of Lidice.<sup>2</sup> [1942]

<sup>1</sup> Great Britain no longer is an island. The strategic implication will be clear very soon. England is an island in so far as she is lonely, cut off from the world. Hunger is staring her in the face. — ADOLF HITLER: Reported on the German radio, July 1, 1940.

We cannot be an island. — FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Radio address, March 8, 1941.

The perfect place for a writer is in the hideous roar of a city, with men making a new road under his window in competition with a barrel organ, and on the mat a man waiting for the rent.<sup>2</sup>

St. Nicholas, in addition to protecting sailors, children, travellers, and merchants, is also the patron saint of pawnbrokers. The story goes that a nobleman of the saint's native town, Parara in Asia Minor, had lost all his money, and did not know how he could endow his three beautiful daughters. St. Nicholas, hearing of his trouble, went by night and flung through the window three bags of gold with which the nobleman was able to provide handsome dowries. These three bags are shown in all early ikons as three gold apples, and the gold apples of St. Nicholas are the origin of the pawnbroker's sign.

WENDELL LEWIS WILLKIE<sup>3</sup>

[1892-1944]

There are no distant points in the world any longer. . . . The myriad millions of human beings of the Far East are as close to us as Los Angeles is to New York by the fastest trains. . . . In the future what concerns them must concern us, almost as much as the problems of the people of California concern the people of New York. Our thinking in the future must be world-wide.

Radio Address [October 26, 1942] and One World, Chap. 1 [1943]

The mother sighed and drew the torn quilts closer,

The February wind clapped at the door
Flattening the fire on the careless

It is far easier to write ten passably effective Sonnets, good enough to take in the not too inquiring critic, than one effective advertisement that will take in a few thousand of the uncritical buying public.

On the Margin

There are not enough bon mots in existence to provide any industrious conversationalist with a new stock for every social occasion.<sup>1</sup>

Point Counter Point. Chap. 7

<sup>1</sup> What horrors, when it flashed over him that he had made this fine speech, word for word, twice over! Yet it was not true, as the lady might perhaps have fairly inferred, that he had embellished his conversation with the Huma daily during that whole interval of years. — OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES: *The Au-

DOROTHY THOMPSON

[1894— ]

To Franklin D. Roosevelt, I say: You took a new breath 22 years ago when Polio struck you down, and you overcame the blow, and became stronger and greater because of it. You took a fresh breath when you were called to the Presidency in a moment of riots and bread lines and collapse. You took a fresh breath when, after years of unheeded warnings, the enemy struck.

Now, out of that reservoir of strength, which is ever refilled by those who know the secret of overcoming, take one more breath for the completion of our struggle, and for our peace.

And to you who hear me, I say: Take that fresh breath with him. Give him no worship — for that we reserve for God. But breathe into the will of this man, your will; lend to him your strength; share with him your faith; that with him, and through him, we may realize our mighty victory, and with him and through him set our feet upon the pathway to a new and better, and more honest world.

[1894- ]

At long last I am able to say a few words of my own. I have never wanted to withhold anything, but until now it has not been constitutionally possible for me to speak.

I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love.

I now quit altogether public affairs and I lay down my burden.

It may be some time before I return to my native land, but I shall always follow the fortunes of the British race and empire with profound interest and if, at any time in the future, I can be found of service to His Majesty in a private station I shall not fail.

And now we all have a new King. I wish him and you, his people, happiness

<sup>2</sup> The complete poem can be found in MAURICE BARRING's beautiful scrapbook, Have You Anything to Declare? [1937].

This man held up his head
And had his day,
Then turned his head a little to one way
And slept instead.

Three common things filled this day;

A buttercup tilted seductively,
And a lark arguing with the sun.

The terraces of crude white crosses
Do not stir.

May widen more and more.

Women in drudgery knew

They must be one of four:

Whores, artists, saints, and wives.

There are composite lives

That women always live

Whose greatness is to give

Weakness its reasons

And strength its reassurance;

To kiss away the waste

Places and start them well.

The dead don't stay interested in us living people for very long. Gradually, gradually, they let go hold of the earth
. . . and the ambitions they had . . .
and the pleasures they had . . . and the things they suffered . . . and the people they loved. They get weaned

it, weaned away.

Ibid.

That's what it was to be alive. To move about in a cloud of ignorance; to

But most are merely a compost of clay
Cut in the sleepy features of a slave.

So, when the crowd gives tongue

And prophets, old or young,

Bawl out their strange despair

Or fall in worship there,

Let them applaud the image or condemn

But keep your distance and your soul from them,

And, if the heart within your breast must burst

Like a cracked crucible and pour its steel

White-hot before the white heat of the wheel,

Strive to recast once more

That attar of the ore

In the strong mold of pain

Till it is whole again,

And while the prophets shudder or adore

Before the flame, hoping it will give ear,

If you at last must have a word to say, Say neither, in their way,

"It is a deadly magic and accursed,"

Nor "It is blest," but only "It is here."

It is so they die on the plains, the great, old buffalo,

The herd-leaders, the beasts with the kingly eyes,

Innocent, curly-browed,

They sink to the earth like mountains, hairy and silent,

And their tongues are cut by the hunter.

Oh, singing tongue!

Great tongue of bronze and salt and the free grasses,

Tongue of America, speaking for the first time,

Must the hunter have you at last?

Then the rain fell on the roof and the twilight darkened

And they said that in death you looked like a marvelous old, wise child.

Long streaming manes, and arching necks, they show

Their kinship to their sisters of the sea —

And forward hurl their thunderbolts of snow.

Still out of hardship bred,
Spirits of power and beauty and delight
Have ever on such frugal pastures fed
And loved to course with tempests through the night.

<sup>1</sup> Working as a busboy in Washington, he was discovered by Vachel Lindsay, who read several of his poems to a fashionable audience in the very hotel in which Hughes carried trays of dishes. This incident attracted the attention of the press of the country, and people who never would have glanced at the poetry for its own sake became interested in the career of so strange a singer. — LOUIS UNTERMEYER: Modern American Poetry

I think that I shall never see
Aught lovely as a pulpwood tree.

A tree that grows through sunny noons
To furnish sporting page cartoons.

A tree whose girth will prove its age
Is ample for a want ad page.

A tree with grace toward heaven rising,
Men macerate for advertising.

A tree that lifts its arms and laughs,
To be made into paragraphs.

A tree that falls before the saw,
A five-star final in the raw.

Central 'I' is surrounded by 'I eating,'
'I loving,' 'I angry,' 'I excreting,'
And the 'great I' planted in him
Has nothing to do with all these,
It can never claim its true place Resting in the forehead, and secure in his gaze.
The 'great I' is an unfortunate intruder
Quarrelling with 'I tiring' and 'I sleep-

And all those other 'I's who long for
'We dying.'

Was that their lips, still touched with fire,
Should tell of the Spirit clothed from head to foot in song.

unconcern
She passes the houses which humbly crowd outside,
The gasworks and at last the heavy
page
Of death, printed by gravestones in the cemetery.
Beyond the town there lies the open country
Where, gathering speed, she acquires mystery,
The luminous self-possession of ships
on ocean.

Our flags climbed down their own ropes round

Of visits to the somehow not yet dead;
Who, after he has pinned a cross above
The bullet-bearing heart, when told that this

Is one who held the hill, bends down to give

Folly a diffident embarrassed kiss.

This Loneliness for You is Like the Wound

But once that medaled moment passes,
O,

Disaster, charging on the fever chart,
Wins the last battle, takes the heights,
and he

Succumbs before his reinforcements start.

Yet now, when death is not a metaphor,
Who dares to say that love is like the war?

One morning in spring
We marched from Devizes
All shapes and all sizes
Like beads on a string,
But yet with a swing
We trod the bluemetal
And full of high fettle
We started to sing.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH OF ENGLAND

[1926- ]

If we all go forward together with an unwavering faith, a high courage and a quiet heart, we shall be able to make of this ancient commonwealth which we all love so dearly an even grander thing — more free, more prosperous, more happy and a more powerful influence for good in the world — than it has been in the greatest days of our forefathers. To accomplish that we must give nothing less than the whole of ourselves.

Radio broadcast from Capetown, South Africa, to the British Commonwealth on her twenty-first birthday [April 21, 1947]

I declare before you all that my whole life, whether it be long or short, shall be devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family to which we all belong, but I shall not have strength to carry out this resolution alone unless you join in it with me, as I now invite you to do.

STEPHEN DUCK

[1705-1756]

If humour, wit, and honesty could save
 The humorous, witty, honest from the grave;
 The grave had not so soon this tenant
 found,
 Whom honesty, and wit, and humour crowned.
 Or could esteem and love preserve our breath,

 death,
 The stroke of death on him had later
 fell,
 Whom all mankind esteemed and loved
 so well.

Epitaph on Joe Miller<sup>1</sup>

Would you, my friend, a finished sceptic
 make,
 To form his nature these materials
 take:
 A little learning; twenty grains of sense
 Joined with a double share of igno-

 Infuse a little wit into the skull,
 Which never fails to make a mighty fool;
 Two drams of faith; a tun of doubting next;
 Let all be with the dregs of reason mixt:
 When in his mind these jarring seeds are sown,
 He'll censure all things but approve of none.

Art and part.

A Scottish law phrase, an accessory before and after the fact. A man is said to be art and part of a crime when he contrives the manner of the deed, and concurs with and encourages those who commit the crime, although he does not put his own hand to the actual execution of it. — SCOTT: *Tales of a Grandmerly occupied by Laurens Koster (or Coster), who is credited, among others, with the invention of printing with movable types, about 1440 or 1446. Mention is first made of this inscription about 1628:

MEMORIAE SACRUM
 TYPOGRAPHIA
 ARS ARTIUM OMNIUM
 CONSERVATRIX.
 HIC PRIMUM INVENTA

Begging the question.

This is a common logical fallacy, petitio principii; and the first explanation of the phrase is to be found in Aristotle's Topica, VIII, 13, where the five ways of begging the question are set forth. The earliest English work in which the expression is found is The Arte of Logike plainlie set forth in our English Tongue. &c. [1584].

Bitter end.

This phrase is somewhat ambiguous as now used. The older form, "better end," was used to designate a crisis, or a moment of extremity. When in a gale a vessel has paid out all her cable, her cable has run out to the "better end," — the end which is secured within the vessel and little used. Robinson Crusoe, in describing the terrible storm in Yarmouth Roads, says: "We rode with two anchors ahead, and the cables veered out to the better end." CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales, The Squires Tale, Line 224, says: "They demen gladly to the badder ende," Skeat's glossary giving 'worse' as the definition for "badder."

Cockles of the heart.

<sup>1</sup> Compare inscription on the "Printer's Sun-Dial" at the Country Life Press (Doubleday and Company), Garden City, N.Y. Authorship uncertain, perhaps the late WALTER GILLISS:

O measure of Time! Thou merest mite
 Within the endless providence of God:
 May thy unerring finger ever point
 To those who printed first the written word.

ble explanation of the phrase lies (1) in the likeness of the heart to a cockleshell, — the base of the former being compared to the hinge of the latter; (2) in the zoological name for the cockle and its congeners, Cardium (heart). A contemporary explanation [1936] is the comparison of the cockle, or fire chamber, of the furnace with the chambers (ventricles and auricles) of the heart, hence, to warm the cockles of the heart. See Cervantes, page 1154.

Consistency thou art a jewel.

A popular saying, like "Be good, and you will be happy," or "Virtue is its own reward," that, like Topsy, just "grewed." From the earliest times it has been the popular tendency to call this or that cardinal virtue, or bright and shining excellence, a jewel, by way of emphasis. For example, Iago says:

"Good name, in man or woman, dear my lord,

Is the immediate jewel of their souls."

Shakespeare elsewhere calls experience a "jewel." Miranda says her modesty is the "jewel" in her dower; and in All's Well that Ends Well, Diana terms her chastity the "jewel" of her house. — R. A. WIGHT

O discretion, thou art a jewel! —

The Skylark, a Collection of Well-chosen Songs [London, 1772]

Dead as Chelsea.

To get Chelsea, to obtain the benefit of that hospital (for old soldiers). "Dead as Chelsea, by God!" an exclamation uttered by a grenadier at Fontenoy, 1745, on having his leg carried away by a cannon-ball. — Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue, quoted by BRADY in Varieties of Literature [1826]

Dirty work at the crossroads.

Notes and Queries (London) attributes this to WALTER MELVILLE's melodrama The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning, or No Wedding Bells for Him.

Dollar diplomacy.

Diplomacy used to promote the financial or commercial interests of a country abroad. — Webster's Collegiate Dictionary

Imperialistic activity by the President received another name. Republicans now simply called it "dollar diplomacy." — BEARD: Basic History of the United States, [1944], page 353, discussing the Taft administration. The expression was used in Harper's Weekly, April 23, 1910

Doesn't amount to Hannah Cook.

A saying common in Maine and on Cape Cod, Massachusetts, variously explained as a character who once lived on Campobello Island; a corruption of a phrase in Indian dialect; and a comparison with the worthlessness (for navigation) of a cook on board ship.

Don't sell America short.

Modern Version of J. P. MORGAN's saying, "Never be a bear on the United States." See MARK SULLIVAN: Our Times, II, 318.

Drive a coach and six through an Act of Parliament.

Credited to Sir Stephen Rice [1637-1715], who became Chief Baron of the Exchequer, by MACAULAY in History of England, Chap. 12

During good behaviour.

That after the said limitation shall take effect, . . . judge's commissions be made quando se bene gesserit. — Statutes 12 and 13, William III, Chap. 2, Sect. 3

FIFTH OF NOVEMBER (GUY FAWKES' DAY)

Don't you remember
The fifth of November,
The Gunpowder treason and Plot?

Ballad, chanted on "Pope Day" in Boston [1774]. Quoted in The History and Antiquities of Boston by SAMUEL GARD-NER DRAKE [1798-1875], from TUDOR's Life of Otis.

Free soll, free men, free speech, Frémont.

Rallying cry of the Republican Party in 1856, when John Charles Frémont [1813-1890], "the Pathfinder," was the party's candidate for the presidency.

Gentle craft.

According to John Brady [died 1814], in Clavis Calendaria [1812], this designation arose from the fact that in an old romance, a prince named Crispin is made to exercise, in honour of his namesake, Saint Crispin, the trade of shoemaking. There is a tradition that King Edward IV, in one of his disguises, once drank with a party of shoemakers, and pledged them. The story is alluded to in the old play of George a-Greene [1599]:

Marry, because you have drank with
the King,
And the King hath so graciously pledged you,
You shall no more be called shoemakers

But you and yours, to the world's end, Shall be called the trade of the gentle craft.

G. I. Joe.

This name, chosen for the soldier in Lieutenant DAVE BREGER's comic strip for Yank, the Army weekly, first appeared in the issue of June 17, 1942, and was speedily adopted as the popular appellation for all U. S. soldiers in World War II. Writing in Time [February 26, 1945], Lieutenant Breger said: "I decided on 'G. I. Joe,' the 'G. I.' [Government Issue] because of its prevalence in Army talk, and the 'Joe' for the alliterative effect."

The goose hangs high.

Originally, perhaps, "the goose honks high," — it cries and flies high. Wild geese fly higher when the weather is fine or promises to be fine. Hence, the prospects are bright; everything is favourable. — Century Dictionary

Another explanation is that in some parts of the country a goose is hung high to season, and denotes that a feast of roast goose will soon be ready.

The Great White Way.

Title of a novel (1901) by ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE [1861-1937], which was adopted as a name for Broadway and the theatrical district of New York.

Hot afternoons have been in Montana.

Title of a prize-winning poem by ELI SIEGEL, published in The Nation, New York, 1925.

How old is Ann?

This became a popular quotation when The New York Press, October 16, 1903, printed a simple problem: "Mary is 24 years old. She is twice as old as Ann was when Mary was as old as Ann is now. How old is Ann?" It seems incredible that so simple an equation in algebra should have caused so much anxiety, but it did. The answer is that Ann is 18.

The man on horseback.

Applied to General Georges Ernest Jean Marie Boulanger [1837-1891].

Nisi suadeat intervallis (Unless he recommends delays).

Used by Henry De Bracton [died 1268] in Folio 1243 and Folio 420 b; Register Original, 267 a.

Paying through the nose.

Grimm says that Odin had a poll-tax which was called in Sweden a nose-tax; it was a penny per nose, or poll. — Deutsche Rechts Alterthümer

Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God.

From an inscription on the cannon near which the ashes of President Bradshaw were lodged, on the top of a high hill near Martha Bay in Jamaica. — EZRA STILES: History of the Three Judges of King Charles I

This supposititious epitaph was found among the papers of Mr. Jefferson, and in his handwriting. It was supposed to be one of Dr. Franklin's spirit-stirring inspirations. — H. S. RANDALL: Life of Jefferson, Vol. III, Page 585

Rest and be thankful.

Inscription on a stone seat on the top of one of the Highlands in Scotland. It is the title of one of Wordsworth's poems.

Roland for an Oliver.

These were the two most famous of Charlemagne's paladins, and their exploits are rendered so ridiculously and equally extravagant by the old romancers, that from them arose the saying, to signify matching one incredible lie with another, giving tit for tat, as good as one receives. In King Henry VI, Part I, Act I, Sc. 2, Line 30, SHAKESPEARE says [in 1589]:

England all Olivers and Rowlands bred
During the time Edward the Third did reign.

Giant edition, Page 344.

The sixty-four dollar question.

This phrase first used April 21, 1940 on a Columbia Broadcasting System program, Take It Or Leave It. This is a quiz program consisting of seven increasingly difficult questions for which the participant is awarded $1, $2, $4, $8, $16, $32, and $64 respectively for each question correctly answered, but may retire after any question. The $64 question is the climax question. Actually, because the audience is disappointed when a person answers six questions correctly and misses the seventh, the most difficult question is the sixth or $32 question.

The woods are full of them.

ALEXANDER WILSON [1766-1813], in the Preface to his American Ornithology [1808], quotes these words and relates the story of a boy who had been gathering flowers. On bringing them to his mother, he said: "Look, my dear ma! What beautiful flowers I have found growing in our place! Why, all the woods are full of them!"

THE NEW ENGLAND PRIMER<sup>1</sup>

In Adam's fall
We sinned all.

My Book and Heart
Must never part.

Young Obadiah,
David, Josias, —
All were pious.

Peter denied
His Lord, and cried.

Young Timothy
Learnt sin to fly.

Xerxes did die,
And so must I.

Zaccheus he Did climb the tree
Our Lord to see.

Our days begin with trouble here,
Our life is but a span,
And cruel death is always near,
So frail a thing is man.

<sup>1</sup> As early as 1691, Benjamin Harris, of Boston, advertised as in press the second impression of the New England Primer. The oldest copy known to be extant is dated 1737.

Now I lay me down to take my sleep,<sup>1</sup>
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

His wife, with nine small children and one at the breast, following him to the stake.

A house she hath, 'tis made of such good fashion,
The tenant ne'er shall pay for reparation,
Nor will the landlord ever raise her rent
Or turn her out of doors for non-payment;
From chimney-tax this cell is free,
To such a house who would not tenant be?

Here lie I, Martin Elginbrodde:
Ha'e mercy o' my soul, Lord God,

<sup>1</sup> The first record of this prayer is found in the Enchiridion Leonis [A.D. 1160]. In the earliest edition of the Primer, the prayer is given as above, which is copied from the reprint of 1777. In the edition of 1784 it is altered to read, "Now I lay me down to sleep." In the edition of 1814, the second line of the prayer reads, "I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep."

<sup>2</sup> The correct date is Feb. 4, 1555.

As I wad do, were I Lord God
And ye were Martin Elginbrodde.

*Aberdeen Churchyard (Quoted by GEORGE MACDONALD in his novel, David Elginbrod [1862],
Chap. 13)*

A dying preacher I have been,
To dying hearers such as you.
Though dead, a preacher still I am
To such as come my grave to view.
Let this to you a warning be
That quickly you must follow me.

OF UNKNOWN AUTHORSHIP

JUNIUS

One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate and constitute law. What yesterday was fact, to-day is doctrine.

The Letters of Junius.<sup>1</sup> Dedication to the English Nation

The liberty of the press is the Palladium of all the civil, political, and religious rights of an Englishman.

Ibid.

These are the gloomy companions of a disturbed imagination; the melancholy madness of poetry, without the inspiration.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. VII, To Sir William Draper [March 3, 1769]

There are some hereditary strokes of character by which a family may be as clearly distinguished as by the blackest features of the human face.

Ibid. XII, To the Duke of Grafton [May 30, 1769]

I do not give you to posterity as a pattern to imitate, but as an example to deter.

Ibid.

I believe there is yet a spirit of resistance in this country, which will not submit to be oppressed; but I am sure there is a fund of good sense in this country, which cannot be deceived.

Ibid. XVI, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser (H. S. Woodfall) [July 19, 1769]

We owe it to our ancestors to preserve entire those rights, which they have delivered to our care: we owe it to our posterity, not to suffer their dearest inheritance to be destroyed.

Ibid. XX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [August 8, 1769]

When the constitution is openly invaded, when the first original right of the people, from which all laws derive their authority, is directly attacked, inferior grievances naturally lose their force, and are suffered to pass by without punishment or observation.

The Letters of Junius. XXX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 17, 1769]

There is a moment of difficulty and danger at which flattery and falsehood can no longer deceive, and simplicity itself can no longer be misled.

Ibid. XXXV,<sup>1</sup> To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [December 19, 1769]

They [the Americans] equally detest the pageantry of a King, and the supercilious hypocrisy of a bishop.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid.

The least considerable man among us has an interest equal to the proudest nobleman, in the laws and constitution of his country, and is equally called upon to make a generous contribution in support of them; — whether it be the heart to conceive, the understanding to direct, or the hand to execute.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. XXXVII, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [March 19, 1770]

We lament the mistakes of a good man, and do not begin to detest him until he affects to renounce his principles.

The Letters of Junius. XLI, To Lord Mansfield [November 14, 1770]

<sup>1</sup> This letter is of great significance in the history of the liberty of the press. The publisher was prosecuted for seditious libel, and the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty of printing and publishing only." After a second trial, Woodfall was freed on the payment of costs.

The injustice to an individual is sometimes of service to the public. Facts are apt to alarm us more than the most dangerous principles.

The Letters of Junius. XLI, To Lord Mansfield [November 14, 1770]

An honest man, like the true religion, appeals to the understanding, or modestly confides in the internal evidence of his conscience. The impostor employs force instead of argument, imposes silence where he cannot convince, and propagates his character by the sword.

Ibid.

Private credit is wealth; — public honour is security. — The feather that adorns the royal bird, supports his flight. Strip him of his plumage, and you fix him to the earth.

Ibid. XLII, On the Falkland Islands [January 30, 1771]

If individuals have no virtues, their vices may be of use to us.

Ibid. LIX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 5, 1771]

The temple of fame is the shortest passage to riches and preferment.

Ibid.

Love not me for comely grace,
For my pleasing eye or face,
Nor for any outward part,
No, nor for a constant heart.

When want comes in at the door, love flies out of the window.<sup>1</sup>

Bobart, son of a celebrated botanist, died in 1719.

An Austrian army, awfully array'd,
 Boldly by battery besiege Belgrade;
 Cossack commanders cannonading
     come,
 Deal devastation's dire destructive

 Ev'ry endeavour engineers essay,
 For fame, for freedom, fight, fierce furious fray.

 Just Jesus, instant innocence instill!
 Kinsmen kill kinsmen, kindred kindred kill.
 Labour low levels longest, loftiest lines;
 Men march 'midst mounds, moats, mountains, murd'rous mines.
 Now noisy, noxious numbers notice
     nought,
 Of outward obstacles o'ercoming ought;
 Poor patriots perish, persecution's pest!
 Quite quiet Quakers "Quarter, quarter"
     quest;
 Reason returns, religion, right, redounds,
 Suwarrow, stop such sanguinary
     sounds!
 Truce to thee, Turkey, terror to thy train!
 Unwise, unjust, unmerciful Ukraine!
 Vanish vile vengeance, vanish victory vain!
 Why wish we warfare? wherefore welcome won

 Yield, ye young Yaghier yeomen, yield your yell!
 Zimmerman's, Zoroaster's, Zeno's zeal

A fox went out in a hungry plight
 And he begged of the moon to give him
     light,

For he'd many miles to go that night
 Before he could reach his den-O.

The Gray Goose. Stanza 1

The nox was lit by lux of Luna,
 And 'twas a nox most opportuna
 To catch a possum or a coona;
 For nix was scattered o'er this mundus,
 A shallow nix, et non profundus.

Carmen Possum

One night when the wind it blew cold,
 Blew bitter across the wild moor.
 Young Mary she came with her child,
 Wandering home to her own father's

Physicians of the highest rank
 (To pay their fees, we need a bank),
 Combine all wisdom, art and skill,
 Science and sense, in Calomel.

Calomel. Stanza 1 [before 1853]

Howe'er their patients may complain,
 Of head, or heart, or nerve, or vein,
 Of fever high, or parch, or swell,
 The remedy is Calomel.

Ibid. Stanza 2

The sons of the prophet are brave men
     and bold,
 And quite unaccustomed to fear,
 But the bravest by far in the ranks of the Shah

Was Abdul the Bulbul Amir.

Abdul the Bulbul Amir. Stanza 1

Now the heroes were plenty and well known to fame

Watts [1797-1864]. They were included in Bentley's Miscellany [1838], and in Literary Frivolities, compiled by William Dobson [1820-1884]. There are various versions of the Alliteration.

<sup>1</sup> Macbeth, Act 1, Sc. 1, Line 1.

In the troops that were led by the Czar,
And the bravest of these was a man by the name

Of Ivan Petruski Skavar.

Abdul the Bulbul Amir. Stanza 3

Oh, were you ne'er a school-boy,
And did you never train,
And feel that swelling of the heart
You ne'er can feel again?

Young Soldiers.<sup>1</sup> Stanza 1

We charged upon a flock of geese
And put them all to flight.

Ibid. Stanza 3

Oh, the praties they are small —
Over here, over here.

Oh, the praties they are small
When we dig 'em in the fall,
And we eat 'em, coats and all,
Full of fear, full of fear.

Irish Famine Song [1846-1847]

Oh, potatoes they grow small,
In Kansas.

Oh, potatoes they grow small,
For they plant them in the fall,
And they eat 'em skins and all,
In Kansas.

From the Sublime to the Ridiculous.<sup>1</sup> Stanza 3

Went out to milk and I didn't know how,

I milked the goat instead of the cow;

A monkey sittin' on a pile of straw

A-winkin' at his mother-in-law.

Turkey in the straw, turkey in the hay,
Roll 'em up and twist 'em up a high
tuckahaw,

And hit 'em up a tune called Turkey in the Straw.

Turkey in the Straw.<sup>2</sup> Stanza 1 and refrain

Sugar in the gourd and honey in the

The New Bedford Classic, as reported in "The History of New Bedford" [1918] by ZEPHANIAH W. PEASE [1861-1933]. Supposed to be said by the mate of a whaler to his ill-humored captain

Across the plains where once there roamed

The Indian and the Scout,

The Swede with alcoholic breath

Sets rows of cabbage out.

Quoted by D. W. BROGAN in "The American Character" [1944]

You-all means a race or section,

Family, party, tribe, or clan;

You-all means the whole connection

Of the individual man.

You-All. Stanza 2 [From The Richmond (Virginia) Times-Dispatch]

In the singular it's never

Used in this part of the land;

But we give up hope of ever

Making others understand.

Ibid. Stanza 4

The lady would remind you, please,

Her name is not Lost Angie Lees,

Nor Angie anything whatever.

She hopes her friends will be so clever

To share her fit historic pride,

The g shall not be jellified.

I pray the prayer the Easterners do,
May the peace of Allah abide with you;

Wherever you stay, wherever you go,

May the beautiful palms of Allah grow;

Through days of labor and nights of
rest,

The love of good Allah make you blest.

So I touch my heart as the Easterners
do, —

May the peace of Allah abide with you.

Salaam Alaikum (Peace Be with You)

Listen to the Exhortation of the Dawn!

Look to this Day!

For it is Life, the very Life of Life.

In its brief course lie all the Verities and Realities of your Existence:

The Bliss of Growth,

The Glory of Action,

The Splendor of Beauty.

For Yesterday is but a Dream,

And To-morrow is only a Vision;

But To-day well-lived makes every

Yesterday a Dream of Happiness,

And every To-morrow a Vision of Hope.

Look well therefore to this Day!

Such is the Salutation of the Dawn.

The Salutation of the Dawn, from the Sanskrit

The woman was not taken

From Adam's head, you know,

So she must not command him,
 'Tis evidently so;
 The woman was not taken
 From Adam's feet, you see,
 So he must not abuse her —
 The meaning seems to be.
 The woman she was taken
 From under Adam's arm,
 Which shows he must protect her
 From injury and harm.

Reuben and Rachel.<sup>1</sup> Stanza 1

Mankind looks forth with careful glance,

Time steady plies the oar,
While old age calmly waits to hear
The keel upon the shore.

Life Voyage (on an engraving by F. T. Stuart from a painting by Clarence M. Dobell)

There is never a daughter of Eve but once, ere the tale of her days is
done,

She will know the scent of the Eden rose, just once beneath the sun!

And whatever else she may win or lose,
endure, or do, or dare,

She will never forget the enchantment
it gave to the common air;

For the world may give her content or joy, fame, sorrow, or sacrifice,

But the hour that brought the scent of the rose, she lived it in Paradise.

The Rose of Eden: Arabic Legend

I loathe, abhor, despise,
Abominate dried apple pies.

I like good bread, I like good meat,

Or anything that's fit to eat,

But of all poor grub beneath the skies,

The poorest is dried apple pies.

Give me the toothache or sore eyes

In preference to such kind of pies.

Dried Apple Pies

Tread on my corns, or tell me lies,

But don't pass me dried apple pies!<sup>3</sup>

Stanza 2 [1880]*

There is a mystery in human hearts,
And though we be encircled by a host Of those who love us well and are beloved,

To every one of us, from time to time,
There comes a sense of utter loneliness.

A Solitary Way. Stanza 1 [1885]

And those who walk with Him from day to day

Can never have a solitary way.

Ibid. Stanza 3

In the first person, simply shall fore-

In will a threat or else a promise dwells;
Shall in the second and third does threat,

Will then simply foretells a future feat.

The little cares that fretted me,

I lost them yesterday,

Among the fields above the sea,

Among the winds at play,

Among the lowing of the herds,

The rustling of the trees,

Among the singing of the birds,

The humming of the bees.

The foolish fears of what might pass

I cast them all away

Among the clover-scented grass,

Among the new-mown hay,

Among the hushing of the corn

Where drowsy poppies nod,

Where ill thoughts die and good are born —

Out in the fields with God!

Cut your nails on Monday, cut them for wealth,

Cut them on Tuesday, cut them for health,

Cut them on Wednesday, cut them for news,

Cut them on Thursday, a new pair of shoes.

Cut them on Friday, cut them for sor-

Relief from the terrible fear which can do so much to engender the very thing feared.

Report on the International Control of Atomic Energy, published March 16, 1946

Anything constructive in relation to atomic energy must inevitably be novel and immensely difficult.

Ibid.

After an atomic war no good will and intelligence will be needed to bring a permanent peace to the survivors. They will get it in the jumbled stones of their cities.

The Frogs Desiring a King

A huge gap appeared in the side of the mountains. At last a tiny mouse poked its little head out of the gap.<sup>3</sup>

The Mountains in Labour

<sup>1</sup> Ruskin said of this epitaph that it was the noblest group of words ever uttered by man.
In Luderitzbucht Cemetery, German Southwest Africa, the lines, adapted to read:

Tell England, ye who pass this monument,
That we who rest here, die content,
mark the grave of Rex and Wilfred Wilmslow, who fell in the battle of Stetting [Nov., 1914].
In Southport, England, the War Memorial bears another adaptation of the epitaph:

Tell Britain, ye who mark this monument,
Faithful to her we fell, and rest content.

<sup>2</sup> Translated by WILLIAM LISLE BOWLES
[1762-1850].

<sup>3</sup> A mountain was in labour, sending forth dreadful groans, and there was in the region

Long since I knew to treat my foe like one

HERODOTUS

[484-424 B. C.]

Translation by William Beloe

[1756-1817]

Call no man happy till you know the nature of his death; he is at best but fortunate.<sup>1</sup>

Book I, Clio. Chap. 32

They [the Persians] are accustomed to deliberate on matters of the highest moment when warm with wine; but whatever they in this situation may determine is again proposed to them on the morrow, in their cooler moments, by the person in whose house they had before assembled. If at this time also it meet their approbation, it is executed; otherwise it is rejected. Whatever also they discuss when sober, is always a second time examined after they have been drinking.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 133

They joined battle, and the Phocaeans won, yet it was but a Cadmean victory.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 166

The art of medicine in Egypt is thus exercised: one physician is confined to the study and management of one disease; there are of course a great number who practice this art; some attend as a saying which everybody repeats, but nobody knows where to find.

They; who mutually injure the state, mutually support each other.

Book III, Thalia. Chap. 82

You may have observed how the thunderbolt of Heaven chastises the insolence of the more enormous animals, whilst it passes over without injury the weak and insignificant: before these weapons of the gods you must have seen how the proudest palaces and the loftiest trees fall and perish.<sup>1</sup>

titude, our form of government is called a democracy. Wherein there is not only an equality amongst all men in point of law for their private controversies, but in election to public offices we consider neither class nor rank, but each man is preferred according to his virtue or to the esteem in which he is held for some special excellence: nor is any one put back even through poverty, because of the obscurity of his person, so long as he can do good service to the commonwealth.

History. Book II, Chap. 37, Pericles' Funeral Oration over the Athenians who fell in the first year of the Peloponnesian War

And when Athens shall appear great to you, consider then that her glories were purchased by valiant men, and by men that learned their duty; by men that were sensible of dishonour when they came to act; by such men as, though they failed in their attempt, yet would not be wanting to the city with their virtue, but made unto it a most honourable contribution.

Ibid.

To famous men all the earth is a sepulchre.

Ibid.

Their virtues shall be testified not only by the inscription on stone at home but in all lands wheresoever in the unwritten record of the mind, which far beyond any monument will remain with all men everlastingly.

SOCRATES

[470-399 B. C.]

Translation by BENJAMIN JOWETT

Either death is a state of nothingness and utter unconsciousness, or, as men say, there is a change and migration of the soul from this world to another.

Apology

No evil can happen to a good man, either in life or after death.

Ibid.

Man is a prisoner who has no right to open the door of his prison and run away. . . . A man should wait, and not take his own life until God summons him.

Dialogues of PLATO. Phaedo

The partisan, when he is engaged in a dispute, cares nothing about the rights of the question, but is anxious only to convince his hearers of his own assertions.

Ibid.

False words are not only evil in themselves, but they infect the soul with evil.

Ibid.

The soul takes nothing with her to the other world but her education and culture; and these, it is said, are of the greatest service or of the greatest injury to the dead man, at the very beginning of his journey thither.

HIPPOCRATES

[460-377 B. C.]

Translation by WILLIAM HENRY
RICH JONES [1817-1885]

I swear by Apollo Physician, by Asclepius, by Health, by Panacea, and by all the gods and goddesses, making them my witnesses, that I will carry out, according to my ability and judgment, this oath and this indenture. To hold my teacher in this art equal to my own parents; to make him partner in my livelihood; when he is in need of money to share mine with him; to consider his family as my own brothers, and to teach them this art, if they want to learn it, without fee or indenture. I will use treatment to help the sick according to my ability and judgment, but never with a view to injury and wrong doing. I will keep pure and holy both my life and my art. In whatsoever houses I enter, I will enter to help the sick, and I will abstain from all intentional wrong-doing and harm. And whatsoever I shall see or hear in the course of my profession in my intercourse with men, if it be what should not be published abroad, I will never divulge, holding such things to be holy secrets. Now if I carry out this oath, and break it not, may I gain forever reputation among all men for my life and for my art; but if I transgress it and forswear myself, may the opposite befall me.

The Physician's Oath

Healing is a matter of time, but it is sometimes also a matter of opportunity.

Precepts. Chap. 1

Sometimes give your services for nothing, calling to mind a previous benefaction or present satisfaction. And if there be an opportunity of serving one who is a stranger in financial straits, give full assistance to all such. For where there is love of man, there is also love of the art. For some patients, though conscious that their condition is perilous, recover their health simply through their contentment with the goodness of the physician. And it is well to superintend the sick to make them well, to care for the healthy to keep them well, but also to care for one's own self, so as to observe what is seemly.

Precepts. Chap. 6

In all abundance there is lack.

Ibid. Chap. 8

If for the sake of a crowded audience you do wish to hold a lecture, your ambition is no laudable one, and at least avoid all citations from the poets, for to quote them argues feeble industry.

Life is short and the art long.<sup>1</sup>

begin in early years.

Ibid. 403-C

They do certainly give very strange and new-fangled names to diseases.

Ibid. 405-C

The judge should not be young; he should have learned to know evil, not from his own soul, but from late and long observation of the nature of evil in others: knowledge should be his guide, not personal experience.

Ibid. 409-B

Everything that deceives may be said to enchant.

Ibid. 413-C

Under the influence either of poverty or of wealth, workmen and their work are equally liable to degenerate.

Ibid. Book IV, 421-E

Wealth is the parent of luxury and indolence, and poverty of meanness and viciousness, and both of discontent.

Ibid. 422

The direction in which education starts a man will determine his future life.

Ibid. 425-B

What is the prime of life? May it not be defined as a period of about twenty years in a woman's life, and thirty in a man's?

Ibid. Book V, 460-E

Let there be one man who has a city obedient to his will, and he might bring

<sup>1</sup> See Richard Franck, page 171.

into existence the ideal polity about which the world is so incredulous.

The Republic. Book V, 502-B

Astronomy compels the soul to look upwards and leads us from this world to another.

Ibid. Book VII, 529

I have hardly ever known a mathematician who was capable of reasoning.

Ibid. 531-E

Solon was under a delusion when he said that a man when he grows old may learn many things — for he can no more learn much than he can run much; youth is the time for any extraordinary toil.

Ibid. 536-D

Bodily exercise, when compulsory, does no harm to the body; but knowledge which is acquired under compulsion obtains no hold on the mind.

Ibid. 536-E

Let early education be a sort of amusement; you will then be better able to find out the natural bent.

Ibid. 537

The character of the son begins to develop when he hears his mother complaining that her husband has no place in the government, of which the consequence is that she has no precedence among other women.

Ibid. Book VIII, 549-C

Oligarchy: A government resting on a valuation of property, in which the rich have power and the poor man is deprived of it.

Ibid. 550-C

Democracy, which is a charming form of government, full of variety and disorder, and dispensing a sort of equality to equals and unequals alike.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 558-C

The people have always some champion whom they set over them and nurse into greatness. . . . This and no other is the root from which a tyrant springs; when he first appears he is a protector.

Ibid. 565-C

In the early days of his power, he is full of smiles, and he salutes every one whom he meets.

The Republic. Book VIII, 566-D

When the tyrant has disposed of foreign enemies by conquest or treaty, and there is nothing to fear from them, then he is always stirring up some war or other, in order that the people may require a leader.

Ibid. 566-E

Has he not also another object which is that they may be impoverished by payment of taxes, and thus compelled to devote themselves to their daily wants and therefore less likely to conspire against him?

Ibid. 567

What a poor appearance the tales of poets make when stripped of the colours which music puts upon them, and recited in simple prose.

Ibid. Book X, 601-B

There are three arts which are concerned with all things: one which uses, another which makes, a third which imitates them.

Ibid. 601-D

No human thing is of serious importance.

Ibid.

The soul of man is immortal and imperishable.

Ibid. 608-D

These are the Fates, daughters of Necessity . . . Lachesis singing of the past, Clotho of the present, Atropos of the future.

Ibid. 617-C

You are young, my son, and, as the years go by, time will change and even reverse many of your present opinions. Refrain therefore awhile from setting yourself up as a judge of the highest matters.<sup>1</sup>

Laws. 888

<sup>1</sup> I could never divide myself from any man upon the difference of an opinion, or be angry with his judgment for not agreeing with me in that from which perhaps within a few days I should dissent myself. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Religio Medici (Everyman ed.), P. 7

And this, which you deem of no moment is the very highest of all: that is whether you have a right idea of the gods, whereby you may live your life well or ill.

Laws. 888

Not one of them who took up in his youth with this opinion that there are no gods, ever continued until old age faithful to his conviction.

Ibid.

ZEUXIS

[Circa 400 B. C.]

Criticism comes easier than craftsmanship.

Quoted by PLINY in Natural History

ARISTOTLE

[384-322 B. C.]

Poverty is the parent of revolution and crime.

Politics.<sup>1</sup> Book II

Even when laws have been written down, they ought not always to remain unaltered.

Ibid.

The law has no power to command obedience except that of habit, which can only be given by time, so that a readiness to change from old to new laws enfeebles the power of the law.

Ibid.

That judges of important causes should hold office for life is not a good thing, for the mind grows old as well as the body.

Ibid.

If liberty and equality, as is thought by some, are chiefly to be found in democracy, they will be best attained when all persons alike share in the government to the utmost.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Book IV

The best political community is formed by citizens of the middle class. Those States are likely to be well administered in which the middle class is large, and larger if possible than both the other classes, or at any rate than either singly; for the addition of the middle class turns the scale and prevents either of the extremes from being dominant.

Politics. Book IV

Inferiors revolt in order that they may be equal, and equals that they may be superior. Such is the state of mind which creates revolutions.

Ibid. Book V

Revolutions break out when opposite parties, the rich and the poor, are equally balanced, and there is little or nothing between them; for, if either party were manifestly superior, the other would not risk an attack upon them.

Ibid.

All admit that in a certain sense the several kinds of character are bestowed by nature. Justice, a tendency to Temperance, Courage, and the other types of character are exhibited from the moment of birth.

Nicomachean Ethics. VI, 13, 1

In practical matters the end is not mere speculative knowledge of what is to be done, but rather the doing of it. It is not enough to know about Virtue, then, but we must endeavour to possess it, and to use it, or to take any other steps that may make us good.

Ibid. X, 9, 1

The generality of men are naturally apt to be swayed by fear rather than by reverence, and to refrain from evil rather because of the punishment that it brings, than because of its own foulness.

Ibid.

What makes men good is held by some to be nature, by others habit or training, by others instruction. As for the goodness that comes by nature, this is plainly not within our control, but is bestowed by some divine agency on certain people who truly deserve to be called fortunate.

Ibid. 9, 6

DEMOSTHENES

[384-322 B. C.]

I do not purchase regret at such a price.

Reply to Laïs

Though a man escape every other danger, he can never wholly escape those who do not want such a person as he is to exist.

De Falsa Legatione.<sup>1</sup> 228

Every advantage in the past is judged in the light of the final issue.

First Olynthiac.<sup>1</sup> 11

Like the diet prescribed by doctors, which neither restores the strength of the patient nor allows him to succumb, so these doles that you are now distributing neither suffice to ensure your safety nor allow you to renounce them and try something else.

Third Olynthiac.<sup>1</sup> 33

To remind the man of the good turns you have done him is very much like a reproach.

De Corona.<sup>1</sup> 269

You knew not how to live in clover.

The Girl from Samos. Act 2, Sc. 4

The man who first invented the art of supporting beggars made many wretched.

The Fishermen. Fragment

We live, not as we wish to, but as we can.

The Lady of Andros. Fragment

In many ways the saying "Know thyself" is not well said. It were more practical to say "Know other people."<sup>2</sup>

Thrasyleon. Fragment

I call a fig a fig, a spade a spade.<sup>3</sup>

A similar saying is credited to Aristophanes by LUCIAN, Quom. Hist. sit conscrib., 41

Brought up like a rude Macedon, and taught

A woman is necessarily an evil, but he that gets the most tolerable one is lucky.<sup>1</sup>

Unidentified minor fragment

Manner, not gold, is woman's best adornment.

Fragment. Quoted in The Spectator, January 3, 1712

PILPAY OR BIDPAI<sup>2</sup>

[Circa 326 B. C.?] ]

We ought to do our neighbour all the good we can. If you do good, good will be done to you; but if you do evil, the same will be measured back to you again.<sup>3</sup>

Chap. 1. Dabschelim and Pilpay

It has been the providence of Nature to give this creature [the cat] nine lives instead of one.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. Fable 3, The Greedy and Ambitious Cat

There is no gathering the rose without being pricked by the thorns.<sup>5</sup>

Chap. 2. Fable 6, The Two Travellers

Wise men say that there are three sorts of persons who are wholly deprived of judgment, — they who are ambitious of preferments in the courts of princes; they who make use of poison to call a spade a spade. — STEPHEN GOSSON [1554-1624]: Ephemerides of Phialo [1579].

I think it good plain English, without fraud, To call a spade a spade, a bawd a bawd.

JOHN TAYLOR, the "Water Poet" [1580-1653]

<sup>2</sup> Theodor Benfey [1809-1881], German Orientalist, in tracing the name Pilpay or Bidpai, found that it was an appellative applied to the chief pandit or court scholar of an Indian prince. The Fables of Pilpay, or Kalilah and Dimnah, are the Arabic translation of the Pahlavi translation of the Sanskrit original of the Panchatantra. The first English translation appeared in 1570.

to show their skill in curing it; and they who intrust women with their secrets.

Chap. 2. Fable 6, The Two Travellers

Men are used as they use others.

Ibid. Fable 9, The King Who Became Just

What is bred in the bone will never come out of the flesh.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. Fable 14, The Two Fishermen

Guilty consciences always make people cowards.<sup>2</sup>

Chap. 3. Fable 3, The Prince and His Minister

Whoever . . . prefers the service of princes before his duty to his Creator, will be sure, early or late, to repent in vain.

Ibid.

There are some who bear a grudge even to those that do them good.

Ibid. Fable 6, A Religious Doctor

There was once, in a remote part of the East, a man who was altogether void of knowledge and experience, yet presumed to call himself a physician.

Ibid. Fable 8, The Ignorant Physician

He that plants thorns must never expect to gather roses.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid.

Honest men esteem and value nothing so much in this world as a real friend. Such a one is as it were another self, to whom we impart our most secret thoughts, who partakes of our joy, and comforts us in our affliction; add to this, that his company is an everlasting pleasure to us.

Chap. 4. Choice of Friends

<sup>1</sup> It will not out of the flesh that is bred in the bone. — HEYWOOD: Proverbes, Part II, Chap. 8

<sup>2</sup> Conscience does make cowards of us all.

SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, Act III, Sc. 1, L. 83

<sup>3</sup> Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. — Galatians, VI, 7

As you sow, ye are like to reap.

BUTLER: Hudibras, II, ii, 504

That possession was the strongest tenure of the law.<sup>1</sup>

Chap. 5. Fable 4, The Cat and the Two Birds

Wild elephants are caught by tame;

With money it is just the same.

THEOCRITUS

[THIRD CENTURY B. C.]

Translation by J. M. EDMONDS, Loeb Classical Library

'Tis peace of mind, lad, we must find, and have a beldame nigh

To sit for us and spit for us and bid all ill go by.

The Harvest-Home. Line 126

O cricket is to cricket dear, and ant for ant doth long,

The hawk's the darling of his fere, and o' me the Muse and her song.

The Third Country Singing-Match. Line 31

O to be a frog, my lads, and live aloof from care.

The Reapers. Line 52

Thou 'lt cut thy finger, niggard, a splitting caraway.

Ibid. Line 55

A great love goes here with a little gift.

The Distaff. Line 24

<sup>3</sup> Ptolemy I, King of Egypt, wished to study geometry, without going over the thirteen parts of Euclid's Elements. He said that a short-cut would be agreeable, whereupon Euclid answered that there was no royal road to geometry. Often misquoted as "no royal road to learning."

According as the man is, so must you humour him.

Ibid. Line 77 (431)

It is a maxim of old that among themselves all things are common to friends.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 3, Line 18 (803)

It is the common vice of all, in old age, to be too intent upon our interests.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. Sc. 8, Line 30 (953)

MARCUS TULLIUS CICERO

[106-43 B. C.]

For as lack of adornment is said to become some women, so this subtle oration, though without embellishment, gives delight.<sup>4</sup>

De Oratore. 78

Thus in the beginning the world was so made that certain signs come before certain events.<sup>5</sup>

De Divinatione. I, 118

He is never less at leisure than when at leisure.<sup>6</sup>

De Officiis. IX, 10

What a time! What a civilization!<sup>7</sup>

Catiline. I, 1

For how many things, which for our own sake we should never do, do we perform for the sake of our friends.

De Amicitia. 8 XVI

Nothing can be more disgraceful than to be at war with him with whom you have lived on terms of friendship.

De Amicitia. XXI

He removes the greatest ornament of friendship, who takes away from it respect.

Ibid. XXII

There is no greater bane to friendship than adulation, fawning, and flattery.

Ibid. XXV

Crimes are not to be measured by the issue of events, but from the bad intentions of men.

Paradox III

There is no place more delightful than home.

Epistolae. IV, 8

While the sick man has life there is hope.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. IX, 10

For as I like a young man in whom there is something of the old, so I like an old man in whom there is something of the young; and he who follows this maxim, in body will possibly be an old man, but he will never be an old man in mind.

De Senectute.<sup>2</sup> XI

Old age is by nature rather talkative.

Ibid. XVI

Old age, especially an honored old age, has so great authority, that this is of more value than all the pleasures of youth.

Ibid. XVII

Intelligence, and reflection, and judgment, reside in old men, and if there had been none of them, no states could exist at all.

Ibid. XIX

The short period of life is long enough for living well and honourably.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid.

The harvest of old age is the recollection and abundance of blessings previously secured.

De Senectute. XIX

Nor, in truth, would the honours of illustrious men continue after death, if their own spirits did not make us preserve a longer remembrance of them.

Ibid. XXII

Old age is the consummation of life, just as of a play.

Ibid. XXIII

LUCRETIVS

[95-55 B. C.]

Continual dropping wears away a stone.<sup>1</sup>

De Rerum Natura. I, 313

The swift runners who hand over the lamp of life.

Ibid. II, 279

What is food to one man may be fierce poison to others.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. IV, 637

In the midst of the fountain of wit there arises something bitter, which stings in the very flowers.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. 1133

[86-34 B. C.]

Translation by J. C. ROLFE

Experience has shown that to be true which Appius<sup>4</sup> says in his verses, that every man is the architect of his own fortune; <sup>5</sup> and this proverb is especially true of you, who have excelled others to such a degree that men are sooner wearied in singing the praises of your deeds than you in doing deeds worthy of praise.

Speech on the State, Addressed to Caesar in His Later Years. Chap. I, Sentence 2

<sup>1</sup> While there is life, there's hope. — JOHN

VIRGIL

[70-19 B. C.]

Age carries all things, even the mind, away.

Bucolics. IX, Line 51

We have now made you for a time out of marble.

Eclogues. VII, Line 35

Love conquers all.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. X, Line 69

Be favourable to bold beginnings.<sup>2</sup>

Georgics. I, Line 40

Practice, by taking thought, might little by little hammer out divers arts.

Ibid. Line 133

Let the fields and the gliding streams in the valleys delight me. Inglorious, let me court the rivers and forests.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. II, Line 485

Some trouble the dangerous seas with oars, others rush to arms.

Ibid. Line 503

Happy they whose walls already rise.

Aeneid. Book I, Line 437

While rivers run into the sea, while on the mountains shadows move over the slopes, while heaven feeds the stars, ever shall thy honour, thy name, and thy praises endure.

Ibid. Line 607

I fear the Greeks, even when bringing gifts.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. Book II, Line 49

Do not commit your poems to pages alone. Sing them, I pray you.

Ibid. Book VI, Line 74

<sup>1</sup> See Chaucer, page 5.

<sup>2</sup> For the reverse side of the Great Seal of the United States (first used on the silver dollar certificates, series of 1935) this line of Virgil has been adapted, changed from the imperative mood, Audacibus annue coeplis, to the indicative mood, Annuit coeplis. He smiles on our beginnings.

<sup>4</sup> See Euripides, page 1082.

Easy is the descent to Avernus.

Aeneid. Book VI, Line 126

Fortunate isle, the abode of the blest.

Ibid. Line 639

Faith in the tale is old, but its fame is everlasting.

Ibid. Book IX, Line 79

It is enough to have perished once.

Ibid. Line 140

I could not bear a mother's tears.

Ibid. Line 289

Steep thyself in a bowl of summertime.

Minor Poems. Copa: Syrisca, a Dancing Girl, Line 29

Here's Death, twitching my ear:
"Live," says he, "for I'm coming."<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Line 38

These lines made I, another steals my honors;

So you for others, oxen, bear the yoke;
So you for others, bees, store up your honey;

So you for others, sheep, put on your fleece;

So you for others, birds, construct your nests.<sup>3</sup>

HORACE

[65-8 B. C.]

Everyman Edition

But if by thee place 'mid the bards I'm given,

<sup>3</sup> Virgil wrote a distich, praising Caesar, and Bathyllus claimed the lines. To expose him, Virgil wrote beneath the distich the following incomplete verses, and Caesar asked Bathyllus to finish the lines. He could not, and Virgil then supplied the missing words (italicized below):

Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter honores;
Sic vos non vobis, fertis aratra boves;
Sic vos non vobis, mellificatis apes;
Sic vos non vobis, vellera fertis oves;
Sic vos non vobis, nudificatis aves.

With soaring head I'll strike the stars of heaven.

Odes, Book I.<sup>1</sup> I, To Maecenas, Line 35

No task's too steep for human wit.

Ibid. III, To a Ship Bearing Virgil Over Seas, Line 37

With equal foot Pluto knocks at hovels of the poor,
And at the tyrant's towers.

Ibid. IV, Spring, Line 13

To-night with wine drown care.

Ibid. VII, To Plancus, Line 30

Melt me this cold, freely the firelogs throwing

On hearth, my Thaliarchus! And from crock

Two-eared, of Sabine make, unlock Wine, with four years a-glowing! <sup>2</sup>

Ibid. IX, To Thaliarchus, Line 5

What next morn's sun may bring, forebear to ask;

But count each day that comes by gift of chance

So much to the good.

Ibid. Line 13

Seize now and here the hour that is, nor trust some later day! <sup>3</sup>

Ibid. XI, Leuconoe, Last line

Daughter, than lovely mother lovelier still. <sup>4</sup>

*Ibid. XVI, A Palinode or Song of Apology, To a Beloved Girl,
Line 1*

Ills which Fate forbids to heal,
Are by endurance lighter made.

Ibid. XXIV, Quintilius, Line 19

One night waits all; Death's road we all must go.

Ibid. XXVIII, Archytas, Line 16

Grant that in age I may not drift

Long years, my lyre forgot! <sup>5</sup>

No one lives content with his condition, whether reason gave it him, or chance threw it in his way.

Satires, Book I. 5 I, Line 1

We rarely find a man who can say he has lived happy, and content with his life can retire from the world like a satisfied guest.

Ibid. Line 117

This is a fault common to all singers, that among their friends they never are inclined to sing when they are asked, unasked they never desist.

Ibid. III, Line 1

There are many who recite their writings in the middle of the forum;
and who do it while bathing: the closeness of the place gives melody to the voice.

Ibid. IV, Line 74

Ridicule often decides matters of im-

What fools these mortals be.<sup>3</sup>

Epistles. 1, 3

It is not the man who has too little, but the man who craves more, that is poor.

Ibid. 2, 2

Love of bustle is not industry.

Ibid. 3, 5

Live among men as if God beheld you; speak to God as if men were listening.

Ibid. 10, 5

The best ideas are common property.

Ibid. 12, 11

Men do not care how nobly they live, but only how long, although it is within the reach of every man to live nobly, but within no man's power to live long.

Ibid. 22, 17

A great pilot can sail even when his canvas is rent.

PLINY THE ELDER

[A. D. 23-79]

With some alterations, from translations by JOHN BOSTOCK, M.D. [1773-1846] and HENRY THOMAS RILEY [1816-1878]. Bohn Classical Library

In comparing various authors with one another, I have discovered that some of the gravest and latest writers have transcribed, word for word, from former works, without making acknowledgment.

Natural History. Book I, Dedication, Sect. 22

The world, and whatever that be which we call the heavens, by the vault of which all things are enclosed, we must conceive to be a deity, to be eternal, without bounds, neither created nor subject at any time to destruction. To inquire what is beyond it is no concern of man; nor can the human mind form any conjecture concerning it.

Ibid. Book II, Sect. 1

It is ridiculous to suppose that the great head of things, whatever it be, pays any regard to human affairs.

Ibid. Sect. 20

Everything is soothed by oil, and this is the reason why divers send out small quantities of it from their mouths, because it smooths every part which is rough.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Sect. 234

<sup>1</sup> See Aesop, page 1076.

<sup>2</sup> Why does pouring oil on the sea make it clear and calm? Is it for that the winds, slipping the smooth oil, have no force, nor cause any waves? — PLUTARCH: Natural Questions, IX

Bishop Adain [A. D. 651] gave to a company about to take a journey by sea "some holy oil,

It is far from easy to determine whether she [Nature] has proved to him a kind parent or a merciless step-mother.<sup>1</sup>

*Natural History. Book VII,
Sect. 1*

Man alone at the very moment of his birth, cast naked upon the naked earth, does she abandon to cries and lamentations.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Sect. 2

To laugh, if but for an instant only, has never been granted to man before the fortieth day from his birth, and then it is looked upon as a miracle of precocity.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid.

Man is the only one that knows nothing, that can learn nothing without being taught. He can neither speak nor walk nor eat, and in short he can do nothing at the prompting of nature only, but weep.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. Sect. 4

saying, 'I know that when you go abroad you will meet with a storm and contrary wind; but do you remember to cast this oil I give you into the sea, and the wind shall cease immediately.' — BEDE: Ecclesiastical History, Book III, Chap. 14

In JARED SPARKS' edition of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S Works, Vol. VI, P. 354, there are letters between Franklin, Brownrigg, and Parish on the stilling of waves by means of oil.

<sup>1</sup> To man the earth seems altogether

No more a mother, but a step-dame rather.

GUILLAUME DE SALLUSTE DU BARTAS [1544-1590]: Divine Weekes and Workes, First Weeke, Thurd Day

<sup>2</sup> He is born naked, and falls a-whining at the first. — BURTON: Anatomy of Melancholy, Part I, Sect. 2, Memb. 3, Subsect. 10

And when I was born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, which is of like nature; and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do. — The Wisdom of Solomon, VII, 3

It was the custom among the ancients to place the new-born child upon the ground immediately after its birth.

<sup>3</sup> This term of forty days is mentioned by ARISTOTLE in his Natural History, as also by some modern physiologists.

With man, most of his misfortunes are occasioned by man.<sup>1</sup>

*Natural History. Book VII,
Sect. 5*

Indeed, what is there that does not appear marvellous when it comes to our knowledge for the first time? <sup>2</sup> How many things, too, are looked upon as quite impossible until they have been actually effected?

Ibid. Sect. 6

The human features and countenance, although composed of but some ten parts or little more, are so fashioned that among so many thousands of men there are no two in existence who cannot be distinguished from one another.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. Sect. 8

All men possess in their bodies a poison which acts upon serpents; and the human saliva, it is said, makes them take to flight, as though they had been touched with boiling water. The same substance, it is said, destroys them the moment it enters their throat.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. Sect. 15

It has been observed that the height of a man from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot is equal to the distance between the tips of the middle fingers of the two hands when extended in a straight line.

Ibid. Sect. 77

When a building is about to fall down, all the mice desert it.<sup>5</sup>

Ibid. Book VIII, Sect. 103

<sup>4</sup> Madame d'Abrantes relates that when Bonaparte was in Cairo he sent for a serpent-detector (Psylli) to remove two serpents that had been seen in his house. He having enticed one of them from his hiding-place, caught it in one hand, just below the jaw-bone, in such a manner as to oblige the mouth to open. when spitting into it, the effect was like magic: the reptile appeared struck with instant death. — Memoirs, Vol. I, Chap. 59

<sup>5</sup> This is alluded to by CICERO in his letters to Atticus, and is mentioned by AELIAN (Animated Nature, Book VI, Chap. 41). Compare the modern proverb, "Rats desert a sinking ship."

Bears when first born are shapeless masses of white flesh a little larger than mice, their claws alone being prominent. The mother then licks them gradually into proper shape.<sup>1</sup>

*Natural History. Book VIII,
Sect. 126*

It has become quite a common proverb that in wine there is truth.

Ibid. Book XIV, Sect. 141

Cincinnatus was ploughing his four jugera of land upon the Vaticanian Hill, — the same that are still known as the Quintian Meadows, — when the messenger brought him the dictatorship, finding him, the tradition says, stripped to the work.

Ibid. Book XVIII, Sect. 20

The agricultural population, says Cato, produces the bravest men, the most valiant soldiers, and a class of citizens the least given of all to evil designs.

Ibid. Sect. 26

Why is it that we entertain the belief that for every purpose odd numbers are the most effectual? <sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Book XXVIII, Sect. 23

It was a custom with Apelles, to which he most tenaciously adhered, never to let any day pass, however busy he might be, without exercising himself by tracing some outline or other, — a practice which has now passed into a proverb.<sup>3</sup> It was also a practice with him, when he had completed a work, to exhibit it to the view of the passers-by in his studio, while he himself, concealed behind the picture, would listen to the criticisms. . . . Under these circumstances, they say that he was censured by a shoemaker for having represented the shoes with one latchet too few. The next day, the shoemaker, quite proud at seeing the former error corrected, thanks to his advice, began to criticize the leg; upon which Apelles, full of indignation, popped his head out and reminded him that a shoemaker should give no opinion beyond the shoes,<sup>1</sup> — a piece of advice which has equally passed into a proverbial saying.

Plutarch relates (Isis and Osiris) that a ship well laden with passengers drove with the tide near the Isles of Paxi, when a loud voice was heard by most of the passengers calling unto one Thanus. The voice then said aloud to him, "When you are arrived at Palodes, take care to make it known that the great god Pan is dead."

<sup>2</sup> I am the things that are, and those that are to be, and those that have been. No one ever lifted my skirts; the fruit which I bore was the sun. — PROCLUS: On Plato's Timaeus, P. 30, D. (Inscription in the temple of Neith at Sais, in Egypt.)

Few men have been admired by their domesticities. — MONTAIGNE: Essays, Book III, Chap. 2

This phrase, "No man is a hero to his valet," is commonly attributed to Madame de Sévigné, but on the authority of Madame Aissé (Letters, edited by Jules Ravenal, 1853) it really belongs to Madame Cornuel.

Statesmen are not only liable to give an account of what they say or do in public, but there is a busy inquiry made into their very meals, beds, marriages, and every other sportive or serious action.

EPICTETUS

[Circa A. D. 60]

Translation [1865] by THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON [1823-1911], based on that [1758] of ELIZABETH CARTER [1717-1806]

To a reasonable creature, that alone is insupportable which is unreasonable; but everything reasonable may be supported.

Discourses. Chap. 2

When you have shut your doors, and darkened your room, remember never to say that you are alone, for you are not alone; <sup>3</sup> but God is within, and your genius is within, — and what need have they of light to see what you are doing?

Ibid. Chap. 14

No great thing is created suddenly, any more than a bunch of grapes or a fig. If you tell me that you desire a fig, I answer you that there must be time. Let it first blossom, then bear fruit, then ripen.

Ibid. Chap. 15

Any one thing in the creation is sufficient to demonstrate a Providence to an humble and grateful mind.

Ibid. Chap. 16

Were I a nightingale, I would act the part of a nightingale; were I a swan, the part of a swan.

Ibid.

Since it is Reason which shapes and regulates all other things, it ought not itself to be left in disorder.

Ibid. Chap. 17

Practise yourself, for heaven's sake, in little things; and thence proceed to greater.

Discourses. Chap. 18

Why, then, do you walk as if you had swallowed a ramrod?

Ibid. Chap. 21

Difficulties are things that show what men are.

Ibid. Chap. 24

If we are not stupid or insincere when we say that the good or ill of man lies within his own will, and that all beside is nothing to us, why are we still troubled?

Ibid. Chap. 25

In theory there is nothing to hinder our following what we are taught; but in life there are many things to draw us aside.

Ibid. Chap. 26

Appearances to the mind are of four kinds. Things either are what they appear to be; or they neither are, nor appear to be; or they are, and do not appear to be; or they are not, and yet appear to be. Rightly to aim in all these cases is the wise man's task.

MARCUS AURELIUS

ANTONINUS

[A. D. 121-180]

*Translation by MORRIS HICKEY
MORGAN [1859-1910]*

This Being of mine, whatever it really is, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the part which governs.

Meditations. II, 2

The ways of the gods are full of providence.

Ibid. 3

Thou wilt find rest from vain fancies if thou doest every act in life as though it were thy last.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 5

Find time still to be learning somewhat good, and give up being desultory.

Ibid. 7

No state sorrier than that of the man who keeps up a continual round, and pries into "the secrets of the nether world," as saith the poet, and is curious in conjecture of what is in his neighbour's heart.

Ibid. 13

Though thou be destined to live three thousand years and as many myriads besides, yet remember that no man loseth other life than that which he liveth, nor liveth other than that which he loseth.

Ibid. 14

For a man can lose neither the past nor the future; for how can one take from him that which is not his? So remember these two points: first, that each thing is of like form from everlasting and comes round again in its cycle, and that it signifies not whether a man shall look upon the same things for a hundred years or two hundred, or for an infinity of time; second, that the longest lived and the shortest lived man, when they come to die, lose one and the same thing.

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> See Publilius Syrus, Maxim 633.

As for life, it is a battle and a sojourning in a strange land; but the fame that comes after is oblivion.

Meditations. II, 17

Waste not the remnant of thy life in those imaginations touching other folk, whereby thou contributest not to the common weal.

Ibid. III, 4

A man should be upright, not be kept upright.

Ibid. 5

Never esteem anything as of advantage to thee that shall make thee break thy word or lose thy self-respect.

Ibid. 7

Let no act be done at haphazard, nor otherwise than according to the finished rules that govern its kind.

Ibid. IV, 2

By a tranquil mind I mean nothing else than a mind well ordered.

Ibid. 3

Think on this doctrine, — that reasoning beings were created for one another's sake; that to be patient is a branch of justice, and that men sin without intending it.

Ibid.

The universe is change; our life is what our thoughts make it.

Ibid.

Nothing can come out of nothing,<sup>1</sup> any more than a thing can go back to nothing.

Ibid. 4

Death, like generation, is a secret of Nature.

Ibid. 5

That which makes the man no worse than he was makes his life no worse: it has no power to harm, without or within.

Ibid. 8

Whatever happens at all happens as it should; thou wilt find this true, if thou shouldst watch narrowly.

Ibid. 10

How much time he gains who does not look to see what his neighbour says or does or thinks, but only at what he does himself, to make it just and holy.

Meditations. IV, 18

Whatever is in any way beautiful hath its source of beauty in itself, and is complete in itself; praise forms no part of it. So it is none the worse nor the better for being praised.

Ibid. 20

All that is harmony for thee, O Universe, is in harmony with me as well. Nothing that comes at the right time for thee is too early or too late for me. Everything is fruit to me that thy seasons bring, O Nature. All things come of thee, have their being in thee, and return to thee.

Ibid. 23

"Let thine occupations be few," saith the sage,<sup>1</sup> "if thou wouldst lead a tranquil life."

Ibid. 24

Love the little trade which thou hast learned, and be content therewith.

Ibid. 31

Remember this, — that there is a proper dignity and proportion to be observed in the performance of every act of life.

Ibid. 32

All is ephemeral, — fame and the famous as well.

Ibid. 35

Observe always that everything is the result of a change, and get used to thinking that there is nothing Nature loves so well as to change existing forms and to make new ones like them.

Ibid. 36

Search men's governing principles, and consider the wise, what they shun and what they cleave to.

Ibid. 38

Time is a sort of river of passing events, and strong is its current; no sooner is a thing brought to sight than it is swept by and another takes its place, and this too will be swept away.

<sup>1</sup> DEMOCRITUS apud Senecam: De Ira, III, 6; De Animi Tranquillitate, 13

All that happens is as usual and familiar as the rose in spring and the crop in summer.

Meditations. IV, 44

That which comes after ever conforms to that which has gone before.

Ibid. 45

Mark how fleeting and paltry is the estate of man, — yesterday in embryo, to-morrow a mummy or ashes. So for the hair's-breadth of time assigned to thee live rationally, and part with life cheerfully, as drops the ripe olive, extolling the season that bore it and the tree that matured it.

Ibid. 48

Deem not life a thing of consequence. For look at the yawning void of the future, and at that other limitless space, the past.

Ibid. 50

Always take the short cut; and that is the rational one. Therefore say and do everything according to soundest reason.

Ibid. 51

In the morning, when thou art sluggish at rousing thee, let this thought be present; "I am rising to a man's work."

Ibid. V, 1

A man makes no noise over a good deed, but passes on to another as a vine to bear grapes again in season.

Ibid. 6

Nothing happens to anybody which he is not fitted by nature to bear.

Ibid. 18

Live with the gods.

Ibid. 27

Look beneath the surface; let not the several quality of a thing nor its worth escape thee.

Ibid. VI, 3

The controlling Intelligence understands its own nature, and what it does, and whereon it works.

Ibid. 5

Do not think that what is hard for thee to master is impossible for man; but if a thing is possible and proper to man, deem it attainable by thee.

Ibid. 19

If any man can convince me and bring home to me that I do not think or act aright, gladly will I change; for I search after truth, by which man never yet was harmed.

Meditations. VI, 21

What is not good for the swarm is not good for the bee.

Ibid. 54

How many, once lauded in song, are given over to the forgotten; and how many who sung their praises are clean gone long ago!

Ibid. VII, 6

One Universe made up of all that is; and one God in it all, and one principle of Being, and one Law, the Reason, shared by all thinking creatures, and one Truth.

Ibid. 9

Let not thy mind run on what thou lackest as much as on what thou hast already.

Ibid. 27

Just as the sand-dunes, heaped one upon another, hide each the first, so in life the former deeds are quickly hidden by those that follow after.

Ibid. 34

The art of living is more like wrestling than dancing, in so far as it stands ready against the accidental and the unforeseen, and is not apt to fall.

Ibid. 61

Remember this, — that very little is needed to make a happy life.

Ibid. 67

Remember that to change thy mind and to follow him that sets thee right, is to be none the less the free agent that thou wast before.

Ibid. VIII, 16

Look to the essence of a thing, whether it be a point of doctrine, of practice, or of interpretation.

Ibid. 22

Be not careless in deeds, nor confused in words, nor rambling in thought.

Ibid. 51

Think not disdainfully of death, but look on it with favour; for even death is one of the things that Nature wills.

Ibid. IX, 3

A wrong-doer is often a man that has left something undone, not always he that has done something.

Meditations. IX, 5

Blot out vain pomp; check impulse; quench appetite; keep reason under its own control.

Ibid. 7

Things that have a common quality ever quickly seek their kind.

Ibid. 9

All things are the same, — familiar in enterprise, momentary in endurance, coarse in substance. All things now are as they were in the day of those whom we have buried.

Ibid. 14

Everything is in a state of metamorphosis. Thou thyself art in everlasting change and in corruption to correspond; so is the whole universe.

Ibid. 19

Forward, as occasion offers. Never look round to see whether any shall note it. . . . Be satisfied with success in even the smallest matter, and think that even such a result is no trifle.

Ibid. 29

Whatever may befall thee, it was pre-ordained for thee from everlasting.

Ibid. X, 5

"The earth loveth the shower," and "the holy ether knoweth what love is."<sup>1</sup> The Universe, too, loves to create whatsoever is destined to be made.

Ibid. 21

ATHENAEUS

[Circa A. D. 200]

Translation by CHARLES DUKE YONGE [1812–1891]

It was a saying of Demetrius Phalereus, that "Men having often abandoned what was visible for the sake of what was uncertain, have not got what they expected, and have lost what they had, — being unfortunate by an enigmatical sort of calamity."

The Deipnosophists. VI, 23

Every investigation which is guided by principles of Nature fixes its ultimate aim entirely on gratifying the stomach.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. VII, 11

Dorion, ridiculing the description of a tempest in the "Nautilus" of Timotheus, said that he had seen a more formidable storm in a boiling saucepan.<sup>3</sup>

DIOGENES LAERTIUS<sup>4</sup>

[Circa A. D. 200]

From The Lives and Opinions of Eminent Philosophers, translated by CHARLES DUKE YONGE [1812–1891]. Bohn Classical Library

When Thales was asked what was difficult, he said, "To know one's self."

(I believe it because it is impossible). Also attributed to St. Augustine in the form "Credo quia absurdum."

<sup>4</sup> There is scarce any Philosopher but dies twice or thrice in Laertius; nor almost any life without two or three deaths in Plutarch. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Urn-Burial, Chap. 3

And what was easy, "To advise another."

Thales. 9

The apophthegm "Know thyself" is his.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 13

Writers differ with respect to the apophthegms of the Seven Sages, attributing the same one to various authors.

Ibid. 14

Solon used to say that speech was the image of actions; . . . that laws were like cobwebs, — for that if any trifling or powerless thing fell into them, they held it fast; while if it were something weightier, it broke through them and was off.

Solon. 10

Solon gave the following advice: "Consider your honour, as a gentleman, of more weight than an oath."

Ibid. 12

As some say, Solon was the author of the apophthegm, "Nothing in excess."

Ibid. 16

Chilo advised, "not to speak evil of the dead."<sup>2</sup>

Chilo. 2

Pittacus said that half was more than the whole.<sup>3</sup>

Pittacus. 2

Heraclitus says that Pittacus, when he had got Alcaeus into his power, released him, saying, "Forgiveness is better than revenge."<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See Pope, page 207, and Plutarch, page 1119.

<sup>2</sup> 'Tis said that Attic Solon wrote at Delphi: "Gnothi seauton," which in our tongue is "Know thyself." Many think this to be by Chilon the Laconian. — AUSONIUS DECIMUS MAGNUS [A. D. 310-394]: The Masque of the Seven Sages, Poem 3, Chorus

<sup>3</sup> De mortuis nil nisi bonum (Of the dead be nothing said but what is good).

* Forgiveness is better than punishment; for the one is proof of a gentle, the other of a savage nature. — Quoted by EPICTETUS, Fragments 62

One of his sayings was, "Even the gods cannot strive against necessity."<sup>1</sup>

Pittacus. 4

Another was, "Watch your opportunity."<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. 7

Bias used to say that men ought to calculate life both as if they were fated to live a long and a short time, and that they ought to love one another as if at a future time they would come to hate one another; for that most men were bad.

Bias. 5

Ignorance plays the chief part among men, and the multitude of words.<sup>3</sup>

Cleobulus. 4

The saying, "Practice is everything," is Periander's.<sup>4</sup>

Periander. 6

Anarcharsis, on learning that the sides of a ship were four fingers thick, said that "the passengers were just that distance from death."<sup>5</sup>

Anarcharsis. 5

It was a common saying of Myson that men ought not to investigate things from words, but words from things; for that things are not made for the sake of words, but words for things.

Myson. 3

Epimenides was sent by his father into the field to look for a sheep, turned out of the road at mid-day and lay down in a certain cave and fell asleep, and slept there fifty-seven years; and after that, when awake, he went on looking for the sheep, thinking that he had been taking a short nap.<sup>6</sup>

Anaximander used to assert that the primary cause of all things was the Infinite, — not defining exactly whether he meant air or water or anything else.

Anaximander. 2

Anaxagoras said to a man who was grieving because he was dying in a foreign land, "The descent to Hades is the same from every place."

Anaxagoras. 6

Aristophanes turns Socrates into ridicule in his comedies, as making the worse appear the better reason.<sup>1</sup>

Socrates. 5

Often when he was looking on at auctions he would say, "How many things there are which I do not need!"<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. 10

Socrates said, "Those who want fewest things are nearest to the gods."

Ibid. 11

He said that there was one only good, namely, knowledge; and one only evil, namely, ignorance.

Ibid. 14

He declared that he knew nothing, except the fact of his ignorance.

Ibid. 16

Being asked whether it was better to marry or not, he replied, "Whichever you do, you will repent it."

Ibid.

Aristippus being asked what were the most necessary things for well-born boys to learn, said, "Those things which they will put in practice when they become men."

Aristippus. 4

Like sending owls to Athens, as the proverb goes.<sup>3</sup>

Plato. 32

<sup>2</sup> Socrates once, it is said, was persuaded to go to a fair:

In his one poor cloak, in his wonted way,
he stood musing there,
Stood long till a friend inquired what his thoughts might be about —

"How many things there are here that I could do better without."

Plato affirmed that the soul was immortal and clothed in many bodies successively.<sup>1</sup>

Plato. 40

Time is the image of eternity.

Ibid. 41

There is a written and an unwritten law. The one by which we regulate our constitutions in our cities is the written law; that which arises from custom is the unwritten law.

Ibid. 51

Plato was continually saying to Xenocrates, "Sacrifice to the Graces."<sup>2</sup>

Xenocrates. 3

Arcesilaus had a peculiar habit while conversing of using the expression, "My opinion is," and "So and so will not agree to this."

Arcesilaus. 12

Of a rich man who was niggardly he said, "That man does not own his estate, but his estate owns him."

Bion. 3

Very late in life, when he was studying geometry, some one said to Lacydes, "Is it then a time for you to be learning now?" "If it is not," he replied, "when will it be?"

Lacydes. 5

Aristotle was once asked what those who tell lies gain by it. Said he, "That when they speak truth they are not believed."

Aristotle. 11

The question was put to him, what hope is; and his answer was, "The dream of a waking man."

Ibid.

He used to say that personal beauty was a better introduction than any letter; but others say that it was Diogenes who gave this description of it, while Aristotle called beauty "the gift of God"; that Socrates called it "a short-lived tyranny"; Theophrastus, "a silent deceit"; Theocritus, "an ivory mischief."

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> See Plato, page 1089.

On one occasion Aristotle was asked how much educated men were superior to those uneducated: "As much," said he, "as the living are to the dead."<sup>1</sup>

Aristotle. 11

It was a saying of his that education was an ornament in prosperity and a refuge in adversity.

Ibid.

He was once asked what a friend is, and his answer was, "One soul abiding in two bodies."<sup>2</sup>

Ibid.

Asked what he gained from philosophy, he answered, "To do without being commanded what others do from fear of the laws."

Ibid.

The question was once put to him, how we ought to behave to our friends; and the answer he gave was, "As we should wish our friends to behave to us."

Ibid.

He used to define justice as "a virtue of the soul distributing that which each person deserved."

Ibid.

Another of his sayings was, that education was the best viaticum of old age.

Ibid.

It was a favourite expression of Theophrastus that time was the most valuable thing that a man could spend.<sup>3</sup>

Theophrastus. 10

Antisthenes used to say that envious people were devoured by their own disposition, just as iron is by rust.

Antisthenes. 4

When he was praised by some wicked men, he said, "I am sadly afraid that I must have done some wicked thing."<sup>4</sup>

Antisthenes. 4

Diogenes would frequently praise those who were about to marry, and yet did not marry.

Diogenes. 4

"Bury me on my face," said Diogenes; and when he was asked why, he replied, "Because in a little while everything will be turned upside down."

Ibid. 6

All things are in common among friends.

Ibid.

Plato having defined man to be a two-legged animal without feathers, Diogenes plucked a cock and brought it into the Academy, and said, "This is Plato's man." On which account this addition was made to the definition, — "With broad flat nails."

Ibid.

A man once asked Diogenes what was the proper time for supper, and he made answer, "If you are a rich man, whenever you please; and if you are a poor man, whenever you can."<sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

Diogenes lighted a candle in the daytime, and went round saying, "I am looking for a man."<sup>2</sup>

Ibid.

When asked what he would take to let a man give him a blow on the head, he said, "A helmet."

Ibid.

Once he saw a youth blushing, and addressed him, "Courage, my boy! that is the complexion of virtue."<sup>3</sup>

Ibid.

When asked what wine he liked to drink, he replied, "That which belongs to another."

Ibid.

Asked from what country he came, he replied, "I am a citizen of the world."<sup>1</sup>

Diogenes. 6

When a man reproached him for going into unclean places, he said, "The sun too penetrates into privies, but is not polluted by them."<sup>2</sup>

Ibid.

Diogenes said once to a person who was showing him a dial, "It is a very useful thing to save a man from being too late for supper."

Menedemus. 3

When Zeno was asked what a friend was, he replied, "Another I."<sup>3</sup>

Zeno. 19

They say that the first inclination which an animal has is to protect itself.

Ibid. 52

He calls drunkenness an expression identical with ruin.<sup>4</sup>

Pythagoras. 6

Among what he called his precepts were such as these: Do not stir the fire with a sword. Do not sit down on a bushel. Do not devour thy heart.<sup>5</sup>

Ibid. 17

In the time of Pythagoras that proverbial phrase "Ipse dixit"<sup>6</sup> was introduced into ordinary life.

Ibid. 25

It takes a wise man to discover a wise man.

Xcnophanes. 3

Protagoras asserted that there were two sides to every question, exactly opposite to each other.

Protagoras. 3

Nothing can be produced out of nothing.<sup>7</sup>

Diogenes of Apollonia. 2

The chief good is the suspension of the judgment, which tranquillity of mind follows like its shadow.

Come, fill the Cup, and in the fire of Spring

Your Winter-garment of Repentance
fling:

The Bird of Time has but a little way
To flutter — and the Bird is on the Wing.

The Leaves of Life keep falling one by

The strip of Herbage strown That just divides the desert from the sown.

Ibid. Stanza 11

A Book of Verses underneath the Bough,

A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread — and Thou

Beside me singing in the Wilderness —

Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!

Ibid. Stanza 12

Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go,
Nor heed the rumble of a distant Drum!

Ibid. Stanza 13

The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon

Turns Ashes — or it prospers; and anon,

Like Snow upon the Desert's dusty
Face,
Lighting a little hour or two — is gone.

Ibid. Stanza 16

This batter'd Caravanserai Whose Portals are alternate Night and

That every Hyacinth the Garden wears

Dropt in her Lap from some once lovely Head.

Rubáiyát. Stanza 19

Ah, my Belovèd, fill the Cup that clears
TO-DAY of past Regrets and future
Fears:

To-morrow! — Why, To-morrow I may be

Myself with Yesterday's Sev'n thousand Years.

Ibid. Stanza 21

Myself when young did eagerly frequent

Doctor and Saint, and heard great argument

About it and about: but evermore Came out by the same door where in I went.

There was the Door to which I found no
Key;

There was the Veil through which I might not see.

Ibid. Stanza 32

"While you live,
Drink! — for, once dead, you never

Ibid. Stanza 35

To-morrow's tangle to the winds resign.

Ibid. Stanza 41

So when that Angel of the darker Drink
At last shall find you by the river-brink,

And, offering his Cup, invite your Soul

Forth to your Lips to quaff — you shall not shrink.

Ibid. Stanza 43

And fear not lest Existence closing your Account, and mine, should know the like no more;

Strange, is it not? that of the myriads who

Before us pass'd the door of Darkness
through,

Not one returns to tell us of the Road,
Which to discover we must travel too.

Ibid. Stanza 64

I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:

And by and by my Soul return'd to
me,

And answer'd "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell."

And this I know: whether the one True
Light

Kindle to Love, or Wrath-consume me quite,

One Flash of It within the Tavern caught

Better than in the Temple lost outright.

Ibid. Stanza 77

"And He that with his hand the Vessel made

Will surely not in after Wrath destroy."

Ibid. Stanza 85

"Some there are who tell

Of one who threatens he will toss to Hell

The luckless Pots he marr'd in making — Pish!

He's a Good Fellow, and 'twill all be well."

Ibid. Stanza 88

Fill me with the old familiar Juice.

Ibid. Stanza 89

Indeed the Idols I have loved so long Have done my credit in this World much wrong:

Have drown'd my Glory in a shallow Cup,

And sold my Reputation for a Song.

Ibid. Stanza 93

I wonder often what the Vintners buy One half so precious as the stuff they sell.

Ibid. Stanza 95

Yet Ah, that Spring should vanish with the Rose!

That Youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!

Ibid. Stanza 96

Ah Love! could you and I with Him
conspire

To grasp this Sorry Scheme of Things entire,
Would not we shatter it to bits —
and then Re-mould it nearer to the Heart's Desire!

Rubdyát. Stanza 99

Yon rising Moon that looks for us
again —

How oft hereafter will she wax and wane;

How oft hereafter rising look for us Through this same Garden — and for one in vain!

[1452-1519]

From his Note-Books, translated by EDWARD MCCURDY

In rivers, the water that you touch is the last of what has passed and the first of that which comes: so with time present.

Whoever in discussion adduces authority uses not intellect but memory.

No counsel is more trustworthy than that which is given upon ships that are in peril.

Intellectual passion drives out sensuality.

Let the street be as wide as the height of the houses.

No member needs so great a number of muscles as the tongue; this exceeds all the rest in the number of its movements.

ST. IGNATIUS LOYOLA<sup>5</sup>

[1491-1556]

Teach us, good Lord, to serve Thee as Thou deservest:

To give and not to count the cost;
To fight and not to heed the wounds;
To toil and not to seek for rest;
To labour and not ask for any reward

<sup>1</sup> On the 16th of April, 1521, Luther entered the imperial city [of Worms]. . . . On his approach . . . the Elector's chancellor entreated him, in the name of his master, not to enter a town where his death was decided. The answer which Luther returned was simply this. — BARON VON BUNSEN [1791-1860]: Life of Luther

I will go, though as many devils aim at me as there are tiles on the roofs of the houses. — LEOPOLD VON RANKE [1795-1886]: History of the Reformation, Vol. I, P. 533, translated by SARAH TAYLOR AUSTIN [1793-1867].

Luther it was who, when advised not to trust himself in Worms, declared, "Although there be as many devils in Worms as there are tiles on the house-tops, I will go." — ALEXANDER SMITH: Dreamthorp, A Shelf in My Bookcase

<sup>2</sup> [Luther] it was who, when brought to bay in the splendid assemblage, said, "It is neither safe nor prudent to do aught against conscience. Here stand I — I cannot do otherwise. God help me. Amen." — Ibid.

The letter itself is printed entire in Histoire Civile, Physique et Morale de Paris by JACQUES ANTOINE DULAURE [1755-1835]: "Pour vous avertir comment se porte le ressort de mon infortune, de toutes choses ne m'est demeuré que l'honneur et la vie, — qui est sauvé."

<sup>6</sup> AESCHINES [389-314 B. C.] ascribes to Demosthenes the expression, "The sinews of affairs are cut" (Adv. Ctesiphon, Chap. 53). DIOGENES LAERTIUS, in his Life of Bion, Book IV, Chap. 7, Sect. 3, represents Bion as saying, "Riches were the sinews of business," or, as the phrase may mean, "of the state." Referring perhaps to this maxim of the philosopher Bion, PLUTARCH says in his Life of Cleomenes, "He that first said that money was the sinews of affairs, seems especially in that saying to refer to war" (Modern Library Giant ed., p. 986). Accordingly we find money called expressly "the sinews of war" in LIBANIUS, Oration 46, and by the scholiast on PINDAR, Olymp., I, 4, and in CICERO, Philipp., V, 2, "nervos belli, infinitam pecuniam."

dren to Their Fathers*

The public weal requires that men should betray, and lie, and massacre.

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 1, Of Profit and Honesty

I will follow the right side even to the fire, but excluding the fire if I can.

Ibid.

Does not he to whom you betray another, to whom you were as welcome as to himself, know that you will at another time do as much for him?

It happens as with cages: the birds without despair to get in, and those within despair of getting out.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 5, Upon Some Verses of Virgil

And to bring in a new word by the head and shoulders, they leave out the old one.

Ibid.

All the world knows me in my book, and my book in me.

Ibid.

'Tis so much to be a king, that he only is so by being so. The strange lustre that surrounds him conceals and shrouds him from us; our sight is there broken and dissipated, being stopped and filled by the prevailing light.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 7, Of the Inconvenience of Greatness

We are born to inquire after truth; it belongs to a greater power to possess it. It is not, as Democritus said, hid in the bottom of the deeps, but rather elevated to an infinite height in the divine knowledge.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 8, Of the Art of Conversation

I moreover affirm that our wisdom itself, and wisest consultations, for the most part commit themselves to the conduct of chance.<sup>5</sup>

Works. Book III, Chap. 13, Of Experience

There is more ado to interpret interpretations than to interpret the things, and more books upon books than upon all other subjects; we do nothing but comment upon one another.

Ibid.

What can we do with those people who will not believe anything unless it is in print? . . . I would as soon quote one of my friends as I would Aulus Gellius or Macrobius.

[1544-1590]

From Divine Weekes and Workes, translated [1606] by J. SYLVESTER [1563-1618]

The world's a stage,<sup>2</sup> where God's omnipotence.

His justice, knowledge, love, and providence

Do act the parts.

First Week. First Day

And reads, though running,<sup>3</sup> all these needful motions.

Not unlike the bear which bringeth forth

In the end of thirty dayes a shapeless birth;

But after licking, it in shape she drawes,
And by degrees she fashions out the pawes,

The head, and neck, and finally doth bring

To a perfect beast that first deformed thing.<sup>4</sup>

FRANÇOIS, DUC DE LA ROCHEFOUCAULD

[1613-1680]

Reflections, or Sentences and Moral Maxims

Our virtues are most frequently but vices disguised.<sup>1</sup>

We have all sufficient strength to endure the misfortunes of others.

Maxim 19

Philosophy triumphs easily over past evils and future evils; but present evils triumph over it.<sup>2</sup>

Maxim 22

We need greater virtues to sustain good than evil fortune.

Maxim 25

Neither the sun nor death can be looked at with a steady eye.

Maxim 26

If we were without faults, we should not take so much pleasure in remarking them in others.

Maxim 31

Interest speaks all sorts of tongues, and plays all sorts of parts, even that of disinterestedness.

Maxim 39

We are never so happy nor so unhappy as we imagine.

Maxim 49

<sup>1</sup> This epigraph, which is the key to the system of La Rochefoucauld, is found in another form as No. 179 of the Maxims of the first edition, 1665; it is omitted from the second and third, and reappears for the first time in the fourth edition at the head of the Reflections. — AIME MARTIN

<sup>2</sup> See Goldsmith, page 253.

There are few people who would not be ashamed of being loved when they love no longer.

Maxim 71

True love is like ghosts, which everybody talks about and few have seen.

Maxim 76

The love of justice is simply, in the majority of men, the fear of suffering injustice.

Maxim 78

Silence is the best resolve for him who distrusts himself.

Maxim 79

Friendship is only a reciprocal conciliation of interests, and an exchange of good offices; it is a species of commerce out of which self-love always expects to gain something.

Maxim 83

Everyone complains of his memory, and no one complains of his judgment.

Maxim 89

A man who is ungrateful is often less to blame than his benefactor.

Maxim 96

The understanding is always the dupe of the heart.

Maxim 102

Nothing is given so profusely as advice.

Maxim 110

The true way to be deceived is to think oneself more knowing than others.

Maxim 127

Usually we praise only to be praised.

Maxim 146

Our repentance is not so much regret for the ill we have done as fear of the ill that may happen to us in consequence.

Maxim 180

Most people judge men only by success or by fortune.

Maxim 212

Hypocrisy is a homage vice pays to virtue.

Maxim 218

Too great haste to repay an obligation is a kind of ingratitude.

Maxim 226

There is great ability in knowing how to conceal one's ability.

Maxim 245

The pleasure of love is in loving. We are happier in the passion we feel than in that we inspire.<sup>1</sup>

Maxim 259

We always like those who admire us; we do not always like those whom we admire.

Maxim 294

The gratitude of most men is but a secret desire of receiving greater benefits.<sup>2</sup>

Maxim 298

Lovers are never tired of each other, though they always speak of themselves.

Maxim 312

We pardon in the degree that we love.

Maxim 330

We hardly find any persons of good sense save those who agree with us.<sup>3</sup>

Maxim 347

The greatest fault of a penetrating wit is to go beyond the mark.

Maxim 377

We may give advice, but we cannot inspire the conduct.

Maxim 378

The veracity which increases with old age is not far from folly.

Maxim 416

Nothing prevents our being natural so much as the desire to appear so.

Maxim 431

In their first passion women love their lovers, in all the others they love love.<sup>4</sup>

Maxim 471

Quarrels would not last long if the fault was only on one side.

To Madame de Longueville

HANS JAKOB CHRISTOFFEL
VON GRIMMELSHAUSEN
[Circa 1620-1676]

For gluttony and drunkenness, hunger and thirst, wenching and dicing and playing, riot and roaring, murdering and being murdered, slaying and being slain, torturing and being tortured, hunting and being hunted, harrying and being harried, robbing and being robbed, frightening and being frightened, causing trouble and suffering trouble, beating and being beaten: in a word, hurting and harming, and in turn being hurt and harmed — this was their whole life. And in this career they let nothing hinder them: neither winter nor summer, snow nor ice, heat nor cold, rain nor wind, hill nor dale, wet nor dry; ditches, mountain-passes, ramparts and walls, fire and water, were all the same to them. Father nor mother, sister nor brother, no, nor the danger to their own bodies, souls, and consciences, nor even loss of life and of heaven itself, or aught else that can be named, will ever stand in their way, for ever they toil and moil at their own strange work, till at last, little by little, in battles, sieges, attacks, campaigns,

Ethics. Part III, Prop. II, Note

Pride is therefore pleasure arising from a man's thinking too highly of himself.

Ibid. Prop. XXVI, Note

It may easily come to pass that a vain man may become proud and imagine himself pleasing to all when he is in reality a universal nuisance.

Ibid. Prop. XXX, Note

Sadness diminishes or hinders a man's power of action.

Ibid. Prop. XXXVII, Proof

Self-complacency is pleasure accompanied by the idea of oneself as cause.

Ibid. Prop. LI, Note

It therefore comes to pass that every one is fond of relating his own exploits and displaying the strength both of his body and his mind, and that men are on this account a nuisance one to the other.

Ibid. Prop. LIV, Note

I refer those actions which work out the good of the agent to courage, and those which work out the good of others to nobility. Therefore temperance, sobriety, and presence of mind in danger, etc., are species of courage; but modesty, clemency, etc., are species of nobility.

Ibid. Prop. LIX, Note

Fear cannot be without hope nor hope without fear.

Ibid. Definition XIII, Explanation

So long as a man imagines that he cannot do this or that, so long is he determined not to do it: and consequently, so long it is impossible to him that he should do it.

Avarice, ambition, lust, etc., are nothing but species of madness, although not enumerated among diseases.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. Prop. XLIV, Note

It is the part of a wise man to feed himself with moderate pleasant food and drink, and to take pleasure with perfumes, with the beauty of growing plants, dress, music, sports, and theatres, and other places of this kind which man may use without any hurt to his fellows.

Ibid. Prop. XLV, Note 2

It is a comfort to the unhappy to have companions in misery.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Prop. LVII, Note

He whose honour depends on the opinion of the mob must day by day strive with the greatest anxiety, act and scheme in order to retain his reputation. For the mob is varied and inconstant, and therefore if a reputation is not carefully preserved it dies quickly.

None are more taken in by flattery than the proud, who wish to be the first and are not.

Ibid. XXI

Those are most desirous of honour and glory who cry out the loudest of its abuse and the vanity of the world.

Ibid. Part V, Prop. X, Note

We feel and know that we are eternal.

Ibid. Prop. XXIII, Note

All excellent things are as difficult as they are rare.

Ibid. Prop. XLII, Note

The things which . . . are esteemed as the greatest good of all, . . . can be reduced to these three headings: to wit, Riches, Fame, and Pleasure. With these three the mind is so engrossed that it cannot scarcely think of any other good.

Tractatus de Intellectus

Emendatione. I, 3

Fame has also this great drawback, that if we pursue it we must direct our lives in such a way as to please the fancy of men, avoiding what they dislike and seeking what is pleasing to them.

<sup>2</sup> I do not agree with a word that you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it. — Variation given by WILL DURANT: The Story of Philosophy, P. 271

This quotation is not found verbatim in Voltaire's works. It seems to originate in S. G. TALLENTYRE (E. Beatrice Hall): The Friends of Voltaire [1907], where she employed it as a paraphrase of Voltaire's words in the Essay on Tolerance: "Think for yourselves and let others enjoy the privilege to do so too." [1712-1778]

Man is born free, and everywhere he is in irons.

The Social Contract <sup>1</sup> [1762].

Book I, Chap. 1

The strongest is never strong enough to be always the master, unless he transforms strength into right, and obedience into duty.

Ibid. Chap. 3

The right of conquest has no foundation other than the right of the strongest.

Ibid. Chap. 4

As soon as public service ceases to be the chief business of the citizens, and they would rather serve with their money than with their persons, the State is not far from its fall.

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 15

Good laws lead to the making of better ones; bad ones bring about worse. As soon as any man says of the affairs of the State, "What does it matter to me?" the State may be given up for lost.

The Social Contract [1762].

Book III, Chap. 15

Never exceed your rights, and they will soon become unlimited.

A Discourse on Political Economy

Money is the seed of money, and the first guinea is sometimes more difficult to acquire than the second million.

Ibid.

God makes all things good; man meddles with them and they become evil.

Émile, or Education <sup>1</sup> [1762].

Book I

Medicine is all the fashion in these days, and very naturally. It is the amusement of the idle and unemployed, who do not know what to do with their time in taking care of themselves. If by ill-luck they had happened to be born immortal, they would have been the most miserable of men; a life they could not lose would be of no value to them. Such men must have doctors to threaten and flatter them, to give them the only pleasure they can enjoy, the pleasure of not being dead.

Ibid.

Hygiene is the only useful part of medicine, and hygiene is rather a virtue than a science. Temperance and industry are man's true remedies; work sharpens his appetite and temperance teaches him to control it.

Ibid.

What wisdom can you find that is greater than kindness?

Ibid. Book II

The happiest is he who suffers least; the most miserable is he who enjoys least. Ever more sorrow than joy,—this is the lot of all of us.

I shall always maintain that whoso says in his heart, "There is no God," while he takes the name of God upon his lips, is either a liar or a madman.

Émile, or Education [1762].
Book I

People who know little are usually great talkers, while men who know much say little.

Ibid.

A man says what he knows, a woman says what will please.

Ibid. Book V

Where is the man who owes nothing to the land in which he lives? Whatever that land may be, he owes to it the most precious thing possessed by man, the morality of his actions and the love of virtue.

Ibid.

I have entered on a performance which is without precedent, and will have no imitator. I propose to show my fellow-mortals a man in all the integrity of nature; and this man shall be myself.

Hatred, as well as love, renders its votaries credulous.

Ibid. Book V

My third child was carried to the foundling hospital as well as the two former, and the next two were disposed of in the same manner, for I have had five children in all.

Ibid. Book VIII

The thirst after happiness is never extinguished in the heart of man.

Ibid. Book IX

To appear the friend of a man, when in reality we are no longer so, is to reserve to ourselves the means of doing him an injury by surprising honest men into an error.

[1741-1801]

From the Aphorisms on Man [London, 1788] much admired and privately annotated by WILLIAM BLAKE. See the one-volume edition of BLAKE'S Poetry and Prose, edited by GEOFFREY KEYNES.

If you mean to know yourself, interline such of these aphorisms as affect you agreeably in reading, and set a mark to such as left a sense of uneasiness with you; and then shew your copy to whom you please.

Who has many wishes has generally but little will. Who has energy of will has few diverging wishes. Whose will is bent with energy on one, must renounce the wishes for many things.

Say not you know another entirely, till you have divided an inheritance with him.

He who, when called upon to speak a disagreeable truth, tells it boldly and has done is both bolder and milder than he who nibbles in a low voice and never ceases nibbling.<sup>1</sup>

The public seldom forgive twice.

Venerate four characters: the sanguine, who has checked volatility and the rage for pleasure; the choleric who has subdued passion and pride; the phlegmatic emerged from indolence; and the melancholy who has dismissed avarice, suspicion and asperity.

Trust not him with your secrets, who, when left alone in your room, turns over your papers.

<sup>1</sup> Blake's marginal comment on this was "Damn such!"

GABRIEL ROMANOVITCH
DERZHAVIN
[1743-1816]

O Thou eternal One, whose presence
bright

<sup>2</sup> Translated by JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE [1818-1894]

The fate of the architect is the strangest of all. How often he expends his whole soul, his whole heart and passion, to produce buildings into which he himself may never enter.

Elective Affinities. Book II, Chap. 3

Let us live in as small a circle as we will, we are either debtors or creditors before we have had time to look round.

Ibid. Chap. 4

Mediocrity has no greater consolation than in the thought that genius is not immortal.

Ibid. Chap. 5

A teacher who can arouse a feeling for one single good action, for one single good poem, accomplishes more than he who fills our memory with rows on rows of natural objects, classified with name and form.

Ibid. Chap. 7

No one feels himself easy in a garden which does not look like the open country.

Ibid. Chap. 8

We lay aside letters never to read them again, and at last we destroy them out of discretion, and so disappears the most beautiful, the most immediate breath of life, irrecoverably for ourselves and for others.

Know'st thou the land where the lemon-trees bloom,

Where the gold orange glows in the deep
thicket's gloom,
Where a wind ever soft from the blue
heaven blows,
And the groves are of laurel and myrtle and rose? <sup>1</sup>

Wilhelm Meister's Apprenticeship.
Book III, Chap. 1

One ought, every day at least, to hear a little song, read a good poem, see a fine picture, and, if it were possible, to speak a few reasonable words.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Book V, Chap. 1

To know of some one here and there whom we accord with, who is living on with us, even in silence, — this makes our earthly ball a peopled garden.

Ibid. Book VII, Chap. 5

Art is long, life short; <sup>3</sup> judgment difficult, opportunity transient.

Ibid. Chap. 9

The sagacious reader who is capable of reading between these lines what does not stand written in them, but is nevertheless implied, will be able to form some conception.

O Liberty! Liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name!

Quoted by MACAULAY in his Essay on Mirabeau

<sup>1</sup> Lose this day loitering, 'twill be the same story

To-morrow, and the next more dilatory;
Each indecision brings its own delays,
And days are lost lamenting o'er lost days.
Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute!
Boldness has genius, power, and magic in it.

Only engage, and then the mind grows

ALPHONSE M. L. LAMARTINE
[1790-1869]

What is our life but a succession of preludes to that unknown song whose first solemn note is sounded by Death?

Love is the enchanted dawn of every heart, but what mortal is there over whose first joys and happiness does not break some storm, dispelling with its icy breath his fanciful illusions, and shattering his altar? What soul, thus cruelly wounded, does not at times try to dream away the recollection of such storms in the solitude of country life? And yet, man, it seems, is not able to bear the languid rest on Nature's bosom, and when the trumpet sounds the signal of danger, he hastens to join his comrades, no matter what the cause that calls him to arms. He rushes into the thickest of the fight and amid the uproar of the battle regains confidence in himself and his powers.<sup>1</sup>

Ninety-Three. Part I, Book IV, Chap. 7

There is a sacred horror about everything grand. It is easy to admire mediocrity and hills; but whatever is too lofty, a genius as well as a mountain, an assembly as well as a masterpiece, seen too near, is appalling. . . . Hence, there is more dismay than admiration.

And you will come at last to love the whole world with an all-embracing love.

Much on earth is hidden from us, but to make up for that we have been given a precious mystic sense of our living bond with the other world, with the higher heavenly world, and the roots of our thoughts and feelings are not here but in other worlds. An Enemy of the People. Act I

The most crying need in the humbler ranks of life is that they should be allowed some part in the direction of public affairs. That is what will develop their faculties and intelligence and self-respect.

Ibid. Act II

The public doesn't require any new ideas. The public is best served by the good, old-fashioned ideas it already has.

Ibid.

An editor cannot always act as he would prefer. He is often obliged to bow to the wishes of the public in unimportant matters. Politics are the most important thing in life—for a newspaper.

To crave for happiness in this world is simply to be possessed by a spirit of revolt. What right have we to happiness?

Ghosts. Act I

It is not only what we have inherited from our fathers that exists again in us, but all sorts of old dead ideas and all kinds of old dead beliefs and things of that kind. They are not actually alive in us; but there they are dormant, all the same, and we can never be rid of them. ## COUNT LYOF NIKOLAYE-VITCH TOLSTOI

[1828-1910]

The Frenchman is conceited from supposing himself mentally and physically to be inordinately fascinating both to men and to women. An Englishman is conceited on the ground of being a citizen of the best-constituted state in the world, and also because he as an Englishman always knows what is the correct thing to do, and knows that everything that he, as an Englishman, does do is indisputably the best thing. An Italian is conceited from being excitable and easily forgetting himself and other people. A Russian is conceited precisely because he knows nothing and cares to know nothing, since he does not believe it possible to know anything fully. A conceited German is the worst of them all, and the most hardened of all, and the most repulsive of all; for he imagines that he possesses the truth in a science of his own invention, which is to him absolute truth.

The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard.<sup>1</sup>

The Log, December 24, 1849

All the historical books which contain no lies are extremely tedious.

Ibid.

Lovers who love truly do not write down their happiness.

Ibid. November 30, 1859

The time God allots to each one of us is like a precious tissue which we embroider as we best know how.

Ibid. The Daughter of Clémentine.

Chap. 2

To know is nothing at all; to imagine is everything.

Ibid. Part II, Chap. 2

The domestic hearth. There only is real happiness.

Ibid. Chap. 3

He flattered himself on being a man without any prejudices; and this pretension itself is a very great prejudice.

Ibid. Chap. 4

Those who have given themselves the most concern about the happiness of peoples have made their neighbours very miserable.

Ibid.

Man is so made that he can only find relaxation from one kind of labor by taking up another.

Ibid.

People who have no weaknesses are terrible; there is no way of taking advantage of them.

Ibid.

The whole art of teaching is only the art of awakening the natural curiosity of young minds for the purpose of satisfying it afterwards.

Ibid.

The faculty of doubting is rare among men. A few choice spirits carry the germ of it in them, but these do not develop without training.

Penguin Island. Book VI, Chap. 2

<sup>1</sup> Translated by LAFCADIO HEARN. Modern Library edition.

We have medicines to make women speak; we have none to make them keep silence.

The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife.<sup>1</sup> Act II, Sc. 4

They saw Barnaby before the altar of the Blessed Virgin, head downwards, with his feet in the air, and he was juggling six balls of copper and a dozen knives. In honor of the Holy Mother of God he was performing those feats, which aforetime had won him most renown.

Our Lady's Juggler<sup>2</sup>

The good critic is he who narrates the adventures of his soul among masterpieces.

La Vie Littéraire. Preface

We reproach people for talking about themselves; but it is the subject they treat best.

Ibid. Journal des Goncourt

FRIEDRICH WILHELM NIETZSCHE [1844-1900]

Our destiny exercises its influence over us even when, as yet, we have not learned its nature: it is our future that lays down the law of our to-day.

Human, All Too Human.<sup>3</sup> 7

Much more happiness is to be found in the world than gloomy eyes discover.

Ibid. 49

One must have a good memory to be able to keep the promises one makes.

Ibid. 59

One will rarely err if extreme actions be ascribed to vanity, ordinary actions to habit, and mean actions to fear.

Ibid. 74

How poor the human mind would be without vanity! It resembles a well stocked and ever renewed ware-emporium that attracts buyers of every class: they can find almost everything, have almost everything, provided they bring with them the right kind of money — admiration.

Human, All Too Human. 74

Every man who has declared that some other man is an ass or a scoundrel, gets angry when the other man conclusively shows that the assertion was erroneous.

Ibid. 90

Every tradition grows ever more venerable — the more remote is its origin, the more confused that origin is. The reverence due to it increases from generation to generation. The tradition finally becomes holy and inspires awe.

Ibid. 96

I teach you the Superman. Man is something that is to be surpassed.

Thus Spake Zarathustra.<sup>1</sup> Prologue, Chap. 3

Man is a rope stretched between the animal and the Superman — a rope over an abyss.

Ibid. Chap. 4

I want to teach men the sense of their existence, which is the Superman, the lightning out of the dark cloud man.

Ibid. Chap. 7

No small art is it to sleep: it is necessary for that purpose to keep awake all day.

Ibid. Part I, Chap. 2

This is hardest of all: to close the open hand out of love, and keep modest as a giver.

Ibid. Part II, Chap. 23

Beggars, however, one should entirely do away with! Verily, it annoyeth one to give unto them, and it annoyeth one not to give unto them.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Chap. 25

The sting of conscience teacheth one to sting.

Ibid.

<sup>2</sup> There is surely a Physiognomy, which those experienced and Master Mendicants observe, whereby they instantly discover a merciful aspect, and will single out a face wherein they spy the signatures and marks of Mercy. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Religio Medici (Everyman ed.), page 66

<sup>3</sup> Translated by ALEXANDER HARVEY.

Distrust all in whom the impulse to punish is powerful.

Thus Spake Zarathustra. Chap. 29

Ah, there are so many things betwixt heaven and earth of which only the poets have dreamed!

Ibid. Chap. 39

Believe me, friend Hollaballoo! The greatest events are not our noisiest, but our stillest hours.

Ibid. Chap. 40

Thoughts that come with doves' footsteps guide the world.

Ibid. Chap. 44

Winter, a bad guest, sitteth with me at home; blue are my hands with his friendly handshaking.

Ibid. Part III, Chap. 50

Better know nothing than half-know many things.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. Part IV, Chap. 64

We ought to learn from the kine one thing: ruminating.

Ibid. Chap. 68

Then learnedst thou how much harder it is to give properly than to take properly, and that bestowing well is an art — the last, subtlest master-art of kindness.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid.

If ye would go up high, then use your own legs! Do not get yourselves carried aloft; do not seat yourselves on other people's backs and heads!

Ibid. Chap. 73, 10

From people who merely pray we must become people who bless.

Notes on Thus Spake Zarathustra. 82

It is certainly not the least charm of a theory that it is refutable.

In Taking sould Discretion be.

WILLIAM DUNBAR: Discretion in Taking

<sup>3</sup> Translated by HELEN ZIMMERN.

No one is such a liar as the indignant man.

Beyond Good and Evil. II, 26

Books for the general reader are always ill-smelling books, the odour of paltry people clings to them.

Ibid. 29

It is not the strength but the duration of great sentiments that makes great men.

Ibid. IV, 72

Woman learns how to hate in proportion as she forgets how to charm.

Ibid. 84

Our vanity is most difficult to wound just when our pride has been wounded.

Ibid. IV, 111

Where there is neither love nor hatred in the game, woman's play is mediocre.

Ibid. 115

In revenge and in love woman is more barbarous than man.

Ibid. 139

The thought of suicide is a great consolation: <sup>1</sup> by means of it one gets successfully through many a bad night.

Ibid. 157

There are few pains so grievous as to have seen, divined, or experienced how an exceptional man has missed his way and deteriorated.

Ibid. V, 203

Blessed are the forgetful: for they get the better even of their blunders.

Ibid. VII, 217

Is not life a hundred times too short for us to bore ourselves?

Ibid. 227

One does not know — cannot know — the best that is in one.

Ibid. VIII, 249

The melancholia of everything completed!

Ibid. IX, 277

The "masters" have been done away with; the morality of the vulgar man has triumphed.

Genealogy of Morals.<sup>2</sup> First Essay, Aphorism 9

<sup>1</sup> We are in the power of no calamity while death is in our own. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Religio Medici (Everyman ed.), page 50

The broad effects which can be obtained by punishment in man and beast, are the increase of fear, the sharpening of the sense of cunning, the mastery of the desires; so it is that punishment tames man, but does not make him "better."

Genealogy of Morals. Second Essay, Aphorism 15

A married philosopher belongs to comedy.

Ibid. Third Essay, Aphorism 7

Every tiny step forward in the world was formerly made at the cost of mental and physical torture.

Ibid. Aphorism 9

The sick are the greatest danger for the healthy; it is not from the strongest that harm comes to the strong, but from the weakest.

Ibid. Aphorism 14

A strong and well-constituted man digests his experiences (deeds and misdeeds all included) just as he digests his meats, even when he has some tough morsels to swallow.

Ibid. Aphorism 16

Nothing ever succeeds which exuberant spirits have not helped to produce.

The Twilight of the Idols.<sup>1</sup>

Preface

Contentment preserves one even from catching cold. Has a woman who knew that she was well dressed ever caught cold? — No, not even when she had scarcely a rag to her back.

Ibid. Maxims and Missiles, 25

Without music life would be a mistake.

Ibid. 33

He who laughs best to-day, will also laugh last.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. 43

That which needs to be proved cannot be worth much.

<sup>2</sup> Better the last smile than the first laughter. — JOHN RAY: Complete Collection of English Proverbs [1742]. This is a variant of the familiar saying, "He laughs best who laughs last." known in all languages.

History is nothing more than the belief in the senses, the belief in falsehood.<sup>1</sup>

The Twilight of the Idols. "Reason" in Philosophy, 1

Unconscious gratitude for a good digestion (sometimes called "brotherly love").

Ibid. Morality as the Enemy of Nature, 3

Two great European narcotics, alcohol and Christianity.

Ibid. Things the Germans Lack, 2

Dancing in all its forms cannot be excluded from the curriculum of all noble education: dancing with the feet, with ideas, with words, and, need I add that one must also be able to dance with the pen?

Ibid. 7

In the architectural structure, man's pride, man's triumph over gravitation, man's will to power, assume a visible form. Architecture is a sort of oratory of power by means of forms.

Ibid. Skirmishes in a War with the Age, 11

If a man have a strong faith he can indulge in the luxury of scepticism.

Ibid. 12

The sick man is a parasite of society. In certain cases it is indecent to go on living. To continue to vegetate in a state of cowardly dependence upon doctors and special treatments, once the meaning of life, the right to life, has been lost, ought to be regarded with the greatest contempt by society.

Ibid. 36

Liberal institutions straightway cease from being liberal the moment they are soundly established: once this is attained no more grievous and more thorough enemies of freedom exist than liberal institutions.

Ibid. 38

It is my ambition to say in ten sentences what everyone else says in a whole book, — what everyone else does not say in a whole book.

Ibid. 51

<sup>1</sup> See Matthew Arnold, page 548.

Love is the state in which man sees things most widely different from what they are. The force of illusion reaches its zenith here, as likewise the sweetening and transfiguring power. When a man is in love he endures more than at other times; he submits to everything.

The Antichrist.<sup>1</sup> Aphorism 23

Our statesmen — a body of men who are otherwise so unembarrassed, and such thorough anti-Christians in deed — still declare themselves Christians and still flock to communion.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. Aphorism 39

God created woman. And boredom did indeed cease from that moment — but many other things ceased as well! Woman was God's second mistake.

Ibid. Aphorism 48

Life always gets harder toward the summit — the cold increases, responsibility increases.

Ibid. Aphorism 57

I call Christianity the one great curse, the one enormous and innermost perversion, the one great instinct of revenge, for which no means are too venomous, too underhand, too underground and too petty, — I call it the one immortal blemish of mankind.

Ibid. Aphorism 62

My doctrine is: Live that thou mayest desire to live again, — that is thy duty, — for in any case thou wilt live again!

Eternal Recurrence.<sup>3</sup> 27

Even a thought, even a possibility, can shatter us and transform us.

Ibid. 30

Let us stamp the impress of eternity upon our lives!

Ibid. 35

Nothing on earth consumes a man more quickly than the passion of resentment.

Ecce Homo<sup>4</sup>

Where one despises, one cannot wage war. Where one commands, where one sees something beneath one, one ought not to wage war.

Ecce Homo

I believe only in French culture, and regard everything else in Europe which calls itself "culture" as a misunderstanding. I do not even take the German kind into consideration.

Ibid.

Wherever Germany extends her sway, she ruins culture.

Ibid.

As an artist, a man has no home in Europe save in Paris.

Ibid.

Simply by being compelled to keep constantly on his guard, a man may grow so weak as to be unable any longer to defend himself.

Ibid.

Pathetic attitudes are not in keeping with greatness.

Ibid.

My time has not yet come either; some are born posthumously.

Ibid.

No one can draw more out of things, books included, than he already knows. A man has no ears for that to which experience has given him no access.

Ibid.

I am not successful at being pompous, the most I can do is to appear embarrassed.

Ibid.

The Germans are like women, you can scarcely ever fathom their depths — they haven't any.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

After coming in contact with a religious man, I always feel that I must wash my hands.

Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> Man thinks woman profound — why? Because he can never fathom her depths. Woman is not even shallow. — The Twilight of the Idols, Maxims and Missiles, 27

All prejudices may be traced back to the intestines. A sedentary life is the real sin against the Holy Ghost.<sup>1</sup>

Ecce Homo

One must separate from anything that forces one to repeat No again and again.

FERDINAND FOCH

[1852-1929]

A guest at a dinner given in honor of Marshal Foch in Denver, Colorado, said that there was nothing but wind in French politeness. Marshal Foch retorted: "Neither is there anything but wind in a pneumatic tire, yet it eases wonderfully the jolts along life's highway."

[1857- ]

It will be lonely to be dead, but it cannot be much more lonely than to be alive.

The Story of San Michele: Instead of a Preface [1929]

REMY DE GOURMONT

[1858-1915]

Aesthetic emotion puts man in a state favorable to the reception of erotic emotion. Art is the accomplice of love. Take love away and there is no longer art.

Decadence<sup>1</sup>

I do not believe it useful to generalize opinions, to teach admirations. It is for each man to procure himself the emotion he needs, and the morality which suits him.

Ibid.

It is because peoples do not know each other that they hate each other so little.

Ibid.

There are too few obscure writers in French. We accustom ourselves like cowards to love only writing that is easy and that will soon be elementary.

Ibid.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE

[1861-1941]

Peace, my heart, let the time for parting be sweet.

Let it not be a death but completeness.
Let love melt into memory and pain into songs.

Peace

<sup>1</sup> Translated by W. A. BRADLEY.

When one knows thee, then alien there is none, then no door is shut. Oh, grant me my prayer that I may never lose the touch of the one in the play of the many.

Gitanjali

Things that I longed for in vain and things that I got — let them pass. Let me but truly possess the things I spurned and overlooked.

Ibid.

Come out of thyself,
Stand in the open;
Within thy heart wilt thou hear
The response of all the world.

Sheaves. The Invitation

When I bring you coloured toys, my child, I understand why there is such a play of colours on clouds, on water,

The future is a world limited by ourselves; in it we discover only what concerns us and, sometimes, by chance, what interests those whom we love the most.

Joyzelle. Act I

Men's weaknesses are often necessary to the purposes of life.

Ibid. Act II

All our knowledge merely helps us to die a more painful death than the animals that know nothing. A day will come when science will turn upon its error and no longer hesitate to shorten our woes. A day will come when it will dare and act with certainty; when life, grown wiser, will depart silently at its hour, knowing that it has reached its term.

Our Eternity

I have never for one instant seen clearly within myself; how then would you have me judge the deeds of others? <sup>1</sup>

*Pelleas and Melisande.
Act I, Sc. 3*

Activity and duty are not to be found by the roadside. One must await them

BENEDETTO CROCE

[1866— ]

What constitutes history may be thus described: It is the act of comprehending and understanding induced by the requirements of practical life. . . . Every serious history, and every serious philosophy, ought to be a history and a philosophy "for the occasion," as Goethe said of genuine poetry, though the occasion of poetry is in the passions, that of history in the conduct of life and in morality.

What would you have me do?

Seek for the patronage of some great man,

And like a creeping vine on a tall tree
Crawl upward, where I cannot stand alone?

No, thank you.

Ibid.

There comes one moment, once — and God help those

Who pass that moment by! — when Beauty stands

Looking into the soul with grave, sweet eyes

That sicken at pretty words.

Ibid. Act III

And what is a kiss, when all is done?

A promise given under seal — a vow

Taken before the shrine of memory —

A signature acknowledged — a rosy dot

Over the i of Loving.

[1871-1922]

(From À la Recherche du temps perdu, translated<sup>1</sup> as Remembrance of Things Past, Random House edition)

In his younger days a man dreams of possessing the heart of the woman whom he loves; later, the feeling that he possesses the heart of a woman may be enough to make him fall in love with her.

Swann's Way. Page 253

What artists call posterity is the posterity of the work of art.

Within a Budding Grove. Part I,
Page 147

The time which we have at our disposal every day is elastic; the passions that we feel expand it, those that we inspire contract it; and habit fills up what remains.

Ibid. Page 264

Untruthfulness and dishonesty were with me, as with most people, called into being in so immediate, so contingent a fashion, and in self-defence, by some particular interest, that my mind, fixed on some lofty ideal, allowed my character, in the darkness below, to set about those urgent, sordid tasks, and did not look down to observe them.

The Guermantes Way. Part I,
Page 82

Like everybody who is not in love, he imagined that one chose the person whom one loved after endless deliberations and on the strength of various qualities and advantages.

Cities of the Plain. Part I,

We passionately long that there may be another life in which we shall be similar to what we are here below. But we do not pause to reflect that, even without waiting for that other life, in this life, after a few years we are unfaithful to what we have been, to what we wished to remain immortally.

Cities of the Plain. Part II,
Page 8

It is often simply from want of the creative spirit that we do not go to the full extent of suffering. And the most terrible reality brings us, with our suffering, the joy of a great discovery, because it merely gives a new and clear form to what we have long been ruminating without suspecting it.

Ibid. Page 363

The almost sacred character of all flesh upon which the sufferings that we have endured on its account have come in time to confer a sort of spiritual grace.

The Captive. Page 2

I thought how markedly . . . these works [Richard Wagner's music dramas] participate in that quality of being — albeit marvellously — always incomplete, which is the peculiarity of all the great works of the nineteenth century, with which the greatest writers of that century have stamped their books, but, watching themselves at work as though they were at once author and critic, have derived from this self-contemplation a novel beauty, exterior and superior to the work itself, imposing upon it retrospectively a unity, a greatness which it does not possess.

Ibid. Page 211

The bonds that unite another person to ourself exist only in our mind. Memory as it grows fainter relaxes them, and notwithstanding the illusion by which we would fain be cheated and with which, out of love, friendship, politeness, deference, duty, we cheat other people, we exist alone. Man is the creature that cannot emerge from himself; that knows his fellows only in himself; when he asserts the contrary, he is lying.

The Sweet Cheat Gone. Page 47

We believe that according to our desire we are able to change the things round about us, we believe this because otherwise we can see no favourable solution. We forget the solution that generally comes to pass and is also favourable: we do not succeed in changing things according to our desire, but gradually our desire changes. The situation that we hoped to change because it was intolerable becomes unimportant. We have not managed to surmount the obstacle, as we were absolutely determined to do, but life has taken us round it, led us past it, and then if we turn round to gaze at the remote past, we can barely catch sight of it, so imperceptible has it become.

The Sweet Cheat Gone. Page 48

There is not a woman in the world the possession of whom is as precious as that of the truths which she reveals to us by causing us to suffer.

Ibid. Page 111

We are healed of a suffering only by experiencing it to the full.

Ibid. Page 165

Happiness is beneficial for the body but it is grief that develops the powers of the mind.

The Past Recaptured. Page 237

As for happiness, it has hardly more than one useful quality, namely to make unhappiness possible. In our happiness, we should form very sweet bonds, full of confidence and attachment, in order that the sundering of them may cause us that priceless rending of the heart which is called unhappiness.

I consider the foundation or the destruction of a religion essentially more important than the foundation or destruction of a State, let alone a party.

Ibid. Page 148

Political parties have nothing to do with religious problems, as long as these are not hostile to the nation and do not undermine the ethics and morality of their own race.

Ibid. Page 150

The efficiency of the truly national leader consists primarily in preventing the division of the attention of a people, and always in concentrating it on a single enemy.

Ibid. Page 152

Mankind has grown strong in eternal struggles and it will only perish through eternal peace.

Ibid. Chap. 4. Page 175

The greater the amount of room a people has at its disposal, the greater is also its natural protection; because military victories over nations crowded in small territories have always been reached more quickly and more easily.

If this earth really has room enough for all to live in, then one should give us the space that we need for living.

All propaganda has to be popular and has to adapt its spiritual level to the perception of the least intelligent of those towards whom it intends to direct itself.

Ibid. Chap. 6. Page 232

As soon as by one's own propaganda even a glimpse of right on the other side is admitted, the cause for doubting one's own right is laid.

Ibid. Page 237

All advertising, whether it lies in the field of business or of politics, will carry success by continuity and regular uniformity of application.

Ibid. Page 240

What we have to fight for is the security of the existence and the increase of our race and our people, the nourishment of its children and the preservation of the purity of the blood, the freedom and independence of the fatherland in order to enable our people to mature for the fulfillment of the mission which the Creator of the universe has allotted also to them.

Ibid. Chap. 8. Page 288

In the size of the lie there is always contained a certain factor of credibility, since the great masses of the people . . . will more easily fall victims to a great lie than to a small one.

Ibid. Chap. 10. Page 313

If an idea is right in itself, and if thus armed it embarks on the struggle in this world, it is invincible and every persecution will lead to its inner strengthening.

Many will be far more ready to take in a pictorial presentation than to read a lengthy piece of writing. The picture in a shorter time, I would almost say at one blow, furnishes man with an enlightenment which he receives from literature only after tedious reading.<sup>1</sup>

In the morning and even during the day men's will power revolts with highest energy against an attempt at being forced under another's will and another's opinion. In the evening, however, they succumb more easily to the dominating force of a stronger will.

Ibid. Page 710

As National Socialists we see our program in our flag. In the red we see the social idea of the movement, in the white the national idea, in the swastika<sup>2</sup> the mission of the fight for the victory of Aryan man, and at the same time also the victory of the idea of creative work which in itself is and will always be anti-Semitic.

Ibid. Chap. 7. Page 737

Germany will be either a world power or will not be at all. . . . We terminate the endless German drive to the south and west of Europe, and direct our gaze towards the lands in the east.

France has lost a battle. But France has not lost the war.

Broadcast from London to the French people after the fall of France, June 18, 1940

There is no longer on the soil of France herself any independent Government capable of upholding the interests of France and of the French overseas. Consequently, and owing to force majeure, a French National Committee will be formed in agreement with the British Government, representing the interests of the country and the people and resolved to maintain the independence of France; to honor the alliances to which she is committed; and to contribute to the war efforts of the Allies until final victory.

Radio address, June 23, 1940

For a nation which fights bound hand and foot against a fully-armed oppressor, discipline in battle imposes several conditions. . . . France will fight this battle with passion, but she will fight it with discipline.

Broadcast to France [June 6, 1944]

In the hearts of all the peoples who have united to assure the triumph of right and liberty there is a tremendous aspiration toward a better future. . . . ## THOMAS RUSSELL

The great Jehovah speaks to us
In Genesis and Exodus;
Leviticus and Numbers see,
Followed by Deuteronomy.
Joshua and Judges sway the land,
Ruth glean a sheaf with trembling hand,
Samuel and numerous Kings appear,
Whose Chronicles we wondering hear;
Ezra and Nehemiah now
Esther, the beauteous mourner, show;
Job speaks in sighs, David in Psalms,
The Proverbs teach to scatter alms.
Ecclesiastes then comes on
And the sweet Song of Solomon.
Isaiah, Jeremiah then.
With Lamentations takes his pen.
Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's lyres Swell Joel, Amos, Obadiah's.
Next Jonah, Micah. Nahum come,
And lofty Habakkuk finds room.
While Zephaniah, Haggai call,
Rapt Zechariah builds his wall,
And Malachi with garments rent,
Concludes the ancient Testament.

Old Testament. (American Tract Society, 1852)

Matthew and Mark, and Luke and John,
The Holy Gospels wrote,
Describing how the Saviour died —
His life — and all He taught;
Acts prove how God the Apostles owned
With signs in every place;
St. Paul, in Romans, teaches us
How man is saved by grace;
The Apostle, in Corinthians,
Instructs, exhorts, reproves;
Galatians shows that faith in Christ

Alone the Father loves.
Ephesians and Philippians tell
What Christians ought to be;
Colossians bids us live to God
And for eternity.
In Thessalonians we are taught
The Lord will come from Heaven;
In Timothy and Titus
A bishop's rule is given.
Philemon marks a Christian's love,
Which only Christians know;
Hebrews reveals the Gospel
Prefigured by the law;
James teaches without holiness
Faith is but vain and dead;
St. Peter points the narrow way
In which the saints are led;
John, in his three Epistles,
On love delights to dwell;
St. Jude gives awful warning
Of judgment, wrath, and hell;
The Revelation prophesies
Of that tremendous day
When Christ, and Christ alone, shall be
The trembling sinner's stay.

New Testament. (American Tract Society, 1852)

These are the twelve Apostles' names:
Peter and Andrew, John and James,

Then James the Less and Jude were called.
too,
Philip, and also Bartholomew,
Matthew, and Thomas who doubted His word,
Simon, and Judas who sold his Lord.

Genesis. I, 3

It is not good that the man should be alone.

Ibid. II, 18

Bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh.

Ibid. 23

They sewed fig-leaves together, and made themselves aprons.

Ibid. III, 7

In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.

Ibid. 19

For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

Ibid.

The mother of all living.

Ibid. 20

Am I my brother's keeper?

Ibid. IV, 9

My punishment is greater than I can bear.

Ibid. 13

And the Lord set a mark upon Cain.

Ibid. 15

Jubal: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ.

Ibid. 21

And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred and sixty and nine years.

Ibid. V, 27

There were giants in the earth in those days.

Ibid. VI, 4

<sup>1</sup> Among all our joys, there was no one that more filled our hearts, than the blessed continuance of the preaching of God's sacred Word among us; which is that inestimable treasure, which excelleth all the riches of the earth; because the fruit thereof extendeth itself, not only to the time spent in this transitory world, but directeth and disposeth men unto that eternal happiness which is above in heaven. — THE TRANSLATORS

And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

Genesis. VII, 12

The dove found no rest for the sole of her foot.

Ibid. VIII, 9

In her mouth was an olive leaf.

Ibid. 11

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease.

Ibid. 22

Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed.

Ibid. IX, 6

I do set my bow in the cloud.

Ibid. 13

Nimrod the mighty hunter.

Ibid. X, 9

Babel; because the Lord did there confound the language of all the earth.

Ibid. XI, 9

Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee.

Ibid. XIII, 8

In a good old age.

Ibid. XV, 15

His [Ishmael's] hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him.

Ibid. XVI, 12

Old and well stricken in age.

Ibid. XVIII, 11

His [Lot's] wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. XIX, 26

The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

Ibid. XXVII, 22

<sup>1</sup> Of all Metamorphoses or transmigrations, I believe only one, that is of Lot's wife. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Religio Medici (Everyman ed.), P. 42

He [Jacob] dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of the Lord ascending and descending it.

Genesis. XXXVIII, 12

Jacob served seven years for Rachel.

Ibid. XXIX, 20

Mizpah . . . The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

Ibid. XXXI, 49

I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

Ibid. XXXII, 26

They stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours.

Ibid. XXXVII, 23

He left his garment in her hand, and fled.

Ibid. XXXIX, 12

There come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt: And there shall arise after them seven years of famine.

Ibid. XLI, 29, 30

Bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

Ibid. XLII, 38, and XLIV, 29

His life is bound up in the lad's life.

Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel.

Ibid. XLIX, 4

I have been a stranger in a strange land.

Exodus. II, 22

Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

Ibid. III, 5

A land flowing with milk and honey.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 8, and XXXIII, 3

I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue.

Ibid. IV, 10

Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick.

Ibid. V, 7

Darkness which may be felt.

Ibid. X, 21

This day [passover] shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord throughout your generations.

Exodus. XII, 14

There was not a house where there was not one dead.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 30

The Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire.

Ibid. XIII, 21

They could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter.

I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. XXIII, 20

He wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.

Ibid. XXXIV, 28

The swine . . . is unclean to you. Of their flesh shall ye not eat.

Leviticus. XI, 7, 8

<sup>1</sup> See John Hay, page 639.

<sup>2</sup> Also in Apocrypha, Ecclesiasticus, III, 8.

Have no other gods but me;
Unto no image bow the knee;
Take not the name of God in vain;
Do not the Sabbath day profane;
Honour thy father and thy mother too;
And see that thou no murder do;
From vile adultery keep thou clean;
And steal not, though thy state be mean;
Bear not false witness — shun that blot;
What is thy neighbour's covet not.

The Decalogue. Found in Parish Register, Lancaster, Nottinghamshire, England, 1689.

<sup>4</sup> I could easily believe that not only whole countries, but particular persons, have their Tutelary and Guardian Angels. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Religio Medici (Everyman ed.), P. 36

Love thy neighbour as thyself.

Leviticus. XIX, 18

The Lord bless thee, and keep thee:
The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee,<sup>1</sup> and give thee peace.

Numbers. VI, 24, 25, 26

The Lord opened the mouth of the ass, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

Ibid. XXII, 28

Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!

Ibid. XXIII, 10

How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel!

Ibid. XXIV, 5

Man doth not live by bread only.<sup>2</sup>

Deuteronomy. VIII, 3

The wife of thy bosom.

Ibid. XIII, 6

The poor shall never cease out of the land.

Ibid. XV, 11

In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! <sup>3</sup>

Ibid. XXVIII, 67

Be strong and of a good courage.<sup>4</sup>

I pray thee, wherein thy great strength lieth.

Ibid. XVI, 6

The Philistines be upon thee, Sam-
son.

Ibid. 9

So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life.

Ibid. 30

From Dan even to Beer-sheba.

Ibid. XX, 1

The people arose as one man.

Ibid. 8

Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.

My tongue is the pen of a ready writer.

Ibid. XLV, 1

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

Ibid. XLVI, 1

Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, . . . the city of the great King.

Ibid. XLVIII, 2

Man being in honour abideth not; he is like the beasts that perish.

Ibid. XLIX, 12, 20

The cattle upon a thousand hills.

Ibid. L, 10

Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Ibid. LI, 7

Create in me a clean heart, O God;
and renew a right spirit within me.

Ibid. 10

A broken and a contrite heart.

Psalms. LI, 17

Oh that I had wings like a dove!

Ibid. LV, 6

But it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 13

We took sweet counsel together.

Ibid. 14

The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. 21

They are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear;
which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming never so wisely.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. LVIII, 4, 5

Vain is the help of man.

Ibid. LX, 11; CVIII, 12

Lead me to the rock that is higher than I.

Ibid. LXI, 2

Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be laid in the balance,
they are altogether lighter than vanity.

Ibid. LXII, 9

Thou renderest to every man according to his work.

Ibid. 12

Thou crownest the year with thy goodness.

Ibid. LXV, 11

We went through fire and through water.

Mine own familiar friend. — Psalms. XLI, 9

<sup>2</sup> The words of his mouth were softer than butter, having war in his heart. — Book of Common Prayer

<sup>3</sup> Like the deaf adder, that stoppeth her ears; which refuseth to hear the voice of the charmer, charm he never so wisely. — Ibid.

<sup>1</sup> Flourishing. — Book of Common Prayer

As a dream when one awaketh.

Psalms. LXXIII, 20

Promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south.

Ibid. LXXV, 6

He putteth down one and setteth up another.

Ibid. 7

They go from strength to strength.

Ibid. LXXXIV, 7

A day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

Ibid. 10

Mercy and truth are met together: righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

Ibid. LXXXV, 10

A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night.

Ibid. XC, 4

We spend our years as a tale that is told.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 9

The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. 10

So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Ibid. 12

Establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.

Ibid. 17

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.

Ibid. XCI, 2

<sup>1</sup> We bring our years to an end, as it were a tale that is told.—Book of Common Prayer

<sup>2</sup> The days of our age are threescore and ten; and though men be so strong that they come to fourscore years, yet is their strength then but labour and sorrow; so soon passeth it away, and we are gone.—Ibid.

Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday.

Psalms. XCI, 6

He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.

Ibid. 11

The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.

Ibid. XCII, 12

The noise of many waters.

Ibid. XCIII, 4

The Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice.

Ibid. XCVII, 1

As for man, his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.

Ibid. CIII, 15

The wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. 16

Wine that maketh glad the heart of man.

Ibid. CIV, 15

Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labour until the evening.

Ibid. 23

They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters.

Ibid. CVII, 23

At their wits' end.

Ibid. 27

Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth.

Ibid. CX, 3

From the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same.

Ibid. CXIII, 3

I said in my haste, All men are liars.

Ibid. CXVI, 11

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

Ibid. 15

<sup>1</sup> Gone with the Wind, novel by MARGARET MITCHELL [1936]. The title is from Non Sum Qualis Eram ("Cynara") by ERNEST DOWSON:—

I have forgot much, Cynara! gone with the wind, Flung roses, roses riotously with the throng.

The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner.<sup>1</sup>

Psalms. CXXVIII, 22

This is the day which the Lord hath made.

Ibid. 24

I have more understanding than all my teachers: for thy testimonies are my meditations.

Ibid. CXIX, 99

A lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

Ibid. 105

The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.

Ibid. CXXI, 6

Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces.

Ibid. CXXII, 7

They that sow in tears shall reap in joy.

Ibid. CXXVI, 5

Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it.

Ibid. CXXVII, 1

He giveth his beloved sleep.<sup>2</sup>

Ibid. 2

Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them.

Ibid. 5

Thy children like olive plants<sup>3</sup> round about thy table.

Ibid. CXXVIII, 3

I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids.<sup>4</sup>

Ibid. CXXXII, 4

Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Ibid. CXXXIII, 1

By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion.<sup>5</sup>

If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning.

Ibid. 5

If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea.

Ibid. CXXXIX, 9

I am fearfully and wonderfully made.

Ibid. 14

That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones.

Ibid. CXLIV, 12

Put not your trust in princes.

Ibid. CXLVI, 3

My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not.

Proverbs. I, 10

Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets.

Ibid. 20

Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches and honour.

Ibid. III, 16

Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

Ibid. 17

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding.

Ibid. IV, 7

The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Ibid. 18

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.

Ibid. 23

Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise.

Ibid. VI, 6

Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep.

Ibid. 10; XXIV, 33

Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?

THE KORAN

Translated [1734] by GEORGE SALE [1697-1736]

Turn, therefore, thy face towards the holy temple of Mecca; and wherever ye be, turn your faces towards that place.

Chap. 2

Wherever ye be, God will bring you all back at the resurrection.

Ibid.

As for him who voluntarily perform-eth a good work, verily God is grateful and knowing.

Ibid.

Your God is one God; there is no
God but He, the most merciful.

Ibid.

O true believers, take your necessary precautions against your enemies, and either go forth to war in separate parties, or go forth all together in a body.

Chap. 4

Fight for the religion of God.

Ibid.

O men, respect women who have borne you.

Ibid.

Wheresoever ye be, death will overtake you, although ye be in lofty towers.

Ibid.

Whosoever flieth from his country for the sake of God's true religion, shall find in the earth many forced to do the same, and plenty of provisions.

Ibid.

God loveth not the speaking ill of any one in public.

Chap. 4

Let not thy hand be tied up to thy neck; neither open it with an unbounded expansion, lest thou become worthy of reprehension, and be reduced to poverty.

Chap. 17

Of his mercy he hath made for you the night and the day, that ye may rest in the one, and may seek to obtain provision for yourself of his abundance, by your industry, in the other.

Chap. 28

If God should punish men according to what they deserve, he would not leave on the back of the earth so much as a beast.

Chap. 35

God obligeth no man to more than he hath given him ability to perform.

Chap. 65

Woe be unto those who pray, and who are negligent at their prayer: who play the hypocrites, and deny necessities to the needy.

Chap. 107

O unbelievers, I will not worship that which ye worship; nor will ye worship that which I worship. . . . Ye have your religion, and I my religion.

Chap. 109

BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER <sup>1</sup>

We have left undone those things which we ought to have done; and we have done those things which we ought not to have done.

Morning Prayer

The noble army of Martyrs.

Ibid. Te Deum

Make them to be numbered <sup>2</sup> with thy Saints, in glory everlasting.

Ibid.

Whose service is perfect freedom.

Ibid. A Collect for Peace

<sup>2</sup> In the Latin, this word is munerari (rewarded), and was mistaken, perhaps, by an early copyist. for numerari (numbered)

Afflicted, or distressed, in mind, body, or estate.

Morning Prayer. A Prayer for All Conditions of Men

Grant us grace fearlessly to contend against evil, and to make no peace with oppression; and, that we may reverently use our freedom, help us to employ it in the maintenance of justice among men and nations.

Prayers and Thanksgivings.

A Prayer for Social Justice

Deliver us, we beseech thee, in our several callings, from the service of mammon, that we may do the work which thou givest us to do, in truth, in beauty, and in righteousness, with singleness of heart as thy servants, and to the benefit of our fellow men.

Ibid. A Prayer for Every Man in His Work

From envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness.

The Litany

The world, the flesh, and the devil.

Ibid.

Give to all nations unity, peace, and concord.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

The kindly fruits of the earth.

Ibid.

Miserable sinners.<sup>2</sup>

Holy Communion. Exhortation

Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest.

Collect for the Second Sunday in Advent

Renounce the devil and all his works.

Holy Baptism. Of Children

The pomps and vanity of this wicked world.

Offices of Instruction (Catechism)

<sup>1</sup> The desire for unity, the wish for peace, the longing for concord, deeply implanted in the human heart, have stirred the most powerful emotions of the race, and have been responsible for some of its noblest actions.—SIR WILLIAM OSLER: Aequanimitas (2d ed.), XXI, Unity, Peace and Concord

<sup>2</sup> The invocation, "Have mercy upon us miserable sinners," was included in the Litany prior to the Revision of 1928. "Miserable offenders" appears in Morning Prayer, A General Confession.

To keep my hands from picking and stealing.

Offices of Instruction (Catechism)

To do my duty in that state of life unto which it shall please God to call me.

Ibid.

An outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid.

Let him now speak, or else hereafter for ever hold his peace.

Solemnization of Matrimony

To have and to hold from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death us do part.

Ibid.

With this Ring I thee wed.

Ibid.

In the midst of life we are in death.<sup>2</sup>

Burial of the Dead. At the Grave

Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust; in sure and certain hope of the Resurrection unto eternal life.

Ibid.

Show thy servant the light of thy countenance.

The Psalter. Psalms, XXXI, 18

But it was even thou, my companion, my guide, and mine own<sup>3</sup> familiar friend.

Ibid. LV, 14

God that maketh men to be of one mind in an house.

Ibid. LXVIII, 6

<sup>2</sup> This is derived from a Latin antiphon, said to have been composed by Notker, a monk of St. Gall, in 911, while watching some workmen building a bridge at Martinsbrücke, in peril of their lives. It forms the groundwork of Luther's antiphon De Morte.

<sup>3</sup> Through a typographical error, the word "own" was changed to "old" in the first printing of the Revision of 1928.

The iron entered into his soul.

The Psalter. Psalms, CV, 18

God, in whom we live and move and have our being.

Family Prayer. Morning

O Lord, support us all the day long, until the shadows lengthen and the evening comes, and the busy world is hushed, and the fever of life is over, and our work is done. Then in thy mercy grant us a safe lodging, and a holy rest, and peace at the last.<sup>1</sup>

Ibid. At Night

O God of peace, who hast taught us that in returning and rest we shall be saved, in quietness and in confidence shall be our strength; By the might of thy Spirit lift us, we pray thee, to thy presence, where we may be still and know that thou art God.

Ibid. For Quiet Confidence<sup>2</sup>

O Heavenly Father, who hast filled the world with beauty; open, we beseech thee, our eyes to behold thy gracious hand in all thy works; that rejoicing in thy whole creation, we may learn to serve thee with gladness.<sup>3</sup>

Ibid. For Joy in God's Creation<sup>4</sup>

BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER, ENGLISH

Grant that the old Adam in these persons may be so buried, that the new man may be raised up in them.

Holy Baptism. Of Those of Riper Years

With all my worldly goods I thee endow.

that mankind has done, 381 that once was good, 935 that once was I, 981 that to me love, thou wast, 460 that was beautiful and just, 771 that was theirs dies, 1083 that we cherished most dear, 666 that we know of April, 941 that we see or seem, 459
that's good and all that's fair, 146 that's made, annihilating, 169 the bells of heaven, 634
the brothers too, 55
the daughters of my father's house, 55
the dogs would bark, 882
the good I know, 982
the news that's fit to print, 1049

the world's a stage, 49
there is, that's, 888
these things are trifles, 524 things, a time for, 1156

All things all day long, on, 470 things are fleeting, 772 things are pure unto the pure, 1248 things are the same, 1127 things both great and small, 315 things can be borne, 596 things change, 209
 things come alike, 1235 things come round, 421 things, equal to, 252 things fair, dwells with, 581 things holy profane clean, 132 things in common among friends, 1130 things meet and mingle, 368 things return to dust, 1186 things show it, 206 things to all men, 1246 things work and move, 502 things work together, 1245 this earthy grossness quit, 161 this was in the olden time, 459 thou art, 'tis, 217 thoughts all passions, 316 thoughts and things look older, 405 times are one, 836 to heaven, 275 was for best, 486
 was not lost, 1176
 we ask is to be let alone, 539
 we had of joy, 935
 we have and are, for, 787
 we know or dream or fear, 363
 we love foregatherers, where, 883 who come into this world, 668 who love, poets are, 507
